"Juno and the Paycock" is a fine piece of work. It is a tragedy of the people, utterly sincere and from the heart, without a trace of maudlin sentiment and so strong and virile, but coloured and illuminated by a constant background of real comedy. More than that, it is the cry of a people, the bitter cry of an unhappy people struggling through chaos to become a nation. Not only is the play good as a play, but there is magic in it. For throughout the warp of his tragedy and the weft of his comedy the author has woven continuously a thread which one feels must be the spirit of Ireland; the faith, simplicity, courage and downright nobility, coupled with the peculiar weakness of the Irish, who, though they have led other nations to splendour, and have produced much of the genius of the world have yet been unable for centuries to mould a nation for themselves. This play may not have the poetic excellence to be what is called a masterpiece, to be immortal, yet we feel that the author has written it with his own heart's blood, and it is very, very good. It was well played, moreover, Ivor Lewis as Captain Boyle, Agnes Muldrew as Juno Boyle and Geoffrey Hutton as "Joker" played large difficult roles really to perfection. We should like to comment especially on Agnes Muldrew's accent. Margaret Nilson, as Mary, and Eric Stangroom as Johnny, were also very good in somewhat smaller parts, and Ernest Paul as Jerry Devine lacked only accent for an excellent portrayal. Character parts were also well handled and the whole play showed capable direction. The play is well designed for amateur acting, for it is simply constructed, well hung together, and the one set required is not difficult. It is a play which relies for its success rather on scenic effect nor poetry of lines, but on good comedy of situations and characters, the honest tragedy of lower class realism and sincerity of picturization. It also requires good acting, and this we have.

THE UPTOWN: WINGS

"Wings" is an excellent tragedy, dealing with the late butchery in Europe. Not even Clara Bow could spoil this one, though she did manage one exhibition of thigh.

ROYAL ALEXANDRA: SHAW PLAYS

Whatever else one may think of it, "John Bull's Other Island" is provocative, even without the preface. To use the author's expression, it is "dated" somewhat but is still good theatre and the presentation of it by Maurice Colbourne, Barry Jones and the others begins what promises to be an excellent run of Shaw plays.

VICTORIA: PARIS BOUND

This is a very pleasing comedy. Miss Taliaferro is her usual charming self, high praise indeed. The rest of the cast is rather good, too. A slight sadness in the plot is very skillfully prevented from dominating by the comic touches.

Sophisticated and funny. The story of a very modern young woman whose unique marriage was threatened for a time when love—"the monkey-wrench" which someone always throws in to clog the machinery of marital happiness—entered in. A good evening's entertainment.

SHEA'S: VAUDEVILLE

Freda and Palace have some good guitar work and fair singing in their act at Shea's. Buster Shaver's Tiny Town Revue has some clever little singers and dancers. The other acts are fair. The cadet school picture has quite a usual story.

Now that tranquility once more reigns upon the banks of the Taddle, and "The Varsity" appears upon the common-room table as usual, we hand over the agis to contributors. We suggest that Anonymous, should he see fit to honour us in future with his interesting contributions, make some effort to write less like the artists who etch a prayer upon the head of a pin. As for Mrs. Robinson's Boy, he has been with us before. We have taken in pursuance of an understanding reached with the Joint Executive, the liberty of changing one word in his contribution.

The emendation "help" is much less revolting than the original, but equally euphonic. We trust that Mrs. Robinson's Boy will take our correction in the spirit in which it was intended; namely, the interest of the higher and rarer atmosphere which, for the Cat,

SENIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS FINALS AT HART HOUSE TO-NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Percy Williams more than lived up to expectations when he won the 40-yard dash at the Boston meet on Saturday night. In spite of the fact that this was his first indoor meet and he was suffering from a cold, Percy showed the way to some of the fastest sprinters across the line. Williams is scheduled to appear in Toronto here towards the end of the month.

The Senior Assault got under way last night. Ten wrestling bouts were run off and some real battles resulted. Two of the West Point men went down to defeat. To-night the boxing bouts will provide some interesting fare. Last night McLennan defeated Wall in a good bout and to-night the Jackson-Longert hook-up looks like it will keep the fans on edge. Tommy "Knock-out" Keenan is drawn against Tyson in the light-heavy class and this scrap should provide plenty of slugging.

To-morrow night Varsity seniors will play St. Michael's at the Arena. The Blue and White are stepping along nicely in front place but the "double blue" are fighting hard for a play-off berth so a good game should take place. The Irish have won two straight from the Tricolour of Queen's and a win to-morrow night would tie them with Preston in second place.

men reduced to such poverty that they are obliged to accept so-called charity in the form of a free bowl of soup. In the second place, I should like to inform Mr. Mallon that the Fabian Society was not formed for the purpose of "intervention" but to study the problems of labour. With Mr. Mallon's cynical statement that university labour leaders usually are pro-labour merely for easy access to political leadership which may be obtained thereby, I heartily disagree. It is such wretched cynicism as this that prevents the improvement of social and political institutions. Indeed, it prevents some from entering politics at all, knowing that their entrance would not be regarded as an altruistic effort, (as in truth, it would be) but as a piece of selfishness and chauvinism.

EMMANUEL BESTS KNOX IN BASKETBALL CONTEST

Even in First Half, But Wins
Score Fast in Last Period

Emmanuel defeated Knox in their Sifton Cup engagement yesterday afternoon by the count of 29-18. The contest was a fast one but was marred by a large number of fouls. The Knox squad was somewhat weakened by the absence of their regular guards and although handicapped made a desperate attempt to break in the winning column.

The first half of the game was a nip and tuck struggle and ended with Emmanuel on the long end of a 15-13 score. In the second half Emmanuel got away to a fast start and chalked up ten points before the Knox men could get under way.

Snell, Thomson, and Harris were the high scorers for Emmanuel while Higgin, Wismer and Loucks, counted all of the loser's points.

The line-up:—
Knox—Forwards, Higgin (9) and Loucks (4); centre, Wyse; guards, Wismer (5) and Davidson; subs, Sayner, Dewar and Graham.

Emmanuel—Forwards, Thomson (9) and Walkinshaw (2); centre, Snell, (12); guards, Beacon and Harris (6); subs, Shepley and Danard.

PLAY TO-MORROW NIGHT

To-morrow night the Blue and White senior sextet will take on the Double Blue of St. Michael's College in a battle for second place and a play-off position from Queen's and Preston. Varsity appear to have first place clinched and another win will perch them securely on top of the ladder.

After losing their first four games, St. Michael's have taken a spurt and have doubled the Tricolour in two successive games. St. Michael's have a nice team and have secured the team play that was lacking in their earlier efforts. The addition of several new players, including Lindsay, the former Queen's player and "Chick" Garvie of Imperial Oil and Samia football fame has done a great deal in bolstering the outfit.

Varsity are at the top of their form and should knock off another win. In their first O.H.A. game of the season the Blue had to go into overtime to defeat St. Michael's. In their next encounter the two teams played scoreless hockey for two periods and then Varsity secured the needed counters in the third while holding their opponents scoreless. To-morrow night's game will be well worth attending and should be a sizzler from start to finish.

SEMI-FINALS EARLIER

An interesting time is promised for ring-side fans when they gather to witness the fencing, wrestling and boxing contests that will be run off in the Big Gym at Hart House to-night.

Of the three boxing matches to be run off to-night the most interesting promises to be the bout between Jackson and Longert, the 160 lb. class men who both represented U. of T. at West Point in the recent assault-at-arms there.

This afternoon the semi-finals in wrestling will be contested at 4 p.m. as follows:—

123 lb.—Barnett (Dents) vs. Holden (Dents)
134 lb.—Rudd (S.P.S.) vs. McKinney (S.P.S.)

The finals in boxing and wrestling will be run off at 8 p.m. as follows:—

Boxing—
145 lb.—Crisp (Meds) vs. McLennan (Meds)
160 lb.—Jackson (U.C.) vs. Longert (U.C.)
175 lb.—Keenan (Graduate Studies) vs. Tyson (S.P.S.)

Wrestling—
123 lb.—Winner (Barnett, Dents vs. Holden) vs. La Pointe (O.A.C.)
134 lb.—Winner (Rudd, S.P.S. vs. McKinney, U.C.) vs. Walker (U.C.)

174 lb.—Tyson (S.P.S.) vs. Hall (O.A.C.)

The magnanimity of the women is commendable in allowing their gentlemen guests to speak. Three took advantage of the privilege and spoke very well on a general standard. Mr. Gelber was pleasing to listen to but dressed a mealy fact in a ball dress of sparkling sequin-like adjectives and veiled it with pretty allusions to the "laurels for debating resting on the heads of the ladies whose brilliant intensity quite surprised him."

The mealy fact being that they had inserted the thin edge of the wedge in being allowed to attend one of the Hart House debates, and that he did not approve of this "shattering of the citadel of undergraduate masculinity."

CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. J. McCarthy, another student interviewed by your paper, stated that University students in Canada are not interested in such projects as are their brethren in England, and that therefore such an organization would be meaningless here. Apparently he does not realize that University students, no matter where, ought to be awakened to existing conditions, and that this is what the Fabian Society is about to attempt to accomplish, and will accomplish, if such as he will be kind enough to step aside and remain, at least, passive.

And then to cap it all, as a suitable climax, Mr. P. Scollard, without, I am sure, using that faculty of rationality that he doubtless possesses, states that he is opposed to labour in all forms; that there is no part in University life for it; that Graduates are expected to aim at higher things than a life of toil, and so why should they identify themselves with labour interests while at University.

Mr. Scollard, I am sure, would make the ideal labourer. He would, it appears, crush the labour organizations, and the labourer, until both disappeared, and then what would poor Mr. Scollard do? My advice to Mr. Scollard is this: Let the workman have his little toys, and humor him in his hallucination that he is not a slave. Fortunately, however, Mr. Scollard is not in a position to be the despot he should like to be, and he can devote himself to the "higher things than a life of toil" forgetting that without the plowshare, the pen could not exist. But I am afraid that it would be worthless to appeal to Mr. Scollard's rationality. His ideas are perverted, but I am sure that if he reads again his interview with "The Varsity," he will see that his logic is so faulty, that, in fact, it does not exist. And perhaps in this manner we may add another convert to the ranks of the Fabians.

I hope, sir, that this letter may change the opinions of the three men "The Varsity" has interviewed. If I accomplish this, I shall have great hopes for the future of the Fabian Society. Yours truly,

U.C. 371

Sabbatarian

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:—In Monday's issue of "Varsity" we read this: "U.C. girls beat Jr. V. 4 to 0 in a hockey game played last night." Now what I want to know is: Is this the result of Modernism, of the New Fabian Society, or the demoralizing influence of "The Varsity"? Oh, for the good old days when Sunday was Sunday, and Monday was Monday, etc!

Imagine the influence this may have on the downtown press.

Yours in horror,

Theory Taught But Not Practised In The Happy Hunting Ground

(A. H. Arrell)

Now there was in the Happy Hunting Ground a lovely antiquated custom which consisted of dividing the Happy Hunting Ground into two parts. The one part being the land of theory where principles were taught at great length, the other part, the land of reality where those principles were not put into practice. And so in the land of theory they were taught:

"He is capable of rectifying his mistakes by discussion and experience. Not by experience alone, there must be discussion to show how experience is to be interpreted. Wrong opinions and practices gradually yield to fact and argument; but facts and arguments to produce any effect on the mind must be brought before it."

"But I must be permitted to observe that it is not the feeling sure of a doctrine (be it what it may) which I call an assumption of infallibility. It is the undertaking to decide that question for others, without allowing them to hear what can be said on the contrary side."

Besides in the present state of the world, it is practically impossible that writings which are read by the instructed can be kept from the uninstructed. If the teachers of mankind are to be cognizant of all they ought to know, everything must be free to be written and published without restraint," J. S. Mill, "Liberty".

But of course it must be understood if this was in the land of theory, such things are applicable in general but they must never apply in any particular case. Free speech is a wonderful institution in theory, but in this case it is monstrous to allow the young things to think for themselves as it might influence others. By this suppression in the land of practice everything was as quiet as a funeral.

Now there was another quaint custom in the Happy Hunting Ground known as self government, they were taught respecting despotism.

"They exercise no will in respect to their collective interests. All is decided for them by a will not their own, which, it is legally a crime for them to disobey. What sort of human beings can be formed under such a regimen? What development can either their thinking or their active faculties attain under it?"

"Nor is it only in their intelligence that they suffer. Their moral capacities are equally stunted. Wherever the sphere of actions of human beings is artificially circumscribed their sentiments are narrowed and dwarfed in the same proportion," J. S. Mill, Representative Government.

This, of course, also was in the land of theory. In the land of practice, all objections must be waved aside when a special case is under consideration and it must be dealt with practically.

Mr. Lismer will meet the Art Group on Tuesday, Feb. 5 at 5 p.m. in the art gallery. There will be a Canadian Exhibition on view. All members are urged to attend.

At a meeting of the Guild on Wednesday, Miss Amy Sternberg will speak on the "Dramatic Art of Dancing". The meeting will be open to all those in the University who are interested.

Many remarkable incidents of the World War have been described by men who took a foremost part in that titanic contest. In point of thrilling interest, however, none has surpassed the story that will be told by Admiral Gordon Campbell, one of the most distinguished officers in the British navy, who will appear in Massey Hall on Tuesday evening, February 5th, 1929.

In a lecture of an extraordinary character, entitled, "How the British Q Boats Fought the German Submarines," he will give a vivid account of the campaign which the British admiralty conducted against the submarine menace by means of decoy ships, or Q boats, as they were termed. This did much toward preventing the wholesale destruction of merchant and passenger vessels belonging to the allied powers. As commander of one of the Q boats, Admiral Campbell repeatedly faced death with his heroic companions on the high seas while fighting German submarines under the most amazing conditions. His experience in an entirely novel mode of warfare will form the leading features of his notable lecture, which will be strikingly illustrated with stereoscopic pictures. In recognition of his brilliant career he was awarded the Victoria Cross and Distinguished Service Order of Britain, while the French Government presented him with the Croix de Guerre and appointed him officer in the Legion of Honor. At the close of the war he was promoted to the rank of Admiral.

Each of the British decoy ships was disguised as a tramp steamer of the usual ill-kept, dirty, uninviting type. Guns were ingeniously concealed beneath hatchway covers or masked by imitation deck houses, which could be thrown down by the jerk of a lever. The members of the crews were all volunteers and comprised commandants, lieutenants and midshipman. While at sea, naval etiquette was suspended. Every man on a decoy ship, including the officers, dressed as tramp seamen in garments obtained from second-hand clothing stores. They slouched about the deck, smoking pipes, or leaned over the rails chatting as tramp sailors do when off duty. These precautions were necessary, as a German submarine officer could make observations from a long distance. It was arranged that when a Q boat was attacked by a submarine most of the crew would take to the boats in great confusion, while others were left behind to work the guns. These "panic parties," as they were termed, were trained to show much clumsiness in abandoning the ship in order to conceal the fact that they were navy men.

When the submarines, believing the ship had been abandoned, rose to the surface and approached at close range, a signal was given on board, and at once the British naval ensign appeared on the masthead. At the same instant the deck houses fell down, the hatchway covers flew back and the guns belched forth volleys of shot and shell.

Sometimes the Germans succeeded in sinking a decoy ship before the battle was over and fatalities among the crews were numerous, but in most cases the survivors escaped in the boats. On one occasion Admiral Campbell's ship fought a submarine while ammunition was exploding, the deck was in flames and the engine room had been flooded. After the victory he and his men were saved by British destroyers just as the vessel disappeared beneath the waves.

In his lecture Admiral Campbell will give a graphic account of his various thrilling experiences in fighting the German submarines, which he shared with one of the finest companies of gallant naval men ever gathered together. As a story of desperate adventures on the high seas in modern times his story has never been surpassed, and it is certain to hold the interest of every audience that hears it.—(Adv.)

CRESTS NOT SOLD WITHOUT BLAZERS RULE EXECUTIVES

Joint Executive Hold Meeting
To Discuss Wearing Of Crests

FINAL SOLVING OF PROBLEM

Committee Appointed Proceeds
To Unravel Difficulties
In The Matter

Blazers and crests were again the subject of discussion at the meeting of the Men's Students' Administrative Council yesterday. This matter first came to under consideration one year ago and a final attempt is now being made to solve the problem. At this meeting a motion was passed which reversed the previous attitude of Council as expressed in a motion instructing its representatives to the Executive to vote in favour of the crests being sold separately from the blazers.

This previous motion was disregarded at the Joint Executive and now the Council have given their representatives the power to see to it that these crests may be sold only with the blazers (or sweaters). The decision was made after an explanation of the details in connection with registration of crests, dress materials and fashion of wearing the same, by Ronald Fredenburg of Victoria College. Those who took part in the debate were Alan Ferry of Emmanuel, Hroth Ziegler of Medicine, H. R. Perkins of Wycliffe, G. M. Gray of Applied Science and Engineering and J. T. Wilson of Trinity College. Explanations were also made by the president, G. A. McGillivray and by the Secretary-Treasurer, A. G. Burns.

Mr. Ferry urged that the former stand of Council in favour of maintaining the opinion that the crests should be sold apart from the blazers. But Mr. Perkins explained that college blazers, as at Wycliffe, generally bore the college crests, so that there would be no room for the other crest and this was also pointed out by Mr. Wilson. The unsuitability of the crest being allowed to be worn against the background of a sweater of any colour was stressed by Mr. Gray. He said that it would be strange to see a crest of the University of Toronto being worn on a red or a yellow sweater or an orange and blue one.

According to a motion moved by the Secretary, Mr. Fredenburg and his associates on the Committee appointed by the Joint Executive may now proceed to unravel the difficulties with the permission to have the crests sold only with the blazers.

DEBATERS FROM TEXAS WILL NOT APPEAR HERE

No Room For Horse Play Here
Decide Executives
In Charge

The Cowboy Debaters will not be entertained by the University of Toronto. This was the decision reached at yesterday's meeting of the Men's Students' Administrative Council in connection with the report of the debates committee which was brought in by Alan Ferry of Emmanuel College. These are apparently a fascinating team of orators from the Western States who perform, not like Demosthenes, with pebbles in their mouths, but chaps on their legs and spurs to boot, plus whips and horses.

But Council remained stoutly hearted and refused funds to entertain the Cowboys. One member from Victoria suggested that the Cowboys should perform in the Hart House. Mr. Ferry: "The Warden would not hear of it."

So there is no place for horses in Toronto debating circles.

LATENESS IS PROPER ON SOME OCCASIONS

Women Like to Be Late When Being Taken Out Says
One Man

MEN ALSO UNPUNCTUAL

Campus opinion varies concerning the punctuality of men versus women and whether it is more proper to be late for social functions than for lectures, seems to be a question troubling many students.

"Men are just as unpunctual as women," stated Miss Gwen McSweeney, 2nd Modern History, "and as to the question of being late for lectures, we poor girls have to make up on our beauty-sleep sometime, and the best time is the morning."

"Women might not be late for lectures, but they certainly like to be late when they're being taken out," was the opinion of S. Hunter, II C & F. If Paul stated that "it isn't considered fashionable to be on time, but it's a good theory to practice."

Two fourth year men picked the poor professors who have to wait every few seconds for late-comers, principally women, and that the doors should certainly be locked on time.

Miss G. Heyd, I Moderns, insisted that the secret of success is punctuality. One professor said that after he nearly breaks his neck every morning trying to get to his nine o'clock lectures, he hated to have people wandering in for about fifteen minutes afterwards.

DANCING FACULTY IS NEW PROPOSAL BEFORE GOVERNORS

Members of Board Have Been Interviewed With View
To Innovation

DISCUSSION NOT SERIOUS

But As Option For Religious Knowledge It Is Not Appropriate

"I could suggest that dancing be made a subject in connection with the History Department," said Miss Sternberg when asked by "The Varsity" what her object was in advocating a dancing department in addition to the one which is already established here under the Physical Training Department. Her subject-to-morrow at the U.C. Players' Guild will be the History of Dancing." The reporter enquired whether she was discussing the subject for art's sake or as a means of increasing her own activities. This Miss Sternberg frankly replied, "Both." She refused to discuss the subject further as it has not yet come up for serious discussion by the University authorities.

Professor Dale, who takes an active interest in the Players' Guild, and through whom Miss Sternberg arranged to speak to-day said he knew nothing about Miss Sternberg's plan. He pointed out that aesthetic dancing appears on the curriculum of a number of American colleges, but said he did not think it an appropriate option for religious knowledge. He thought that she was interested in it from a dramatic point of view rather than as a means of physical culture.

Miss Sternberg has interviewed members of the Board of Governors on the question of introducing this form of dancing at the University of Toronto but it is understood that no serious consideration has been given the subject. It is understood however, that they are not in favour of an extension in this line.

TRINITY COLLEGE SCIENCE MEN MEET

David Guest Addresses The Meeting on Celestial Bodies

VARIOUS THEORIES

"The universe is so large that our whole planetary system may be considered to be at a point," was the starting statement made by David Guest in his address to the Trinity College Science Club last evening. Mr. Guest chose as his subject, "The Evolution of the Universe." He quoted Sir J. H. Jeans, F.R.S. in his book "Eos" or "The Wider Aspects of Cosmogony." The universe is finite although some nebula observed are computed to be one hundred and forty million light years away from the earth. These nebula eventually become stars and these radiate energy to us as does the sun. A theory now held, and which he put forward was that of a "lucid atom"—many times heavier than the heaviest known atom, uranium. These atoms make up the interior of the stars and the sun. By reason of their density, they are able to supply us with energy by their annihilation—giving as a product nothing but energy. The surfaces of the stars and our sun are constituted of "permanent" (Continued on page 4)

GET IN AND TRY IS ADVICE GIVEN TO JOURNALISTS

Miss Lawrence Speaks At Press Club Tea
Yesterday

TALENT NECESSARY

Better Field For Writing In United States Than In Canada

"If your plan is to go into journalistic work, first consider if you are a gambler," advised Miss Margaret Lawrence, while speaking on "Women in Journalism," at Mrs. Kirkwood's tea yesterday. "Not a reckless person," she went on to explain, "but one who is convinced about himself and who will push the thing he wants to do. This applies particularly to women, who are as yet only tolerated in Journalism." The first thing you meet with in all editors is his amusement, and he tries every way to discourage you, for he doesn't consider women's plucky capacity big enough for journalism."

A sense of publicity is the second thing necessary, according to Miss Lawrence. One must become both creator and artist and then sit back and watch oneself doing it. The other requisites of a successful journalist are the talent of writing well and the power of observation. A combination of these is especially rare, since one implies a scientific, the other an artistic mind.

"However," said Miss Lawrence, "many people are writing and making their living at it and the only way to find out if you can is to get in and try."

"You cannot put yourself above your public," continued Miss Lawrence. University students going into press work usually have a sense of superiority which is fatal and takes years to get out of. Publicity is the largest field for women at the moment, and in this the trained mind of the university student is useful.

In answer to one of the questions put to her, Miss Lawrence said: "Undoubtedly there is a better field in the United States; but I don't see why that's any reason for us to go over."

TORONTONIANS HOLD GUM IN DISFAVOUR

Elsewhere Cherished Delicacy
Matter of Indifference
At Toronto

ATHLETES CHIEF DEVOTEES

Unlike the co-eds at Minnesota, the co-eds at Varsity dissipate practically none of their substance in purchasing gum—at least not in Campus Tuck Shops. The Victoria Book Bureau sells chocolate bars and sells them at the rate of ten thousand bars a year but although they are asked for gum it is not kept in stock. Among other things the students ask for cigarettes, pop and aspirin. At the Women's Union candy is sold and only candy is asked for except once or twice a year when some co-ed expresses a desire for gum.

Although gum is for sale at the Hart House Tuck Shop there is not a very great demand for it and there is no increase in the sale over former years. Most of the gum that is sold is to rugby and hockey teams.

"Ted" How, popular student at S.P.S., who was removed to the General Hospital in a critical condition after collapsing from injuries received while boxing in Hart House gym on Friday evening, January 18th, is still in a very serious condition but is expected to recover gradually.

"He is getting along very nicely," stated his nurse when interviewed by "The Varsity" last night, "but it will be a long time before he will be well enough to leave the hospital. He developed fluid on his brain, and is still paralyzed in his right side. We haven't been able to talk with him since he regained consciousness, but he began to speak a little to-day. He is not nearly normal yet, but is coming along as well as could be expected."

COLORED CLEANSER ATTRACTS NOTICE

University College Floors Have Novel Colour Of Sawdust

SUITABLE FOR CHRISTMAS

Considerable curiosity has been expressed by the undergraduates on the appearance this morning of a new color in the cleaning sawdust used on the floors of University College. "Scotty," the caretaker of the college, when interviewed, stated that the "Sweep Clean" was manufactured in red and green, but that he knew of no specific advantage, traffic or otherwise, which instigated the purchase of any particular color by the authorities. It was used, he said, to disinfect the halls as well as to collect the dirt and dust, and that it was more or less ordinary sawdust with an antiseptic odor. His only suggestion was that the red material be used for the Christmas season and on St. Valentine's Day and the green be reserved for exclusive use during the early freshman months and the 17th of March.

The $500 offer made by a prominent safety razor manufacturer has failed to stop the beard-growing contest at the University of Illinois. The contest which has been entered by 3,000 students is to continue for two weeks. At the end of this time those students having the finest beards will receive campus recognition.

HOME OF LOST CAUSES

Oxford Fosters Liberalism By Tradition Under Liberal
Heads of Colleges

"I suppose the reason that Oxford is said to be losing its historic glamour is because it is waking up at last," said Mr. Louis Mackay, of the department of Classics, University College, when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding the article appearing in yesterday's issue. In this article it was stated that Oxford University was losing its old world charm and academic colour.

"With regard to the suggestion that Oxford students are devotees of the red flag, Oxford, as you know has been called the home of lost causes. There is a strong labour movement there amongst the young men, but I do not believe that anyone seriously regards the young man from Oxford as a Red, except perhaps Anglo-Indian Colonels."

Mr. Mackay went on to state that the heads of Oxford had been Liberals for a long time and that many of the more brilliant younger speakers were Liberals also.

"But I do not believe that there is a Red movement of any extent," he concluded.

Of the older Oxford men at this University, few would venture an opinion.

Mr. E. J. Urwick, head of the Department of Economics, and a graduate of Oxford, stated that he had been away from that university so long that he knew little of its present undergraduate life.

"In my days there was, however, a strong labour movement," he said.

Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, Warden of Hart House, also an Oxford graduate, likewise declined to state any opinion on the subject.

College of Dentistry Gives Unanimous Approval To "Varsity" Editorial Policy

Pressing inquiries regarding the moral tone of "The Varsity", a reporter obtained the following opinions from Dental students:

V. M. Stockwell, I Dents: "I think that 'The Varsity' gives a true idea of student opinion. I enjoy it very much."

H. 2nd year: "I approve very highly of 'The Varsity', and can see nothing immoral in the editorials or other articles."

J. B. Milne, II: "In my opinion there is nothing objectionable in the editorial policy of 'The Varsity'."

Bill Dewar I: "I do not think that there is anything objectionable in the editorial policy of 'The Varsity'."

J. Coupland IV: "I see nothing wrong with the moral tone of 'The Varsity'."

A. VanLoon: "I am a student of Dentistry and I have no objections to the moral tone of 'The Varsity'."

R. R. Butler, V: "I have never heard anyone in the Faculty of Dentistry seriously object to the moral tone of 'The Varsity'."

C. M. Finlay, V: "I think that 'The Varsity' presents the correct attitude of the student body in general."

G. Hardman, IV: "Barring some editorials, I think that 'The Varsity' policy is all right."

J. M. Dore, V: "The editorials of 'The Varsity' are quite moral in tone in my opinion."

J. E. O'Brien, V: "Why should the Dental students object to the moral tone of 'The Varsity'?"

WHERE WE STAND

The other day we had a cozy little chat with the members of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils and explanations were made by both sides.

The editor repeated to the members of the Executive assurance given in this column yesterday that the paper henceforth would be free from anything that would offend the authorities and readers on the point of morality.

The President of the Executive explained the course of the recent dispute and stated that it was his duty to the authorities and the students to see to it that no further cause for dispute would remain on the point of morality.

The President did not explain why, if the matter was one for the Joint Executive to settle on behalf of the students, the same Joint Executive would have had nothing to do with the matter, if the plans of Mr. W. J. Dunlop had matured last Friday. He did not explain why a third party was sent by the latter to the editor asking him to resign before the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils met to consider the message from the Governors. In other words the thing was to be smoothed over before the student executives had even met. In other words the body which claims to represent the students and which is now put up as the controller of the situation was not considered of such high consequence by one of the faculty representatives who attempted to put the editor out of the way before the meeting of those who are supposed to supervise the tone of the paper on behalf of the students.

That articles on certain topics should have endangered the freedom of the paper which we have worked to maintain is bitterly regretted by the editor. That there are those who would be only too glad to put us out of the way is also apparent to the editor. That the Executive of the Students' Council should be used when wanted and ignored when not wanted is a sad commentary on the consistency of those who attack the editor on the ground, forsooth, that he is not serving the students.

Another argument which we often hear is that since the editor is paid by the students, he should write what the students want, or what their representatives claim they want. As a matter of fact, the pay of the editor is determined by the Board of Governors and not by the students. The present editor has been allowed less than the previous editors and yet the students make demands upon him as if he were in the position of those editors and as if he had not faced the problem of bringing out the paper with the youngest and least experienced staff yet gathered.

We told the Joint Executive these things the other day, just as we wrote them at the beginning of the year. Yet here is the statement made after the meeting by the Secretary-Treasurer, as printed in The Globe:

"A. Gordon Burns, Joint Secretary of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. said that the question of salary would not come up till next year. The whole matter was settled last year, he said, when there was a proportionate reduction in the salaries of every one connected with the S.A.C. This move was made in order that The Varsity, at that time in a precarious situation financially, might be put on its feet again. The Board of Governors has to be approached in connection with any alterations in salary, he added."

This statement is absolutely incorrect in its claim that reductions were proportionate. They were not proportionate within the staff of "The Varsity" or outside the staff. For instance:

The pay of the Secretary-Treasurer and Business Manager of "The Varsity" was not proportionately reduced. The advertising percentage was reduced but the fixed salary was increased.

The pay of the editor of Torontonensis remained unchanged. The salaries within the staff were not reduced proportionately. The editor's salary was reduced by a third. Most of the other editors were reduced in salary by a quarter. The Sporting Editor's allowance was reduced from ten dollars a week to no dollars and no cents a week.

Art, Music and Drama

Dr. Moure's Recital

Beauty and variety were the two characteristics which marked Dr. Moure's seventh fortnightly recital in Convocation Hall. Dr. Moure played in his usual delightful manner and his efforts were well received by a rather small audience.

Borowski's Suite in E Minor was undoubtedly the most pleasing selection of the afternoon. The number opened with a stately Prelude followed by the quicker Toccata movement. The third movement, the inexpressibly beautiful Meditation, marked the climax of the selection. The concluding Marche Solonelle utilized the opening theme of the Prelude.

The Bach Prelude and Fugue in G Minor is rather interesting with the pedal figure with which it opens and the impressive close of the Finale.

The Kieff Processional of Mousorgsky is a typical product of the nineteenth century Russian background. The finer points of its selection were rather marred by its heaviness.

The simplicity and charm of Le-mare's Chant sans paroles and the serene beauty of Palmgren's well-known Cradle Song afforded the diversification of the afternoon.

The programme concluded with Quilman's animated Postlude in B. Flat. R. B.

M.C. Theatre Night

The plays for the W.U.A. Theatre Night next Tuesday are Galsworthy's "Escape" and Barrie's "The Old Woman Shows Her Medals." We are not particularly interested in the worthiness of the cause, if any, of this occasion, but we must say that from a dramatic point of view, the bill promises very well indeed.

Galsworthy's plays are all good theatre and "Escape" is no exception. It is about one of these cool, smart young Englishmen who escapes out of penitentiary and is chased through several really exciting acts. The kind of thing which is often done badly but which Galsworthy manages perfectly. The Barrie play is a very amusing little war story of a charwoman who "adopted" a Tommy—in the whimsical Barrie style. The Empire company can do these plays intelligently and altogether it looks like a worth-while evening, even in February. B. D. B.

Did you see the Senior Brawl last night? We liked it but the way the boys breathed out loud reminded us of holiday time in a free air station.

And wouldn't the big referee be a perfect dress as a radio announcer!

C—C

Don't forget home talent though. The work of One Round Martin was very commendable. One of the O.A.C. men seemed to be wrestling with a definite end in view, but the bout ended just in time to save him.

C—C

One wrestling bout was more like a petting party. We like the way that some of the gladiators hang on the ropes and we hope this practice will continue.

C—C

But the cream of the evening was the final bout. The gentleman in the ballet trunks danced nicely for two rounds until he knelt for a few words of prayer. And did you know that one of his seconds was Laura Louise in disguise? No?

C—C

Athletics are great, after all. Too long we have remained sluggish so to-morrow we will don our goggles and try out for the team that scrapes the arena ice between periods.

C—C

We wish to draw attention to the fact that Adolph Wump, aged ninety-

In other words the editor has been asked to produce as good a product after being presented with far less facilities than any previous editor. He has been told that since the students pay him, he must write "what they want" (as interpreted by any energetic minority). Yet the students who are set up as the judges of the paper have nothing to do with the fixing of expenses. They have no more to do with this than they are meant to have with "student government".

The editor makes this statement because the preponderance of official opinion in the Joint Executive makes it impossible for him to receive co-operation therefrom. Some object to this body because it is not responsible to the popular councils but to its main difficulty is the presence of five non-student votes. These are the president, two secretaries, paid and appointed not by the students, but by the Board of Governors, and professor plus Mr. Dunlop. This official group makes it impossible for us to obtain any satisfaction from the student members because five votes are too big an advantage to overcome.

AGGIES CAPTURE SENIOR ASSAULT WITH FOUR WINS ALL ON MAT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The game to-morrow night at the downtown Arena when St. Michael's College meets the University of Toronto should be a "hum-dinger". In their last two games the Saints have shown rare form and in their last game with the Tricolour of Kingston they showed little finish but a tremendous amount of fight. Their last minute win was a corking affair. The spectators will again have an opportunity of seeing Chick Garvie in action. He is a brilliant goal getter. If they win from Varsity they will be right in line for second place since Queen's defeated Preston on Monday night.

The presence of women at the senior assault-at-arms held at Hart House is almost a new thing for Varsity but it is becoming more and more noticeable that women are attending affairs that were previously for "men only". At the professional boxing shows there is always a good sprinkling of women. Will the amateurs begin to draw the fair ones as frequently?

It is too bad that intercollegiate hockey is so weak but it seems that if the teams will not provide better competition than that shown on Saturday last or if there will not be a strengthening in number of teams in the league that the hockey union is doomed. We really wish something was done about it as it would surely be too bad if the Canadian universities drop hockey while the American colleges are just taking it up. We hope the time will not come when the only hockey played in Colleges will be by those that have adopted it and those to whom it is a national sport have dropped it.

Tyson of School of Practical Science performed the iron man stunt in the senior assault-at-arms last night. After losing a strenuous bout in the 174 pound wrestling he came back a little later to defeat in a most decisive manner Keenan in the 175 pound boxing.

O.C.E. AND U.C. TIE GAME IN SPEEDY ENCOUNTER

Good Playing on Both Sides But All to No Purpose As Score Ties

The O.C.E. and U.C. girls played to a scoreless tie in a fast but sloppy hockey game Tuesday afternoon. There was a good deal of fast skating on both sides but to no purpose as the defence on both teams closed up each time to prevent any but long shots. O.C.E. are fortunate in having a number of girls who have played intercollegiate hockey for either Varsity or Queen's, but in spite of this U.C. held them to centre ice most of the time.

Line-ups were:
O.C.E.—Goal, Fran Service; defence Florence Allen, Elinor McCubbin; forwards, Jean Bateman, Kay West, Marion Hayeff; subs, Peg Graham, Florence Lovell.

U.C.—Goal, Helen McKinley; defence, Adele Statten, Dot Starr; forward, Dot Porter, Marg Kerr, Jod Gray; subs, Bea Crocker, Fritz Anderson, Betty Donaldson.

Referee—Hager from Vic.

Vic Downs Senior Dents In Stellar Basketball

In a very fast and interesting basketball game Sr. Vic downed Sr. Dents. For Vic, their rangy centre, Johnston, played a stellar game, being high scorer. At half time Vic led 12-5. The second half was exceedingly fast, both teams playing basketball that was a treat to watch. The final score was, Sr. Vic 18, Sr. Dents 13.

U.C. TIED WITH S.P.S.

Duff Thompson of S.P.S. scored a brilliant victory in the 440 yards dash at the Hart House track last night. He won decisively over a large and fast field to equal his interfaculty record of 53.2-5 seconds. Thompson ran a little too easily in the first lap but finished in whirlwind fashion. A faster run in the early stages would undoubtedly have meant a new record as Thompson finished quite fresh in his heat. Jermyn brought his point total to 10 by taking second place in this event. Jermyn set the record for the 440 yards last year. Connolly of Vic scored the first point for his faculty by taking third place.

Woodside made it two in a row for S.P.S. by capturing the mile walk. He had quite a tough battle with Nimmo but moved out ahead in the last lap. Merritt of U.C. was third.

University College and the School of Science are tied at 29 points for the interfaculty championship. S.P.S. outscores U.C. 13-4 on the day's events but U.C. held a 9 point lead from last week.

Hap Gilbert of U.C., the intercollegiate three mile champion, who was counted on for many points in the distance runs for his college, had the misfortune to break a ligament in his leg in the half-mile run held recently and is out of competition for the rest of the season.

CHECKING SYSTEM BEGUN FOR CO-EDS

Oregon University Compels All Girls to Register Their Absence

SYSTEM FOUND USEFUL

Special to "The Varsity"
Eugene, Wash.—A new system of checking girls signing out for overnight which will be uniform for the whole campus has been instituted by the dean of women's office at the University of Oregon.

Girls who are leaving town must sign out with their house mother, who will make out duplicate slips one of which she will keep, while the other is filed at the office of the dean of women. Information on the sign out slip must include the destination name of people the girl is staying with, telephone number, how long the girl is to be gone, her home address, and must be signed by the house mother or chaperon.

By means of this system the office knows at any time exactly where a girl is to be found, so that they can reach her in case of an emergency. They also use the slips to find correlation between absences and grades and between absences and activities.

Box office receipts paid for the entire expenses for the 100 members of the cast of "Oceans of Love" which was presented by the Scarlet Mask society at Ohio State university in a nine-day tour at a daily expense of $1,000.

St. Mike's Oppose Varsity With Resolute Team At Arena

TOUGH BATTLE FORESEEN

Varsity seniors meet St. Mike's in a regular senior O.H.A. fixture at the Arena Gardens to-night. The game promises to be an interesting one, as the St. Michael's College boys will be in there from the first bell to cinch a place in the play-offs, while "Red" Porter's sextet are out to make sure of the group leadership.

This will be the third time that the Blue and White squad has run up against the Double Blue this season, and although the Varsity sextet twice defeated St. Mike's it was only after strenuous playing. St. Michael's College have made some additions to their squad and are playing together far better than in the last fixture with the Blue and White.

On the other hand Varsity are at top form and with only one defeat this season are eager to add another win to their string of victories. Murray Snyder is hard to beat in goal, and Whitehead and Paul are teaming up better than ever behind the blue line. The combination of McFulven, Stewart and Harley as they flash down the ice is beautiful to behold, and the Varsity forward line are able to keep even "Stuffy" Mueller busy in goal, when they begin their attack.

VARSITY TAKES TROPHY FROM CENTRAL Y TEAM

Championship Goes to B Team After Spirited Contest In Tank

The Varsity "B" team won the water-polo championship of Toronto when they defeated Central Y.M.C.A. by a score of 10 to 0 in the Hart House pool last night. The Daily Star Trophy was presented to the victors by Roy Roundes and, in addition, each player received a silver medal. The runners-up got bronze medals.

In the first half Latchford led the scoring with a swift shot on a pass from Armstrong. The Y team struggled to hold the Varsity forward line but Armstrong soon got a second counter. Four more shots went home before the period ended with the score 6 to 0 in Varsity's favour. The Central team came to life in the last period but although they showed improvement the B team was too strong for them. Armstrong started right out to increase the Varsity lead with a hard throw that easily eluded the opposing netman. The whole team then gave a display of water-polo which ran the tally up to 10 to 0 for the University team. Armstrong, Latchford and Pierdon scored for the Blue and White swimmers with 5, 4 and 1 goals respectively.

The teams—
Varsity B—Goal, Ayers; defence, Latchford and Middleboro; rover, Spence; centre, Armstrong; wings, Pierdon and Macdonald.

Central Y—Goal, Todd; defence, Abernethy and Oggy; rover, Fairclough; centre, Gibson; wings, Rennett and Griffin.

Silver Salver Purchased Larger Than Was Reported

A letter has been received by "The Varsity" stating that the report of the silver service purchased by the staff of University College from the daughter of the late Professor H. H. Croft is partially incorrect. According to the report which appeared in the paper of January 23, the service consisted of a silver, a spirit lamp, a kettle, a hot water jug, a tea jug, and a cake plate.

According to the letter received, the service comprises "large presentation tray, tea kettle, coffee pot, tea pot, silver, sugar bowl and tongs."

JACKSON TAKES WIN IN SENIOR ASSAULT

Dymont, S.P.S., Gets Heffer In Fine Display of Skill With Foils

KNOCK-OUT SCORED

The Senior Interfaculty Assault-at-Arms took place last night with many fine exhibitions in the boxing, wrestling and fencing divisions. Jack McLennan of Meds, scored a knockout in the 145 lb. class, putting Crisp, of the same faculty, down for the full count in the final round. Crisp was down twice in the second round and it was just 45 seconds after the third round had begun that McLennan put a finish to the bout. In the eagerly-awaited Jackson-Longert bout, Jackson, after a cautious start, showed a lot of nice punching and practically had Longert out on his feet at the close.

The wrestling matches were all very evenly contested and there was a lot of skillful mat work shown by all the contestants. La Pointe of O.A.C., gained the most decisive decision of the evening with two falls to his credit in the 123 lb. division. Watt, also of O.A.C., was the only other wrestler to gain a fall, accomplishing this feat at Diprose's expense in the 145 pound class.

Jack Dunlap of U.C. received a nasty gash in a fencing bout yesterday afternoon with Keffer, when the latter's foil broke. The wound required five stitches but Dunlap showed his pluck by taking part in the bouts which took place in the evening. Jack Dymont of S.P.S. led the fencers, giving a nice display of foil art, and Jimmy Keffer of O.C.E. was the runner-up.

Boxing

145 pound—McLennan (Meds), defeated Crisp (Meds)—K.O., third round.

160 pound—Jackson (U.C.) defeated Longert (U.C.).

175 pound—Tyson (S.P.S.), defeated Keenan (Grad.S.).

Junior Hockey

Will the following turn out at the Arena at 12 noon, Wednesday, for game vs. Intermediates: Hunnissett, Williams, Brant, Laing, Hetherington, Bell, Bennett, Lash, Crerar.

Students at Washburn college disrupted classes, held protest parades and generally disturbed the campus when their student government was threatened with abolishment.

Wrestling

123 pound—La Pointe (O.A.C.) defeated Burnett (Dents)—2 falls.

134 pound—McKinney (Vic) defeated Walker (U.C.)—1 min. (15 sec. time advantage).

145 pound—Watt (O.A.C.) defeated Diprose (Dents)—1 fall.

150 pound—Furber (Grad.S.) defeated Watt (O.A.C.)—42 sec. time advantage.

174 pound—Hall (O.A.C.) defeated Tyson (S.P.S.)—35 sec. time advantage.

Heavy—Chipswick (O.A.C.) defeated Kickham (Dents)—decision.

Fencing

1st, Dymont (S.P.S.); 2nd, Keffer (O.C.E.).

FORMERLY A PIRATE NOW IS A LECTURER

Former German Sea Captain Tells Thrilling Deeds Of War Time

SINKS HALF MILLION TONS

Special to "The Varsity"
Syracuse, N.Y.—The days of pirates have not really passed. A famous sea rover, formerly known as the "Sea Devil," has been touring the country recently. He has just been lecturing at Syracuse University on the subject "Running the Blockade with the Sea-Adler."

Count Felix von Luckner has had adventures worthy of any novelist's imagination and in fact he has written them out in his book "The Sea Devil."

At an early age Commander von Luckner left home in Germany to come to the United States to join "Buffalo Bill." After shipping on the wrong boat he arrived in Australia.

Finally in Brisbane he succeeded in boarding a ship bound for the United States and first set foot on American soil in San Francisco instead of New York. When he found Buffalo Bill lived in Denver he "walked the ties" all the way only to find that his hero was in Germany with a circus. He decided that fate had treated him unkindly, and his grief was increased when he learned that his father had acted as host to "Buffalo" for three days in Dresden.

Later he obtained his master's degree and became a lieutenant in the Imperial German Navy. It was necessary for some one to run the triple blockade which England had in the North Sea and at last Count von Luckner convinced his superior officer, the admiral, that it could be run through with an old three-masted wind jammer, and destroy Allied shipping in the Atlantic.

By disguising an old American clipper as a Norwegian sailing vessel he succeeded in fooling the British and sinking 500,000 tons of Allied shipping without firing a shot. His ship was perfectly disguised, his men having letters from wives and sweethearts in Norway and even having their Norwegian names sewed in their clothing. Thus the clever sea captain slipped through the British ships and succeeded in doing a great deal of damage, although no one on his vessel or even injured during all his adventures.

Taffy Pull Creates Terrible Havoc But All Leave In Good Spirits

(By N. J. DeWitt)

A taffy-pull was held in the basement of the Central Church last night, and jollity and happiness reigned supreme, at least it so seemed to the reporter of this paper. The meeting opened with a few words by the president of the auxiliary who attacked the caretaker violently; she held up a sign which read, "The Ladies' Auxiliary will hold a taffy-pull in the basement of the church on Tuesday." Underneath in large letters was the announcement of a sermon on the text, "Forgive them, for they know not what they do." The president said this sort of going-on was not what the people of the congregation wanted to see on their bulletin-board, and that one more blunder and the caretaker would lose his job even if he did have eight children, and an aged mother.

The spirit of fun was further enhanced by a few words from Mr. Bunkley Shuter in a letter which was read to the party by Mr. Bullman Shuter. Mr. Bunkley is at the university. "I am pleased to address a few words to my friends to-night. Taffy is one of the great things in life, and may the lessons of taffy-pulling teach you to stick to it even in life," he wrote.

Someone in the kitchen apparently took Mr. Shuter's message too literally, for at this juncture a cry was heard and when the representatives of the press first arrived on the scene, it was found the unfortunate one had sat in a plate of soft taffy, and was then sitting in a pan of warm water that the plate might be removed.

Taffy-pulling in earnest now began, and Mr. Bullman Shuter was elected master of ceremony in recognition of his political abilities in the field of taffy-pulling.

Little Agatha Shuter was unlucky enough to get some of the candy in her hair and consequently bawled all evening. Miss Pansy Gardon lost a filling out of her wisdom teeth and spent the evening in pain. Some of the taffy boiled over and burned, thus rendering the atmosphere at times uncomfortable in spite of the general happiness and jollity. Mrs. Bullman Shuter pulled taffy so energetically that she was afflicted with cramp and spent the evening with one arm rigidly held out like a traffic cop.

The crowning misfortune of the pleasant evening occurred in this wise. Ike McDougall, our respected fellow citizen from the fourth line west lot 65, was suddenly observed to be mute. Owing to his ordinary conversational volubility, a stroke was feared. This fear, to be sure, was dispelled to some extent by the extreme violence of his expression and the rapidity of his gesticulations. His wife observed that something horrible must have been the matter as it was the first time in fifty years she had known Ike to have nothing to say.

Dr. Pilleum, our respected medical practitioner, however, on examining Ike's mouth, suddenly burst out laughing and ceased only when Ike threw a plate of still sticky taffy at him. Hereupon the Doctor led Ike to the sink, and inserted a hose in his mouth and turned on a gentle stream of warm water. Ike was soon able to explain, albeit profanely, that his two sets of false teeth had been stuck together by a morsel of soft taffy, and that the next time he attended a taffy-pull they could send for the funny-wagon.

The evening ended with the rendition of "Pull for the Shore," by Miss Georgette Crepe, who struck a high moral note, being a contralto. Massed singing featured the closing, as well as an announcement from Dr. Pilleum that he would be in his office the next day from 8 to 6 to treat those with biliousness. All left with the utmost jollity, and several personally informed ye scribe that the soiree had been one of the best ever.

NEW GLASS INVENTED HAS VALUED PROPERTY

University of Pittsburgh Has Made Recent Discovery of Importance

Special to "The Varsity"
Pittsburgh, Penn.—The invention of a new kind of glass made with beryllium, a chemical element, has been announced at the University of Pittsburgh.

One of the properties of the glass is increased hardness, which seems to offer a field for making optical glasses of better resistance to minute scratches that come from wear.

The glass also admits ultra-violet light, whose healthful effects have been well established. It has not as yet been determined whether or not the ultra-violet transmission will be broken down by solarization.

The discovery was made by Chi Eang Lai, a Chinese research fellow. His interest in producing glass arose from his desire to aid China's prosperity by developing a market for the country's beryl deposits from which beryllium is taken.

The Panhellenic Council of Women's fraternities was entertained at tea at the Gamma Phi Beta apartment on Monday afternoon, in honor of their visiting national officers.

SWEDISH DOCTOR REPORTS ON MIGRATION OF GESE

Observations Reveal Rare Sense of Direction in Fowl

Special to "The Varsity"
Berlin—The marvellous local sense of wild geese was tested by the Swedish naturalist and writer, Bengt Berg, according to Dr. Theodor G. Ahrens, well-known Berlin naturalist. He had succeeded in acclimating these shy birds to himself at his home, situated on a remote and uninhabited coast region of Sweden. The wild geese here finally ate from his hands, until they departed upon their southern migration in the autumn. While Doctor Berg was sojourning at his home on the coast in the following spring he noticed one day 16 wild geese high in the sky, approaching from the south. While he was watching, they descended and came up to him to feed from his hands as formerly. Without apparent difficulty they had found their way from distant Africa to this spot, where they had a friend whom they remembered in spite of the separation of time and space.

The Panhellenic Banquet of the Women's fraternities of the University was held in the Alexandra room of the King Edward Hotel on Tuesday evening, February the fifth.

atoms—similar to those on the earth. The passage of two stars near one another is responsible for the formation of planets, by attracting some of these surface atoms from each star into space where they are left as a free body. The planet so formed takes up an orbit about one of the parent stars.

Eventually, some billions of years hence, all lucid atoms will have radiated themselves as energy. The universe will be a space devoid of stars with a very few bodies of ashes such as the earth floating about in it at a temperature of four hundred and forty degrees below zero.

QUEER STATUTES REMAIN ON BOOKS NOT ENFORCED

Statute Books Reveal Legal Provisions for Dogs And Duels

Special to "The Varsity"
Memphis, Tennessee.—Tennessee, which only recently enacted a law prohibiting the teaching of the theory of evolution in public schools, is no exception to other states in having on its statute books laws which time has made obsolete.

Anyone with a flair for the old and for the most part forgotten laws may find that a sling shot is illegal and a "dangerous weapon." That fighting a duel is punishable by five years' imprisonment, and calling a man a coward for refusing to settle an affair of honor by duel is punishable by two years' imprisonment.

It is against the law also to do any of the following:

Give a fictitious name when hiring a horse and buggy.

Make a noise within 100 yards of a cemetery.

Allow a minor to play ten pins.

Give a man a drink around the state capitol.

Sell liquor to a drunkard.

Sell articles within a mile of a church unless it is an established place of business.

Sell toy pistols or caps for same.

Own a cotton gin without a fence around it.

Buy hides from an unidentified person.

Sell cotton or cotton seed between sunset and sunrise.

Intercollegiate Swimming and Water Polo Meet Here

BASKETBALL GAME

Many Outstanding University Stars Will Be Seen In Action

The Intercollegiate Swimming and Water Polo Meet takes place on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 15-16. On Saturday the Water Polo games will be at 7.30 p.m. owing to an Intercollegiate Basketball Game at 8.30 p.m.

Munro Bourne, McGill, who represented Canada at the Olympic games last summer will undoubtedly be ably supported by his brother Clayton, who represented Canada at the Olympic games in 1924. Against these outstanding stars Varsity have Johnny Goss and Leo Latchford while Eddie Sinclair can be counted upon for one race.

Previous to the Intercollegiate meet, Varsity meet Central Y on Tuesday, Feb. 12 at Central. As Central are going to swim against Detroit and the University of Michigan it will be a good work-out for both teams. A good attendance is expected and it is felt that those who attend will see an excellent exhibition of swimming.

After four weeks' tour of the Canadian West, the Hart House Quartet spent Tuesday in Toronto en route to Montreal, Ottawa and Kingston.

LETTER SENT EDITOR

Issue "Varsity Bulletin" To Inform Students of The Situation

Owing to the dismissal of the Editor of "The Varsity", the Joint Executive of the Student Administrative Councils has suspended publication of that paper for twenty-four hours until the necessary readjustments can be made.

The following letter has been sent to Mr. Ryan:

S.A.C. Office, Hart House,
February 6, 1929.
Mr. L. J. Ryan,
Lauder Avenue,
Toronto.

Dear Mr. Ryan:—
I regret to have to inform you that a motion for your dismissal was passed at a meeting of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils held yesterday afternoon. The reason for this dismissal is that, in the opinion of the Joint Executive, you have by the editorial in "The Varsity" of Wednesday, February 6, definitely broken your signed agreement of December 3 that "there will be omitted from "The Varsity" personal attacks" etc.

The Joint Executive of the Student Councils Gives Out Statement Through Its Chairman

DECISION REACHED YESTERDAY

Following a meeting of the Joint Executive of the Student Administrative Councils, the following statement announcing the dismissal of the editor was given out:

At a meeting of the Joint Executive of the Student Administrative Councils held yesterday the executive passed a motion directing the dismissal of the Editor of "The Varsity". This decision was arrived at following an editorial which was published in "The Varsity" of Wednesday, February 6th. In this editorial the editor definitely broke a written pledge, given by him to the Joint Executive on November 30, 1928, which read as follows:

"The Editor in Chief of "The Varsity" agrees with the Joint Executive to see to it, to the best of his ability, that there will be omitted from the pages of "The Varsity" personal attacks, attempts on colleges or faculties, attempts to sow discord between faculties, personal bitterness and vindictiveness and offensive epithets."

The "Varsity" of February 6, contains bitter personal attacks in its columns which the Joint Executive consider both unjust and untrue, and is but a continuation of the policy which has been adopted by the Editor of "Varsity" throughout the year.

The statement made by the editor that he has lacked the co-operation of the Joint Executive in the past is denied. It is pointed out that on four distinct occasions during the academic year pressure from various sources has been brought to bear upon the Joint Executive to have the editor dismissed and on each occasion the Executive has held its hand.

The Editor's latest article, however, makes it apparent that there can no longer be any effectual co-operation between him and the Joint Executive and his dismissal follows as a consequence.

GEORGE A. MCGILLIVRAY, Chairman Joint Executive.

FABIANS REORGANIZE CHANGE NAME TO CLUB

"Fabian Society" Will Now Be Known as "Fabian Club"

Yesterday afternoon the Fabian Club met in the West Hall of U.C. and proceeded with the work of organization under the chairmanship of J. M. R. Wilson. A simple constitution was adopted and members elected to the offices provided for.

In opening the meeting the chairman explained that the committee previously appointed, had decided on the name Fabians Club in preference to Fabian Society because difficulties might result as there was a branch of the English Fabian Society in Canada. He then called on Mr. James Keenan, spokesman of the committee to read the proposed constitution.

GAME LAST NIGHT RESULTED IN WIN FOR BLUE TEAM

University of Toronto Team Will Play Winners For Group Honours

Bruce Paul Played A Superb Game For The Varsity Team

Defeating St. Michael's last night by a 9-2 score, the University of Toronto Senior Hockey squad cinched a place in the play-off of their group in the Senior O.H.A. series. They now lead the other teams with seven wins and one defeat. St. Michael's, Preston and Queen's University will fight it out for the right to meet the Blue team in the finals.

Although last night's game was slow throughout, the Blue team continually pressed the attack and only the excellent work of Mueller in goal prevented the score from mounting into double figures. The ex-Varsity net guardian was superb and frustrated many a sure goal for Varsity.

Few attempts were made on the part of the forward line to pass the puck when passes might have meant goals for the winners. Bruce Paul was brilliant—his rushes were the outstanding feature of the game. He was ably assisted by Brant and McMullen, while Whitehead probably scored the best goal of the game in the second period. Snyder was never pressed, St. Michael's only passing the Varsity blue line on rare occasions.

DURNAN CUP EVENTS IN HART HOUSE POOL

Two Events Will Be Staged In Hart House Pool

AT FIVE O'CLOCK

The third and fourth events for the Durnan Cup will be run off in Hart House Pool to-night at 5 o'clock. The two races held to-night will be the 100 yard Breast Stroke and the 100 yard Back Stroke.

All the swimmers entered so far have made a very creditable showing. The 50 and 200 yard Free Style were closely competed on Tuesday night, and the races were very exciting. Johnny Goss is high man in these two events, his time for both swims netting him 2,000 points out of a possible 2,000. The standing to date is:—
J. Goss—2,000
T. Marsh—1,525
R. Poynter—1,174
H. Graham—1,158
G. Glass—1,121
E. Sinclair—1,110

BILL STEWART BEREAVED

Sincerest sympathy is extended to W. R. (Bill) Stewart of the Varsity Senior Hockey team in the sad death of his father. Owing to this unfortunate circumstance, Bill Stewart was unable to play in last night's hockey game against Saint Michael's College.

STEAM UP FOR LONDON

This model, a perfect working miniature of one of the Canadian National Railways' giant locomotives, is now on its way to London, England, where it will be exhibited in the European offices of the National system. John E. Wood, of Winnipeg, constructed it in his spare time, and it took him four months of diligence and skill. The main frames of the locomotive were made by apprentices in the Fort Rouge and Transcona shops. The model is correct in all external details and will work under its own power. The boiler has been tested to 150 pounds pressure. For the purposes of exhibition a motor was placed in the oak base to drive the wheels through a worm gear on the main driving axle. The over-all length of the model is eight feet, six inches, while the over-all length of the original 6100 is 94 feet, six inches. The model weighs approximately 275 pounds and the super-locomotive 326 tons. —Adv.

PRESIDENT CELEBRATES SIXTY-SECOND BIRTHDAY

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE FOR CANADA

SECOND GATHERING OF THE STUDENTS HELD IN SEPTEMBER

Seventy-Five to One Hundred Delegates Expected From Empire Universities

UNDER AUSPICES N.F.C.U.S.

National Federation Has Also An International Significance

The Second Imperial Conference of Students is being held in Canada, September 6th to 16th, 1929, under the auspices of the N.F.C.U.S. In addition to the seventy-five or one hundred delegates from various universities in the British Empire, it is expected that delegates will attend from every university in Canada.

The organization of this Conference is entailing a considerable financial obligation, but the N.F.C.U.S. feels honored that Canada has been selected for the meeting, and an elaborate programme has been prepared for our overseas visitors.

The National Federation of Canadian University Students has been described as the students in each Canadian University co-operating for their mutual welfare in the best interests of their common heritage—Canada. To this might be added an international aspect, the two finding expression in the words of the constitution, which reads: "To promote in every way possible a better understanding among all students; a greater degree of co-operation between all Canadian universities for the promotion of national interests, and to provide a means for developing international relationships with student groups in other countries."

To the accomplishment of these ends, and in particular the promotion of a greater measure of unity in Canada, the National Federation has directed

FLAUBERT WAS FIRST OF REALIST SCHOOL

Ambition Was to Achieve Perfection of Literary Style

PROF. JEANNERET LECTURES

Professor Jeanneret's lecture on Flaubert was well attended yesterday afternoon. This was the second of a series of public lectures held in University College.

Although Flaubert himself did not realize it, he was considered the first of the realist school. He lived through what he wrote himself and thus made everything very vivid to his readers.

His life was quite uneventful and his only ambition was to achieve perfection of style in literature; for this reason he took a great deal of time at his writing. He wrote only six novels during his whole life. The best known of these is "Madame Bovary". Flaubert spent five years on it, and this is the book which made him really famous. It is considered one of the greatest works of all French Literature.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR ANNUAL DANCE ARE NOW ANNOUNCED

Arts Ball of University College Takes Place This Evening

NO "CRASHERS" TOLERATED Committee Confident No One Will be Admitted Without A Ticket

Final arrangements are announced for the Arts Ball, taking place tonight. Dancing will be from 9 p.m. until 2 a.m. in the gymnasium. Supper will be served in the Great Hall at two sittings, first after the sixth, second after the tenth dance. First and second years must take first supper, (red tickets). Others may take either (red or white), but are requested to go to the Great Hall immediately after either the 6th or 10th dnce. The faculty Union is reserved for the patronesses, guests from other universities and the Committee. No one with a red supper ticket will be allowed in Great Hall after 11 o'clock.

No one will be allowed to enter the House without a ticket. The south west main door will be the only one open. No person after entering the House will be permitted to leave and re-enter during the evening. Private cars may be parked around the front campus, and on the road which runs north from the Tower along the west side of Hart House. Guests are requested to have the exact change ready for the taxi driver in order that there may be no congestion at the door. All taxis must enter the grounds by the Queen's Park gate both before and after the dance.

Hopes to clear up any misunderstanding which may have arisen from any incomplete possession of the facts

Believing that only a minority of the students of the University, is in possession of the facts concerning the relations which existed between the Varsity staff and the Joint Executive, this latter body feels that it is its duty to publish the following statement:

It is to be understood that the Joint Executive is made up largely of representatives of the students of the various faculties and colleges. Early in the Autumn these representatives began to receive from other students vigorous complaints regarding news items and editorials which were appearing in the Varsity. It was with great reluctance that the Joint Executive decided to interfere at all with the apparent policy of the Varsity as shown in the news items and editorials which characterized it. But the Varsity was sowing discord and was producing so much bad feeling that it became evident in November that action could no longer be delayed. Letters were received that could not be ignored; one important committee, through its chairman, demanded an apology for epithets used; there was great indignation on the part of the students because of ridicule directed at a very popular member of the staff. To satisfy those who were complaining and to maintain the good name of the university, the Joint Executive decided that the editor must be asked to agree to discontinue at once this most harmful line of action. To this the editor agreed. After this complaints were still received on points which had not been covered by the agreement. Rather than interfere again, the Joint Executive on these occasions supported the editor and mollified.

GREETINGS

SIR ROBERT FALCONER who celebrates his sixty-second birthday this Sunday. Sir Robert has been President of the University of Toronto since 1907.

BIRTHDAY RECALLS NOTABLE CAREER OF PRESIDENT

University of Toronto Has Seen Two Decades of Progress Under Him

KNIGHTED IN 1917

Has Won Esteem and Respect Of Faculty, Graduates And Undergraduates Alike

Sunday is the sixty-second birthday of the President of the University of Toronto, recalls again Sir Robert Falconer's distinguished achievements in scholarship and administration.

Born in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, he later went to Trinidad. Here attending Queen's Royal College he won the Gilchrist scholarship, entitling him to attendance at the University of London. A B.A. degree was received there, then graduate studies at Edinburgh entitling him to M.A. and Litt.D. Post-graduate studies were pursued in Berlin Leipzig and Hamburg.

Returning to Nova Scotia, he held successively the positions of Lecturer, Professor and Principal of Pine Hill College, Halifax. In 1907 Sir Robert Falconer became the President of the University of Toronto. He was knighted ten years later.

During his twenty years of office here the President has won the esteem and respect of faculty, graduates and undergraduates alike. The prominent position which this University holds in Canada is due in no small measure to his administrative efforts. Throughout the vicissitudes of two decades, progress slow but sure has been made. New departments have been introduced and old departments amplified; entrance standards have been raised, and at the same time attendance has increased about 1,500; there are over one thousand more women here now than there were in 1908. The teaching staff has been greatly augmented; many new buildings have been erected, of which the most outstanding is Hart House. These facts and many others are ample evidence that things have gone ahead under the capable guidance of Sir Robert Falconer.

SIR THOMAS WHITE TO ADDRESS TORIES

Joint Meeting of Conservative Clubs Will Hear Canada's War Finance Minister

CONSERVATIVES INVITED

Sir Thomas White, Canada's great War finance minister, is going to give his second political speech on Wednesday evening, February 13th, since his retirement from public life in 1920. The occasion will be a joint meeting of the Osgoode Hall Conservative Club and the Macdonald-Cartier Club of the University of Toronto at the Albany Club, 93 King St. East.

When Sir Robert Borden resigned from the Federal Premiership in 1920 the eyes of the country were focused on Sir Thomas White. He was called upon to succeed Borden as Prime Minister. The honour was thrust upon him but he refused to accept it. Sir

Senior Social Event Takes Place Last Evening Under Distinguished Patronage

Several hundred guests thronged the corridors of Trinity College last night for the Annual Conversazione held under the auspices of the Trinity College Literary Society.

This event, which is one of the main social affairs of the year, was held under the distinguished patronage of Lady Falconer, Mrs. D. Ross, Mrs. F. H. Cosgrave, Mrs. W. A. Kirkwood and Mrs. F. C. Kingston.

The spacious halls of the college building, transformed for the evening with the colours of Trinity and St. Hilda's, provided an appropriate background for the sit-down supper which was served in the corridors. Paper hats, whistles, streamers and other novelties provided additional atmosphere.

Students of St. Hilda's College Drop Custom of Year Feeds

A departure from the time-honoured custom of "year feeds" which have been the means whereby the members of one year entertained another during the course of the term, took place yesterday afternoon when the Common Room of St. Hilda's College, its charms enhanced by a crackling fire, soft music and a profusion of spring flowers, was the background for a delightful tea given by the members of the First Year to the rest of the College. Miss Frances Adworthy, head of the First Year, received, assisted by Miss Claire MacTear, deputy-head. Judging from the comments here and there about the College the "departure" proved a decided success.

STUDENT COUNCIL MAKES STATEMENT

After a statement of policy had been agreed upon between the Editor and the Joint Executive in December, the tone of the Varsity did not improve. Vulgarly frequently characterized the feature articles and Champus Cat. Then came the "petting" editorial and the "follow-up" thereon. The Joint Executive had hoped that the Varsity would be a publication worthy of a great University. The paper, however, did not come up to this expectation, as it was felt that it was steadily growing worse.

Finally, the Joint Executive, having refused to act upon the request of the Board of Governors that the Editor be dismissed, invited to a conference the editor and six of the sub-editors. At that meeting the editor promised that the moral tone of the paper would be improved, and that vulgarity would henceforth be banished from its columns.

Two days after making the second agreement, he broke the first one by launching again into personal attacks.

Mr. Dunlop states that on Thursday, January 24, he received instructions from representatives of the Board of Governors that he should carry their request to the Joint Executive that the Editor should be dismissed. He was informed that if this were not done, the Press would be closed to "The Varsity". Feeling that in all fairness, Mr. Ryan should have this information and an opportunity to resign rather than be dismissed or else cause the cessation of publication, Mr. Dunlop gave the information to the member of "The Varsity" staff with whom he was best acquainted, Mr. Norman DeWitt. It is obvious that as Mr. Dunlop had the Board of Governors' instructions to bring the matter before the Joint Executive, that body would have had to deal with the situation whether the Editor offered a tentative resignation or not.

The statement that the pay of the Editor is determined by the Board of Governors is a half truth. As the Board of Governors imposes the compulsory fee which assures the Editor his salary regardless of the financial position of "The Varsity", it naturally, as the Trustee of the students, has the right to approve the manner in which that money is spent. When the Joint Executive went to the Board of Governors three years ago asking for assistance to pay a $12,000 debt the Board made various suggestions as to methods of reducing the yearly deficit. Chief of these were proposed reductions in the salaries of "The Varsity" editors and in the percentage of advertising commissions paid the Business Manager. The matter was debated for a year and a half, and a final scale agreed upon by both parties in December 1927.

Mr. Burns' statement that reductions were proportionate is practically correct as a number of factors enter into the situation. The fixed pay of the Business Manager was increased from $1200 to $1800, while his commission percentage on some $6000 worth of advertising was reduced from 25 per cent to 10 per cent. This would make a reduction of some $300. In addition, the work of editing "The Varsity" Handbook which has previously been done on a 25 per cent commission basis by a special manager himself on a 10 per cent basis. The Business Manager also ceases to collect the 10 per cent on any advertising which may be secured by an assistant.

The pay of the Torontonensis editor had been reduced from $300 to $200, some time previously.

The reduction of the Varsity staff salaries may not have been mathematically proportionate but an attempt was made to make the changes fairly on a basis of the duties pertaining to each position. The Sporting Editors until 1927-28 did not receive a salary but were given various trips with the teams. Last year, at the request of the previous Sporting Editors, a weekly salary was substituted from which they undertook to pay for their trips. This was found to be impracticable for obvious reasons (A Montreal trip in October, for instance, might mortgage the salary before it was paid) and the change was made to the old system of sending a reporter to the big games.

The insinuation that because salaries were cut, the tone of the paper necessarily went down, is hardly worthy of comment.

The statement that the five non-student votes in the Joint Executive can dictate the policy of that body is incorrect. To begin with, the chairman has only a casting vote, and the two Faculty representatives are not counted in the number of male members necessary to make a quorum. Further there must be at least six undergraduate votes present to make a quorum.

Just how or when the students have been told there is a debt on the Council's hands does not appear. As a matter of fact, the final payment was made before Christmas on the actual loan of some $10,000, owing to the Board of Governors. It was possible to do this because an extra fee of $1 has been added to the regular $3 S.A.C. fee for the last three years, and because all expenditures have been curtailed during that period. There is still a debt on the hands of the Joint Executive, however, in the so-called "contingent liability" on Torontonensis and it is necessary that a fund be built up to take care of the indebtedness to students should it, at any time, be impossible to produce Torontonensis.

It has been said that the General Secretary Treasurer and Assistant Secretary Treasurer of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. are paid and appointed by the Board of Governors. In the first instance the salary of each of these officials is paid from the funds of the S.A.C., which are collected from the students by the Board of Governors.

In the second place the Assistant Secretary is appointed by the Board of Governors upon the nomination of the W.S.A.C., while the Secretary-Treasurer is appointed by the Board upon recommendation of the University President. In the matter of the present appointment, all applications were turned over to the Joint Executive and its nominations sent in to the President, who made the choice from one of those nominated. It would seem only right that the Board of Governors, having taken the responsibility of collecting the S.A.C. fees, should have some control at least over the expenditure of such fees.

Finally, the chairman of the Joint Executive does not receive a salary nor any financial reimbursement for his work, nor is he appointed by the Board of Governors. He is elected by the Men's Council as their President and his position is ex-officio chairman of the Joint Executive.

The following shows comparison of the present Varsity basis of salaries with that of last year:

Thomas had served in the Cabinet from 1911. He had borne the brunt of Canada's finance problems during the Great War. The wonderful organization of the Victory Loans was largely his attainment. When the call came to him in 1920 to take over the leadership of the Conservative party, he was in a poor state of health. Like his leader, Sir Robert, he was suffering from the great strain that had been put upon him during the War. Along with Borden he might be called a war casualty, worn out in the service of his Country. At that time he went into retirement. Since then he has refused to take any part in political life with one exception. That was when he spoke at the National Conservative Convention at Winnipeg, in October, 1927.

Sir Thomas White resides in Queens Park. For these last eight years he has been living quietly among us. He has a great interest in young people, particularly students and it is for this reason he has consented to again come out of retirement to speak to the young men of this University and of Osgoode Hall.

The Macdonald-Cartier Club is extending an open invitation to all Conservatives in the University to attend. After Sir Thomas' speech the members will have the opportunity of meeting him and their fellow Conservatives.

ACTING EDITOR-IN-CHIEF APPOINTED BY COUNCIL

Call for Applications for Position of Editor for Remainder Of Academic Year

At a special meeting of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils held this afternoon, Robert C. H. Mitchell, B.A., was appointed Acting Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity" with authority to make any necessary temporary appointments to the staff. The Assistant Secretary-Treasurer was instructed to call for applications for the position of Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity" for the remainder of the academic year.

At the same meeting the following resolution was passed unanimously: "That the Secretary write the Departmental Editors and inform them that Mr. Mitchell has been appointed Acting Editor-in-Chief of 'The Varsity' with power to make any necessary temporary appointments to the staff. If they desire to continue their connection with the paper they will please communicate with Mr. Mitchell. Failure to do this will be considered equivalent to a resignation."

WINDOWLESS BATTLE STAGED BY OLD RIVALS

Recent Snowfall Calls Forth Faculty Spirit in Medicine And School

Varsity's oldest rivals took advantage of the heavy snowfall to wage a three-round battle on Thursday morning. For a time it looked as though there was a second snow storm on the road between the Medical Building and the "Little red school house". Much of the ammunition missed the foe to strike the startled co-ed on her way to the library. For "Epi-kiss" vied with "Epistaxis" for a hearing, while interested non-combatants cheered from the side-lines. In the absence of broken windows, the customary method of keeping score was lacking, therefore we must assume that the result was a tie.

REPORT PREPARED ON THE IMMIGRATION OF MED GRADUATES

G. Harvey Agnew, M.D., Makes Serious Study Of This Problem

MANY LEAVE CANADA

Thirty-Seven Per Cent. of The Graduates Take Internship In the States

In a recent report G. Harvey Agnew, M.D. (Tor.), Secretary, Department of Hospital Service, Canadian Medical Association, has made a serious attempt to determine the question of emigrating medical graduates.

The report from the University of Toronto shows that for the last seven years, out of 1,102 graduates, 408, or 37 per cent, took their internships in the United States. The peak was in 1924, when 88 out of 210, or 42 per cent, crossed over to American hospitals. Exactly how many of these returned at a later date to practice in Canada was not given, but one may guess that it was assuredly not a majority.

In many respects Canada has a unique position in relation to the States. The ancient Greeks supplied the virility of the Romans and the subsequent Greeks the Roman culture. Canada has supplied the States with many of her greatest men. Many of us believe that the success of our graduates lies in a better educational program, but there is more to it than that. The Americans are in possession of better medical plants than ours in many instances yet we see our graduates displacing theirs. The thought comes to one that though they may gild a horse it is not a golden animal. The success of our Meds across the line lies in other reasons. The life of the American medical student with its constant seven days a week study, its complete absence for at least four years of any athletic, or University social life or recreation may, one can not help but feel, so wear down the future ambitions of the tyros that upon graduation they have little desire to do other than cast aside their books, and break through the bars of social restrictions. The students leading such an academic life miss the calmness, the salubrity, the joy, and zest of the Canadian medics, and later fail to withstand the whole-hearted attacks of our graduates in their desire to "get ahead."

That as time passes our graduates will remain here we are sure. The excellent work Dr. Agnew is doing in educating Canadian medical students with the splendid opportunities to be found in Canadian hospitals will soon reverse the emigration to even an immigration.

VICTORIA COLLEGE GRADUATING CLASS CONTEMPLATE INSURANCE SCHEME

MUSEUM ACQUIRES HISTORIC GOBLT

Viking Sword, Greek Gems, And Etruscan Bronze Among Collection

DESCRIBED IN BULLETIN

The Department of University Extension has just issued its eighth bulletin on articles that are to be seen in the Royal Ontario Museum of Archaeology. Among the more recent acquisitions to the museum are: a coconut goblit which at one time belonged to the parents of Flora MacDonald, the Jacobite heroine who assisted Prince Charles Edward in his escape after Culloden by disguising him as her maid; A Roman-British collection of Pottery of the first four centuries A.D.; bowls of Samian ware and Roman-British brooches are described.

There is an important article on Chinese bronze by Right Rev. W. C. W. White, D.D., Bishop of Honan. A Viking sword which was found during an excavation at Vauxhall Bridge, London, is illustrated and described as are also some Minoan and Greek gems, Etruscan bronze mirror and an inscribed wooden writing tablet.

This bulletin is particularly well illustrated. Rarely do engravings show up as nicely as they do here. The bulletin is distributed to museums in all parts of the civilized world and anyone may have a copy free.

MANY POSITIONS OPEN AT CHINESE UNIVERSITY

Information May be Had At Registrar's Office In Simcoe Hall

Lingnan University, Canton, China, has a good many appointments which it is desired to fill at an early date.

Among these are the Principals of the School for English-speaking children; two teachers in modern languages for their High School; Head of the Department of Biology in the University; an instructor in Accountancy; a teacher in Household Arts; in French and German; vocal and instrumental music; a geneticist and a pathologist for the Department of Sericulture; a lecturer in Animal Husbandry and a veterinarian in the College of Agriculture; a librarian; teachers of Physical Culture, and a representative of the University in America, one who would promote the interests of the University among those seeking to advance education in China. Information may be had at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

Large Number Entries Received For C.O.T.C. Examinations

Considerably more than a hundred entries have been received at C.O.T.C. Headquarters for the examinations which will be held in March.

These examinations are held by the Department of National Defence and are for C.O.T.C. certificates of qualification in the Artillery, Infantry, and Medical branches of the Militia. These certificates exempt their holders from examination for commissioned rank.

Maturing Policies Would be Used For Educational Purposes

A SIGNIFICANT MOVE

Same Plan Has Worked Successfully Thus Far, With Class of '25

The graduating class of Victoria College are contemplating a course of action significant in the history of the College. The plan if carried out will mean that a number of students in the class will pledge themselves to pay five dollars each into a fund. With this money insurance policies maturing in twenty years time will be taken out on certain members of the class. This would provide a sum of several thousand dollars at the end of this period, which would be available for educational purposes in connection with Victoria College. The plan was explained by Mr. J. G. Cooper, the president of the fourth year class of Victoria, is that a vote will then be taken as to the exact use to which the fund will then be put. This might be he pointed out, for scholarships, buildings purposes or whatever other project the members of the class then feel to be the most beneficial.

At a recent meeting of the class, Mr. Ralph Mills, a graduate of Victoria '25, addressed the members of the senior year and undertook to explain how his year had initiated such a movement. Thus far the plan has worked most successfully, only one member failing to make his yearly contribution. The class of '28 discussed following the lead of the '25 class but the plan was voted down. If the present graduating class decide in its favour it will be the only year since '25 to follow suit.

Mr. Cooper, who interviewed by the Varsity, pointed out that the decision of the class at its meeting was to make a personal canvass of the members of the year. If sixty per cent of the members agree to the plan, it will be put into operation, the first contributions being called for next year. It is thought this would be a substantial proof of '25's policy and will probably be taken up by successive graduating classes.

Daffydil Night in Hart House For First Time in Its History

For the first time in history the Daffydil Performance sponsored by the Medical Society is to be held in Hart House Theatre on February 21 and 22 have been set as the dates for the event this year.

Following much adverse criticism of last year's show the Daffydil Committee headed by G. H. Hutton, have decided on this change in an effort to improve the standard of the performance. It is argued that better stage facilities will assist greatly in this regard. The committee is being assisted further by Mr. Strong of the theatre who will act in an advisory capacity to each year's skit.

Each year has been practicing faithfully since New Years in an attempt to produce a humorous show of the first class. The Medical women, as usual, are working hard under the direction of Miss Rosamund McCullough, who has had considerable experience in dramatics.

SECOND GATHERING OF THE STUDENTS

its efforts since the date of its inception. The N.F.C.U.S. is bilingual, French and English being the official means of communication.

The Federation has drafted a complete schedule of inter-university debating in Canada, covering the years 1929-1930-1931.

It is through this scheme that the Federation hopes to more effectively serve the fundamental purpose for which it was formed. At the same time, this scheme offers an opportunity to Canadian Students, without extra expense to themselves, to receive a year's study at a university in another part of Canada.

Briefly speaking, the Exchange Scheme provides that each university, through its Selection Committee (composed of a member of the local Students' Council and a member of the Faculty), may nominate any number of students not exceeding one per cent of the total student enrolment.

These students may take a year's work at any university in another "division." The only prerequisite is that the student desiring to take advantage of the scheme must have completed at least two years of study. For the purpose of the scheme, the Canadian Universities are placed in four different "divisions," namely, the Western Group (the University of British Columbia); the Middle West Group (Universities of Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba); the Central Group (University of Toronto, Western Ontario, Ontario Agricultural College, Queens, McMaster, University of Montreal, McGill, Macdonald College, and Bishop's University); and the Maritime Group (University of New Brunswick, Dalhousie, Acadia, Mount Allison and St. Francis Xavier).

Subject to but few exceptions, students are only permitted to exchange between the various "divisions." Through the co-operation of the various university authorities in promoting this national scheme, it is provided that the exchange scholars are exempt from tuition fees, which, except in extreme cases, is more than sufficient compensation for the railway fare involved in effecting the exchange.

A permanent Commission has been set up by the N.F.C.U.S. for the purpose of acting as a Central Bureau where information concerning any branch of student activity may be gained by individual members. This Commission also acts as a "clearing house" for various questions involving student government in all its branches. At the same time, a period is set aside at each Annual Conference, in order that delegates may discuss with one another any difficulties their local student organization may be having.

Through the N.F.C.U.S. and its representatives at various universities, it has been possible to receive and entertain parties of students visiting this continent from other countries. In the summer of 1928, a party of some fifteen Oxford students were entertained at the University of Toronto and at McGill University. A party of forty South African men and women students were also entertained for a week at these two centres.

ART AND SCIENCE SEPARATE STRESSED ARTHUR LISMER

Addresses Medettes Yesterday Following Tea in Common Room

Thursday afternoon between 5 and 6 the Medettes had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Arthur Lismer in the girls' common room. After tea and biscuits—the Medettes benefiting by courses in biochemistry and pediatrics chose arrowroot—Mr. Lismer gave a fascinating talk. He stressed particularly the interrelation of art and science, mentioning the idea that art and science were completely separate, he pointed out that the student today realizes that the scientist and artist are working together for the ultimate fulfillment of a common purpose. Mr. Lismer recommended that all medical students should study art before entering college not so much to improve their drawings of bacteria and bones but toward a greater appreciation of the union of science and art.

EDITOR OF 'GOBLIN' AND OTHER SPEAKERS GIVE LECTURE COURSE

Sixth Annual Lecture Series
On Journalism Announced
To-day

BEGINS MONDAY 18th

Morley Callaghan is Second
On the Extensive Programme

With J. E. McDougall, managing-editor of "Goblin", as opening speaker, the Sixth Annual Lecture Course in Journalism held under the auspices of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, with the co-operation of the Department of Extension and Publicity of the University of Toronto, will commence next Monday, February 18, and continue through five lectures until March 4. Morley Callaghan, short story writer and novelist; R. E. Knowles of the "Toronto Star"; Miss B. Sanders, editor of "Business Woman"; and Hon. W. A. Buchanan, publisher of the "Lethbridge (Alberta) Daily Herald", along with Mr. McDougall make up the list of speakers.

"Journalism as seen by a Humorist" is Mr. McDougall's subject. Mr. McDougall is particularly qualified to speak on the general topic of both newspaper work and magazine writing, as he has had ample experience in both fields. His short stories are well known and this spring he expects to publish a complete novel. Morley Callaghan, who will speak on "The Short Story" on Wednesday afternoon, February 20, is one of the rising stars among Canadian novelists. The publication last fall of his novel "Strange Fugitive" brought him instant recognition not only in Canada but in the United States as well. He is actively engaged at the present time in writing a second novel, besides contributing the occasional short story to "Scribner's" magazine. His theories on writing in general and Canadian literature in particular are to say the least (Continued on page 4)

TAG DAY ON CAMPUS ARRANGED FOR I.S.S.

Four University Organizations Unite on Behalf of European Students

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 13th

On Wednesday, February 13th, the Student Christian Association, the Students' Administrative Council, the International Students' Association, and the Menorah Society are uniting in a Tag Day on behalf of International Student Service, and all students are appealed to for support.

The I.S.S. is the successor of the organization known as European Student Relief, which came to the help of European students in the immediate post-war years, when the student class had been entirely overlooked by every other relief organization. The I.S.S. has extended its scope, and to-day is assisting not only European students, irrespective of race and creed, but Russian emigrant students, and is administering relief in Africa. Besides offering material help, it is doing a great deal by its researches not only into conditions of student life but into situations that confront students on graduation. It is also, by the organization of conferences, fostering international goodwill and fellowship.

Well Known Blue and White Debater Tours Europe on Mechanical Steed

Osgoode Hall Debaters Victors
Over Western Canadian Team

With true legal outlook, Osgoode Hall debaters claimed that censorship nipped in the bud the idea before it could be translated into an indictable offence, and succeeded in convincing their audience of this point of view in their debate with representatives of the Universities of Western Canada Friday night. The subject was "Resolved that all forms of censorship should be abolished", and the Osgoode Hall team won with the negative side by a vote of 73-37.

CHRISTIAN MARRIAGE IS TOPIC OF LECTURE

Dr. Thomas Addresses Gathering of Women Students at Women's Union

MARRIAGE A LIFE JOB

"Christian marriage is a sacrament not a contract," stated Dr. Thomas on Friday when he delivered a lecture to a large gathering of women students at the Union. He went on to say that the only time Christ gave a positive answer concerning right and wrong was in speaking of this subject. Nothing is relinquished in marriage, but it is fundamental to the Christian idea that the man and woman become a joint personality. This is not easy, but it leads to a richer life. Dr. Thomas added that for one generation to impose its ideas on another is spiritual murder. He divided married life into three parts, for each of which adjustments are needed. There is first the adjustment to a joint life needed immediately after marriage; then comes the rearing of children; and thirdly there is readjustment needed when the children marry.

Dr. Thomas urged his audience not to squander opportunities on transient affairs, but to "Keep something for Shakespeare". In concluding he claimed that marriage was eminently worth while, a glorious adventure and a real life job.

Loretto College "At-Home"

Members are asked to fill in the enclosed addressed card and return it to the Warden's office as soon as possible.

Letter From Mel Kenny Proves Interesting and Instructive to Admirers of Travel

Touring Europe with a motorbike as sole companion, Mel Kenny, recent graduate of the University of Toronto, is finding the experience as interesting as it is novel. A letter written to Mr. Conn, editor of the University Monthly and which runs in this month's edition follows. Previous to setting out on this trip Mr. Kenny toured the British Isles as a member of the Canadian Student Debating Team, losing but two debates in the series.

Hotel Terminus,
Avignon, France,
January 13.

Dear Ken:

I don't know whether you are interested in my wanderings or not, but I have a spare minute or so and a spirit inclined toward writing a letter. I am not aware whether any graduate of the University has ever made a motorcycle tour through Central Europe in the winter time, so I have no precedent to guide me in mine, but I can assure you that as a novel and interesting way to see Europe, it cannot be surpassed. There is no danger of monotony, for if the scenery palls or the roads become too good, something is bound to happen to the motorbike. I call my means of transportation "the girl friend", so I will always have feminine companionship and can speak of the expedition as "we"—you know, like Lindbergh.

Our debating trip was interesting, enjoyable and I think successful in every way. We certainly saw England and Scotland as few people have. Finished up with three great weeks in London—seeing shows mostly.

I bought this motorbike in London and drove to Southampton the day after Christmas, then across to Havre and on to Paris. I spent about ten days in Paris doing things most people do in Paris. While there I saw quite a bit of M. de W. Woodside '28 and Rasminsky '28, also Irving '26, all of whom are in England. Of course when at Oxford and Cambridge I hobbled with Plumtree, Beer, Lazier, Escott, Reid, Lyndon Smith, Bruce Davis, Dossie, Walker, Stacey and McDougall. It was great renewing acquaintances.

On January 5, I left Paris for the south. I went from Paris to Versailles, Chartres, Tours, Poitiers, Angoulême and Bordeaux, seeing the sights en route. It was desperately cold, with snow flying, but I thanked God for my Canadian up-bringing and (Continued on page 4)

A PEACEFUL CHINA IS RECENT OUTCOME OF NEW GOVERNMENT

Dr. David Yui Lectures Before Large Audience in Convocation Hall

CHINA NOW UNIFIED

Education for Women, Religious Toleration and Monogamy, New Policy

Civil war has finally ceased in China stated Dr. David Yui before a large audience in Convocation Hall last night. Representing the Y.M.C.A. and National Chamber of Commerce of China, the speaker came to Toronto under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. and the local Student Christian Movement. He attributed the end of the fifteen years of strife in his country to the success of the new Nationalist government, which is taking military and financial power out of the hands of the local war-lords and concentrating all administration at Nanking, the new capital.

Dr. Yui placed stress on present-day road-building activity as a strong factor in the economic development of the "New China." The labouring and agricultural classes comprise over 80 per cent of the people, and most of these are living below the subsistence line. It is the aim of the new government to utilize the natural resources of the country and organize production so that all its workers shall have a simple but abundant living. Roads and railways will help to bring this about.

China is now unified, said Dr. Yui, with the exception of sections lying in the province of Shantung and in Manchuria, where Japanese troops retain control. They guard the railway from Sintai to Tsinan, and a sector on the Tientsin-Pukow line, and prevent their free use by the Chinese. Dr. Yui also mentioned the strong Japanese influence in Manchuria, where General Chang Hsueh-liang is said to have been warned that he would meet the same fate as his father if he dared to fly the Chinese Nationalist flag. The late Marshal Chang came to his death by assassination when his train was mysteriously bombed last year. Dr. Yui was glad to say however that the Nationalist flag is now flying all over Manchuria.

The government newly established at Nanking will follow a definite policy in its effort to build what Dr. Yui called the "New China." He included (Continued on page 4)

INDIAN AUTHORITY TO GIVE ADDRESS

Mr. C. F. Andrews Has Been A Resident of India For Twenty-five Years

STUDENTS ARE INVITED

Mr. C. F. Andrews, "The foremost friend amongst Westerners of the people of India", will address a meeting of students on India in Trinity College on Tuesday, at 5 o'clock.

A close friend of Gandhi and Tagore, Mr. Andrews, since he went to India twenty-five years ago, has devoted his life to the service of the Indian people. He paid two visits to South Africa and one to the Fiji Islands on behalf of the Indians in those places. No man knows the Indian mind and the political and social situation in India better than he.

All students are cordially invited. The meeting is under the auspices of the Student Christian Association.

REGARDING BABIES

Doctors say that healthy babies should be a delicate pink. The next door neighbour's got one who's a robust yell.

Use "Big Gym" Instead of Great Hall for Successful University College Function

There was a hush, the conductor motioned his men to attention and suddenly the Arts Ball was in full swing once more. Dancing on Friday last was in the "Big Gym" instead of in Great Hall as in former years. The decorations were unique, consisting of numerous bizarre figures on the walls, with here and there a Union Jack to proclaim the fact that we are still British, and proud of it. The lighting effects were excellent, although many were heard to suggest that in favour of those of the fair sex who still call on the decorator to help Mother Nature, the green lights might be omitted in future. The swimming pool, with its special lighting was as usual, a favourite sitting-out place. It is to be regretted that the necessity of spoiling its charm with unsightly "No Smoking" posters still exists. However, better "No Smoking" than "No Sitting". Supper, provided in Great Hall, was a decided success. And last but not least, the orchestra, made the assembled multitudes forget their woes and trod-on toes with its peppy numbers. The patronesses were, Lady Falconer, Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Kirkwood, Mrs. McAndrew, Mrs. Cochrane and Mrs. Green.

HART HOUSE TO HEAR PROFESSOR CURRELLY

Accepts Invitation of Sketch Committee to Give Informal Talk

TO-MORROW EVENING

Professor C. T. Currelly, the well known director of the Archaeological Section of the Royal Ontario Museum, has accepted the invitation of the Sketch Committee to speak informally in the Sketch Room at 8.15 p.m. to-morrow (Tuesday) evening, 12th February.

The general subject on which Dr. Currelly will speak is "Sketching." His idea is to show that it is important for everyone to "swing a pencil" and he proposes to illustrate his remarks by showing sketches collected on his various expeditions in Europe. His wide experience in art of all kinds will undoubtedly make what he has to say of unique interest.

The Committee desire it to be clearly understood that there is no such thing in Hart House as an exclusive Sketch Club but all activities of the Sketch Room are open to members of Hart House in general. They therefore hope that any members (undergraduate, graduate or faculty) who are interested will feel free to be present on Tuesday evening next.

STADIUM INTRODUCTION COMMITTEE

The Introduction Committee of the Varsity Rink is an active organization of 40 members, most of whom are on duty every night. They may be recognized by a blue and white ban worn on the upper arm. The purpose of this Committee, who are all college students, is to make people who frequent the rink acquainted thereby ensuring a good time to everyone. They will introduce anyone who wishes it, to students of other faculties. In the above picture are some of the members of the committee. They are from LEFT to RIGHT: John Hawk, Jack Walkinshaw, C. A. IS THERE A 'SITUATION'?

Following a major change in the staff of "The Varsity" on Wednesday the 6th inst., this paper suspended publication for twenty-four hours and in its place a News Bulletin was issued. On Friday regular publication again resumed and will be continued. The reasons for the dismissal of the editor of this paper have been given in a resumé of his relations with the publishers of "The Varsity" throughout the whole period of his term of office.

Since February 6th we have received three letters with reference to this paper. They appear in our correspondence columns to-day. Though not agreeing with all the thoughts expressed by any of these correspondents we commend them all to the attention of our readers.

We thank these undergraduates for their contributions. To these and to others who may see fit to write us we wish to point out that the events, covering a period of months, which led to the dismissal of the recent editor of "The Varsity" have been cleverly obscured by the centering of attention upon an entirely new problem, that of student self-government. This move has succeeded in leaving with the superficial observer the impression that former members of the staff have been made martyrs to a cause, in which they have suddenly found a convenient interest.

"The Varsity" claims to be the "undergraduate daily". As such its duty is to represent, and to work for, the best interests of the whole student body. How near "The Varsity" before Wednesday the 6th, came to fulfilling this obligation or to failing to do so, is the true measure of the success or failure of its staff, as it will also be the measure of the success or failure of the present staff.

The incidents of the past few days are merely incidents. They have not changed the obligation of the staff of "The Varsity" to the student body nor have they created a new "situation". With this editorial and the correspondence referred to above, they are closed as far as the columns of this paper are concerned.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Sorry You Think So

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir—

It is with some astonishment that we observe this morning's issue of the new organ of the S.A.C. still retaining the sub-title, "The Undergraduate Newspaper". While far from denying the desirability of a mouth-piece for this organization—honestly surely requires that it should not make false pretence of being undergraduate opinion.

Whatever may be our opinions of the relative justice of the two sides of the case it is obvious to all that the Varsity can no longer be said to be in any way representative of the Student Body as a whole.

A Reader's Advice

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir—
There seems to have been considerable dissatisfaction within the student body, because the S.A.C. is influenced by graduates. But surely it is better that the organization should be guided by the hands of those who have had greater experience and whose judgment is consequently more firmly moulded than that of undergraduates who tend often to be overweighing in intrusting their immature opinions upon others.

Sincerely,

S.P.S. 370 Expresses Confidence in "New" Varsity

Toronto, Feb. 8, 1929.

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir—

May a member of a Faculty that is more disposed and accustomed to do ing" than expressing opinion by spoken or written word, and is therefore seldom heard from, voice a few humble opinions on the controversy raging at present over "The Varsity".

Briefly, I wish to make the following assertions—(1) That the policy of "The Varsity" during the past year has not been in the best interests of the undergraduates it represents. By its scathing criticism and personal attacks on certain Faculties, undergraduate bodies and individuals, it has fostered discontent and ill-will amongst those so held up to ridicule, and has created false and injurious impressions among those not acquainted with the true facts.

(2) That "The Varsity" has not been truly representative of the student body as a whole, as shown by its frequent misrepresentation of student opinion, preferred selection of news items, and use of the editorial columns or personalities.

(3) That therefore the majority of undergraduates are in favour of effecting a complete change in the policy of the paper and the personnel responsible for that policy.

(4) That the majority of undergraduates, contrary to "The Varsity's" assertion, do not approve of, or indulge in, any "petting", and that opinions already voiced in its favour are mainly due to misguided attempts at appearing facetious or sophisticated.

(5) That undergraduates demand freedom of speech in their official paper, but that they also demand that this freedom should not exceed the reasonable limits imposed by common rules of decency and good taste, proper respect to superiors, just criticism and fair dealing, and true representation of facts.

May I state that while the above are merely personal opinions, I believe them to be fairly representative of the whole "average man", and I should like to see further expressions of thought on the subject, both "pro and con".

Thanking you for this valuable space, and expressing my confidence in the future of our new "Varsity",

I remain,

Yours very truly,

S.P.S. 370.

Art, Music and Drama

"Players Revue"

Our attention has been drawn to the forthcoming "Players Revue" which is to be performed in Hart House Theatre on the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week. All who have followed the fortunes of the little theatre on our campus must recall the charming productions which occurred under the regime of Bertram Forsythe, and they will remember how wide was his influence in dramatics in Toronto and indeed, throughout the country. The "Revue" will be a performance by his associates and friends, as a tribute to him, and in aid of a Memorial Fund. To quote from a letter which was given to us at the theatre: "Such an offering is, we venture to think, precisely the kind of production, association with which Bertram Forsythe would himself so much have enjoyed. Many theatre-goers in Toronto and vicinity remember his famous 'Cuckoo Clock' Revues. They were the very essence of the kindness, the grace and the humour which went to make up Bertram Forsythe himself. 'The Players' Revue,' therefore, is designed along such old familiar lines as were characteristic of Mr. Forsythe's similar productions."

Mr. Forsythe's popularity during his four years' connection with Hart House Theatre was such that it is expected that the revue will be played to capacity houses. We shall have further particulars regarding individual numbers in the Revue later in the week; all that we can say now is that with the exception of the revival of one or two numbers which proved to be popular in the "Cuckoo Clock", the bill will be entirely new.

Sunday Evening Songster

The Hart House Songster was very well attended, the music room being very comfortably filled. We say comfortably advisedly. The chetfield offered very inviting sitting accommodation and as everyone was at his ease, the vocal cords received special impetus. The songs were well chosen and seemed to find favour with the songsters. The time went by all too swiftly and everyone went away feeling refreshed.

We have it on good authority that a certain young lady was 'phoned the other night by the "down-town press", and asked for her opinion on some college fracas or other.

The next day this same young lady nearly killed yours truly when he told her who was really speaking.

DAFFY DILLS

I wandered lonely as a ghost,
Composing lengthy epigrams,
When all at once I saw a host,
A million blazing Telegrams,
The campus round they soared like bees
Fluttering and dancing in the breeze.

And oft when the old hay I pound
And mourn of life's perversity,
I hear again that crackling sound
And see in blaze "Adversity".

And then my voice with laughter crams
And soars aloft with Telegrams.

Here's our story for the boys and girls:

Once upon a time, long, long ago, there lived a Cat. And this Cat was very wise in the ways of the world.

C—C

Now one day he took his little nephew, Pussy Cat, way up into the big mountains for a picnic.

C—C

Now way up in these big mountains there lived a flock of teeny weeny goats. And they all followed one leader, whose appearance was yellow.

C—C

Well this day the leader grew tired of living, so he jumped into a deep deep well and was killed. And all the flock jumped in after him.

VARSITY DEFEATS WESTERN ONTARIO IN SATURDAY GAME

Blue and White Basketeers Outshine Londoners in Experience

SCORE IS 3-26

Mitchell, Beaton, Newman and Davey High Scorers For Varsity

The University of Toronto Senior and Intermediate Intercollegiate Basketball Teams journeyed to London on Saturday and were successful in defeating the University of Western Ontario Teams. The games were played on the New Technical Gymnasium floor, which is very much larger than the Hart House Gym.

The Senior game resulted in a Varsity win by a score of 36-26. Western surprised everybody by their good showing which was helped by the almost miraculous shots that they scored. Several of their shots were scored from between centre and the foul line by one-handed tosses which found the basket. Another time a Western man, while standing at the foul line with his back to the basket threw the ball over his head and scored. Shots like these are seldom seen more than once. The Western team, however, put up stubborn opposition, but were up against a team which had too much experience for them.

The Varsity team all turned in a good game, passing the ball around until a player was in position to shoot. This is shown by the fact that practically every man on the team scored and not any one standing out in the scoring end. The forwards and the centre divided the scoring pretty evenly between them. Capt. Mitchell stood out in the first half, scoring all his points then, but he didn't take part in very much of the second half. Half-time score 22-15 in favour of Varsity.

Western changed their style of play in the second half and played a close-checking man-for-man game which resulted in a closer score. The score for this half was 14-11 for Varsity. Ladouceur, Hind and the Hauch brothers were the stars for Western while "Mo" Mitchell, Ray Beaton, "Hello" Newman and "Europe" Davey were the high scorers for Varsity, Currie and Murray playing a strong defensive game.

The Senior line-up:—

Varsity (36)—Forwards, Mitchell (10), Beaton (10); centre, Newman (6); guards, Currie, (2), Murray, (3); alternates, Davey, (3), Sakler, (3) and Hurwitz (0).

Western (26)—Forwards, Ladouceur, (9), Myer (2); centre, Young; guards, J.P. Hauch, (5), C. Hauch, (4); alternates, Hind (6), Ward and E. Hauch.

Held Last Friday

Results of the Sweepstake Match held on Friday, Feb. 7.

Some very good shooting characterized the Sweepstake Match of the Rifle Association held on Friday last. Annesley, contesting in Group "A" showed the best form, and succeeded in making the very creditable score of 93. Keith, in Group "B" was a near second with 89.

Keen Competition

For Durnan Trophy

Keen competition, producing some excellent times marked the Swimming meet on Saturday evening last. The meet closed with Johnny Goss holding the Durnan Trophy for the coming year. The trophy is for interfaculty swimming competition. Johnny piled up a score of 5,585 points, nearly 200 ahead of the next man. Of his total points he obtained 1,000 in each of the races run on Tuesday, Feb. 5th, doing the 50 yards in 24.4 seconds, and the 200 yards in 2.17 minutes.

The keenest competition on Saturday was to be found between Tommy Marsh and Eddie Sinclair, both Dents. The score will show that these two were fairly evenly matched.

On the whole the competition this year was very good, and it is hoped that the times will be duplicated when the Blue and White meet the Red and White next Friday night.

Following are the points of the contestants:—

Goss	5585
Marsh	3861
Sinclair	3797
Graham	3665
Glass	3370
Crocker	2621

Varsity Intermediates

Meet McMaster To-day

Varsity's Intermediate Hockey squad, holding the leading position in the second group of the Intercollegiate series, meets McMaster to-day in what promises to be a fast and close contest. The Blue and White scored a one goal victory. A win for the Mace will tie the group and after their recent success in the O.H.A. series they are confident they will turn the trick.

Varsity meets the Ontario Agricultural College outfit on Saturday. They should give less trouble to their championship aspirations than Jimmie Loftus' squad.

Applications for the above position will be received by the Assistant Secretary of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils, up until 6.00 p.m., Friday, February 15th, 1929, in Room 82, University College.

INTERMEDIATE SQUAD WIN FROM LONDONERS

Varsity Scores Eight Times In Twenty Minutes of First Half

BOTH TEAMS MISS FOULS

Invading London along with the Senior squad the Intermediate Basketball team secured a 22-9 victory over University of Western Ontario Saturday.

Both teams were off in their shooting in the first half, it being 7 minutes before any one scored a basket. Varsity led at half time by a score of 8-0. This is just about a record low-score for 20 minutes but was due to the strangeness of the large floor and somewhat low ceiling. Western floored a somewhat bigger team than Varsity but showed a poor shooting team. Varsity connected more regularly in the second half, working the ball in closer for their shots. Both teams missed most of their foul shots. Varsity missing 6 and Western scoring 3 out of 15.

McArthur and Gunn, two six-foot, be-spectacled, defence men were best for Western.

Riggs, Pasternak, Cock and Brady divided the scoring while Devitt, White and Cock provided a strong defence. Varsity (22)—Forwards, Riggs, (8), Foxe, (2); centre, Pasternak, (4); guards, Devitt, Cock (4); alternates, Brady (4), Stevenson, White.

Western (9)—Forwards, Rider, Lee, centre, Manners (3); guards, McArthur, Gunn, (2); alternates, Lang (2), Barbour (2) and Johnston (2).

Feminine Basketeers

Prepare for Tournament

Under the watchful eye of Coach Marion Forward, the best feminine basketball players at Varsity are hard at work in preparation for the annual intercollegiate tournament, which this year will be held at Montreal on March 1 and 2.

There are some fine prospects in the Blue and White squad, and Varsity is sure to have a strong team. The "freshie" year produced several stars and it would occasion no surprise if three or four of them are among the nine who will make the trip to Montreal.

A practice game with the Jarvis Collegiate senior team has been arranged for Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock at the J.C.I. gym, and the coach will give all the candidates a chance to show their ability.

Those who do not make the grade will go down to the intermediate squad, which will be coached by Phyllis Griffiths and Edith Blackwell, but may be taken up for the intercollegiate team if their showing warrants it. Both the senior and intermediate teams will play in the city league with Margaret Eaton and Varsity Grads as the other two entrants.

Marion Forward, who is coaching the Varsity team, graduated from Victoria College last year. She had an outstanding athletic career at U. of T., and was the best side centre that Varsity has ever had.

While she has made no decision about the team, it looks as if Dot Ker, last year's centre, will again make that position. Wilma Hazlett, first year University College girl, is showing up well in practice and may land one of the forward places, while other outstanding candidates for forward and side centre are Betty MacDonald, Louise Crouch, Bea Symons, Sally Ballard and Eleanor Sedgewick.

Betty Thomas, another first year U.C. girl, will probably be one of the guards, for her playing in the interfaculty series was sensational and she appears to be one of the best defence players to come to Varsity. Phyllis Howard has been going nicely, and another strong candidate for a defence position is Honour Tett, former Queen's University star, who this year transferred to U. of T.

Loretto McGarry, of first year St. Michael's, Alice Muckle, of fourth year Vic, and Edith Peake, of fourth

Varsity Co-ed Hockeyists In Action Friday Evening

Varsity's co-ed hockeyists will be seen in action on Friday evening at the U. of T. Arena when they tackle Queen's in the first of home-and-home games, goals to count, for the intercollegiate championship. The game will be played as a preliminary to the St. Mike's Varsity Senior O. Coch Bill Dewar has the girls in fine shape. Jat Tilston, of St. Hilda's, is again performing sensationally in goal and she pulls off remarkable saves. "Fran" Crooks, a first year St. Hilda's girl, has been doing exceptionally well in practice and will be one of the defence players, while Adele Statten, of U.C., and Gladys Martin, of St. Hilda's, are battling for the other position.

Last year's snappy forward line is intact, with Norma Bateman, of Vic, at centre; Helen Hilliard, of Vic, at right wing; and Dot Langley, of St. Hilda's, at left wing. Dot Starr and Dot James will look after the relief work, and both have been showing up well.

SMILES

A smile is quite a funny thing,
It wrinkles up your face,
And when it's gone you never find
Its secret hiding place.

But far more wonderful it is
To see what smiles can do;
You smile at one, he smiles at you,
And so one smile makes two!

He smiles at someone since you smiled,
And then that one smiles back,
And that one smiles until in truth

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 7.—By the end of the month, records will have been made and broken for the handling of flour to and from this port, handled over the lines of Canadian Pacific Railway.

The S.S. Diana is due here February 27th and will leave a few days later carrying in her hold the record of 8500 tons of flour for North China. This considerably surpasses the recent shipment of 7200 tons which was in itself at the top of the list. There will be three other sailings this month carrying 400, 650 and 7,000 tons respectively, making a total of 23,750 tons over C.P. lines shipped from Vancouver to the Orient. Altogether for the last fiscal year Canada exported $59,679,000 worth of flour. This figure it is believed will be completely blotted out for 1929 shipping.

The trading of this flour to the Orient is attributed to the fact that China, Japan and the Philippines are at present in a prosperous position and are purchasing flour either for a luxury or to give variety to their usual food. Flour exportation ranks third in Canada's exportation industries, being exceeded only by wheat and printing paper.

 kept on going. From Bordeaux to Biarritz was warmer, and I liked Biarritz so well that I loafed about there for three days.

From Biarritz to Pau and Tarbes, then into the Pyrenees by the summer road to Carcassonne. That road must be beautiful in the summer time, but as a road, is awful in winter. Where it is not obstructed by snow and ice, it is full of pot holes and covered with a greasy clay that turns a pleasure jaunt into a contest with sudden death. I narrowly averted catastrophe several times dodging about the mountain peaks, but after crawling in second gear for two days finally skidded down into Carcassonne, which, I am sure you will agree, is a most remarkable city. I longed for a steed and armour and a quest for the Holy Grail as soon as I saw the battlements of the city.

To-day I came from Carcassonne to Avignon by way of Marbonne, Montpellier and Nîmes, where I enjoyed the Roman ruins very much. I was blessed with splendid weather and excellent roads. Now for Nice and Italy.

From Italy I am going north, evading Switzerland but crossing into Germany and completing my trip through Holland and Belgium to Calais. I expect to reach home on February 28.

I see by a Varsity someone sent me that Tommy Loudon is going to have two mile intercollegiate races on the Humber. More power to his elbow. See you soon. Yours very truly, Banff, Feb. 9.—Paul Gotsas to-day won the Lake Louise-Banff 40 mile ski marathon in the remarkable time of 5 hours, 15 minutes and 17 seconds in 25 below zero temperature. 11 marathoners faced the starters at Lake Louise this morning at 7.30. Fraser, old boy class skiers of Vancouver, started first, five minutes later Billingsley, beginner class of Vancouver, left second. Then at intervals of three minutes apart the others were started. Gotsas, the winner, started 5th, with Jerstaad of Winnipeg, three minutes ahead of him. Both made Castle Mountain in exactly the same time. At this point all entrants rested for times varying from 5 to 17 minutes and were served refreshments. They checked in and out. Gotsas and Jerstaad left Castle Mountain with three minutes between them but Gotsas passed the Winnipeg lad a short distance out of Banff and led him by 4 seconds at the winning post. Gotsas thus gained three minutes and four seconds on Jerstaad.

Kengstaad of Camrose starting tenth from Lake Louise, made the first twenty miles in 2 hours, 47 seconds, then shortly after starting the last half of the race broke a pole and had the use of only one for five miles until a race attendant met him with an extra one. Despite this he made the last twenty miles in the record time of 2 hours, 30 minutes, 22 seconds to nose Jerstaad out of second place by one minute, four seconds. Camrose took first and second honours, Winnipeg third, Sandes of Burns Lake, fourth, Burstrom of Jasper got fifth, and Ensis of Vancouver sixth.

C. F. Andrews of India, Speaks
At Trinity College
To-day

Under the guidance of the S.C.A. this week is being featured as International Week at the University of Toronto. The idea of an International Week has found favour in many universities. It allows students to concentrate on many matters of international importance, and does much to broaden their outlook.

The S.C.A. has been fortunate in having for its special speakers two such outstanding men as Dr. David Yui of China and Mr. C. F. Andrews of India. The former is recognized as one of the leading men in China to-day, having held many influential posts both in State and Religious work. Mr. Andrews, an Englishman, comes as a friend of the Indians, and is trying to help us understand some of the difficult problems that face them. He is a friend of Tagore, having taught in his school for awhile, and also of Gandhi. Students may expect some stimulating thinking from him.

Not forgetting that one of the most vital ways of understanding others, is to become friends, the S.C.A. has planned a tea for all overseas students studying at the university.

The following are the events in International Week:
Sun., Feb. 10th—Dr. David Yui, in Convocation Hall.

Tues., Feb. 12th—Mr. C. F. Andrews, Trinity College, 5 p.m.

Wed., Feb. 13th—International Student Service Tag Day.

Sm., Feb. 17th—World's Day of Prayer for Students. 11 a.m.—Special Service, led by students, Victoria College Chapel. Mr. Brooks, Sec'y Can. S.C.M., Speaker. 4.30 p.m.—International Tea, Annesley Tea-Room.

Among the interesting details given in Sir Robert Falconer's latest annual report, recently issued, is a statistical table giving the occupations of the fathers of students entering the first year. "What occupational group sends most students to the University of Toronto?" is a question the answer to which few would venture to guess. Here is part of the list: Retail merchants, 148; farmers, 139; artisans, 138; clerks and salesmen, 131; manufacturers, 81; clergymen, 76; doctors, 60; teachers, 53; transportation men, 48; lawyers, 44; insurance and real estate men, 40; retired gentlemen, 36; wholesale merchants, 30; engineers, 28; contractors, 26; journalists, 21; dentists, 16.

U. of T. Athletic Association Presented With Scarf-Belt Of Famous English Boxer

A somewhat curious presentation will be made to the Athletic Association of the University of Toronto by the Hon. Wallace Nesbitt this afternoon at the same time as the Tom Gibson Memorial Cup is presented to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union.

Mr. Nesbitt's gift consists of a scarf-belt of Tom Sayers and his pictures of prize-fighters. Sayers was the heavy-weight champion of England in 1859 and was permitted to wear the Royal Arms on his scarf because he had fought before Royalty.

The belt has an interesting history. It was bought from Sayers at the end of his fights by one of his trainers, a certain Stephen Sharpe. The price was one guinea.

It was preserved with great care in the family of Sharpe, and one of his daughters embroidered in exquisite cross-stitch at the corners of the scarf the letters, S.S.W.K., standing for Stephen Sharpe, Watlington, Kent.

In 1893 it became the property of a grandson, also Stephen Sharpe. This man fought under Principal Grant of Upper Canada College in the 59th Battalion, C.E.F. About a year ago his circumstances were such that he decided to sell the scarf and Principal Grant obtained a purchaser in the Hon. Wallace Nesbitt.

Along with the scarf which is about a square yard of creamy silk with a wide border of crimson and a central circle of crimson bearing the Royal Arms in gold, are five quaint and somewhat grubby prints depicting various prize-fighters, including Sayers, in fighting pose.

A statement by Sharpe accompanies the scarf, in which he gives its history and expresses the hope that it will be framed and preserved. Following this is the naive paragraph: "My family has always had to do with prize-fighting. My uncle, Jack Martin, died as the result of a fight with bare knuckles on Common Heath, near Watlington; so did the other man."

Dr. Buchanan Will Speak In Knox Chapel To-day

Knox College Missionary Society is holding a special meeting in the College Chapel to-night, Tuesday, February 12th, at 8 p.m. Rev. Dr. J. Buchanan, Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada will be the speaker. Dr. Buchanan has a challenging story to tell after forty years of missionary work in India and a recent visit to the congregations of Western Canada. A cordial invitation is extended to all the students of the University to attend the meeting.

Three Day Retreat Planned In Newman Club Chapel

A three day spiritual retreat will be conducted in the Chapel of Newman Club, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons of this week at five-fifteen. Father Daly, well known Redemptorist priest, will preach at the exercises. A large attendance is expected. The Papal Benediction will mark the close of the retreat on Friday afternoon.

For President is Pro-

Mr. T. A. Russell, B.A., Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Board of Governors, was the speaker at the gathering of graduates in the Music Room last night following the February Graduate Dinner of Hart House. Mr. Russell's subject was the work of the Finance Committee in its relation to the operations of the University as a whole, a theme which his long association with the Board enabled him to outline in an extremely clear and interesting manner to those who were fortunate enough to be present.

He began by enumerating the revenues and expenditures of the University by Department, and showed how the latter were necessarily increased by the constantly growing numbers of the student body. Increased attendance called for more extensive plant and equipment, and Mr. Russell explained how capital expenditures were arranged and subsequently amortized over a period of years—the length of the period depending on the size and value of the work. The Finance Committee experiences the same necessity for economy as any commercial organization, and Mr. Russell showed that the carrying charges occasioned by capital investments forced these in charge to keep this class of expenditure to a minimum, in order that the greatest possible volume of funds could be devoted to the more important current expenditures rather than to overhead expenses. The University spends annually in fixed charges and maintenance, more than half a million a year, and all this money must be paid out whether or not a single professor is paid or a single student taught.

Mr. Russell referred to the satisfactory relationships established with such bodies as the Museum, the Hospital, (Continued on page 2)

SMALLEST PISTON IN SPEEDY RACING CAR

School Men Hear Talk On Uses of Aluminum
By Yale Grad

MODERN ALLOYS NOT NEW

The smallest aluminum piston ever produced was used in one of the largest and swiftest automobiles that has ever travelled the earth's surface. This was one of the interesting facts which S.P.S. men heard yesterday when Mr. Richardson of the Aluminum Company of America addressed the bi-weekly meeting of the Engineering Society.

Mr. Richardson's subject was "Aluminum and its Application to Industry". His address, illustrated with a wide variety of slides, revealed in vivid fashion the gradually widening sphere of usefulness of the light, white metal which in a few years has become familiar in every home.

The aluminum piston to which Mr. Richardson referred as the smallest ever produced was one used in the ill-fated Lockheed-Blackhawk racing car with which Frank Lockhart made a vain attempt at the world's speed record. Its diameter was an inch and a half, and its weight a few ounces. The speaker compared this with the largest aluminum piston in the world—that of a large Diesel engine, weighing four hundred pounds and two feet in diameter.

Scientists are fond of emphasizing the up-to-the-minute nature of the materials they utilize, but Mr. Richardson pointed out that many of our supposed recent discoveries are often not so recent. Duraluminum, for example, much used in modern airplane construction, was developed nearly a quarter of a century ago in almost the same form as that used to-day. This alloy he said, had about five times the strength of the aluminum that is used in the kitchen, and when used in planes was given a thin protective coating of pure aluminum which is resistant to corrosion.

Among the more interesting slides were those showing the details of construction of one of the ill-fated transatlantic planes. At the close of the meeting many questions were asked of Mr. Richardson, indicating the keen interest taken in his subject. The speaker, who is a graduate of Yale, was given the privilege of hearing a loud "Toke Oike" from his fellow students of the engineering profession.

Roller Skating Popular With The Minnesotas Co-eds

Roller skating is once more a fad among women on the campus at the University of Minnesota according to an article in the Minnesota Daily. Twenty-four pairs of roller skates were discovered in a neglected nook in the university gymnasium. The problem was talked over by the W.A.A. board and they unanimously decided that the skates should be put into use in the gymnasium during hours when the classes are not in session.

The elections to the Hart House Committees will take place on Wednesday, March 6th, this year.

All students are invited to address in West Hall of University College

Mr. Archibald Flower, for six years Mayor of Stratford-upon-Avon, will lecture in West Hall of University College on Tuesday, February 19th, at 5 p.m. The subject on which he will talk is "Stratford and the Shakesperean Players". All students are invited to this lecture, and it will be found to be of particular interest to students of English.

Mr. Flower is chairman of the Shakesperean Memorial Theatre, chairman of the governors of the Shakesperean School, and also chairman of the trustees and guardians of Shakespere's birthplace.

Photoplay Course is Given By Famous Moving Picture Stars

"Appreciation of the photoplay" is the subject of a new course now offered at the University of Southern California. The course opened two weeks ago and so far it promises to be a record-breaker as far as that university is concerned. The high registration is due to the fact that most of the high school students in and about Hollywood are looking forward to entering some phase of the motion picture industry.

The list of "professors" for the course includes, Douglas Fairbanks, Ernst Lubitsch, Milton Sills, Irving Thalberg and Clara Beranger.

EXAMINATION OR NO EXAMINATION

"Students should be studying for their examinations". With these words Premier Ferguson answered his interrogator last week when interviewed by a member of the staff of a Toronto Daily. Students should be studying and that thought is painting alarming pictures in the imaginations of more and more students daily as the closeness of the examinations become evident. To the older student it seems as if "twas ever thus." Examinations will continue to haunt the waking moments and disturb the peace of mind of prepared and unprepared students alike as long as the present system remains and human nature is as it is.

Each generation of undergraduates has raised the question of the unfairness and the undesirability of the examination system. Every four years the subject has been tossed about in editorial and correspondence columns with more or less enthusiasm as the case may be. The examination is still a vivid reality for the University student and no practical solution to the question has been offered.

Co-related with this discussion is the subject of the place of extra-curriculum activities in the educational programme of the individual. A consideration of this subject, we believe, can be of value in ascertaining the value of examinations to the system and their place in the University plan.

University students can be roughly divided into two classes; those who imagine that lectures and supplementary reading are the sum total of a University education, and those who realize that the University with its multitude of activities holds out more to the student than is contained in the curriculum. The latter, if they choose judiciously and not too freely, may enrich their minds by participation in some of the many groups and functions that are a real part of college life, and develop to a greater extent their latent talents.

Life to the large majority consists of a series of problems and critical situations, some covering a long period of time and others of short duration. The success or failure of a man in combating with these situations which confront him depends in a large measure on the training he has received up to that time and the discipline to which he has subjected himself.

Extra-curriculum activities prepare the student by broadening his outlook and enlarging his vision. Examinations, on the other hand, and the preparation for them over the period of the academic year, when coupled with a discreet participation in outside interests, offer a practical experiment in personal discipline which is invaluable. The work to be done is fairly definitely known at the beginning of the academic year. The time in which it is to be done is definitely known. The success with which the student, in his development of a "broader outlook" co-ordinates the factor of the work to be done with the limitation of the time element may not be an index of his future success but the very fact of his having made the experiment, whether he fail or not, "will in some measure prepare him better to get his footing in life when he leaves the University."

Detracts From Doorway

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir,—
With your permission, Mr. Editor, I should like to use your columns as a means of drawing the attention of the proper authorities to something which is of interest to the whole University. I refer to the large red letter and parcel box which stands in front of the main entrance to University College. This entrance has been proclaimed by all and sundry as a most beautiful, inspiring and artistic piece of handiwork. It is pointed out to visitors and friends as one of the things most worth seeing at the University. Countless photographers, and artists have endeavored to reproduce its grandeur. The memory of it lingers in the minds of all those who have passed beneath it and graduated.

Yet, why should all this beauty be marred by the presence of an ugly red letter box whose only possible use might be in point of contrast. The writer has on different occasions, had the pleasure of showing visitors from England and the United States, round the University grounds and each time that the entrance to University College has been pointed out with pride and admiration, the visitors have remarked, "Why spoil an otherwise marvellous beauty spot by the presence of a grotesque crimson letter box. If it must remain, could it not change its colour which now makes it look as though it were blushing with shame. And yet the "powers that be", at the Capital would probably frown upon an attempt to interfere with His Majesty's pet hues.

May I suggest therefore that some action be taken to locate a more favorable position for this box which will not detract from its advantages in point of utility or convenience?

Sincerely,
Ruskin

Editor, "The Varsity".

After carefully perusing to-day's edition of the postgraduate newspaper, we, the undersigned, wish to say that the following statements embody our opinion of the "Varsity" since its metamorphosis Wednesday last:

- (1) The sport page is too sweet for words.
- (2) The paper will not be entirely purified and expurgated until all mention of "Seck's" is rigidly withheld.
- (3) There is a situation.
- (4) Insect powder is a definite cure for lousy felines.

Art, Music and Drama

Sigrid Oegin

A contralto voice of amazing vitality and range, combined with a most engaging personality, immediately gained the enthusiastic applause of the audience of Sigrid Oegin at Massey Hall, last evening. We left the concert at a loss to know which we favoured more, the voice, or the personality. Certainly, it matters not what numbers Oegin chooses to sing; they are all most effective.

The opening group was arranged to display the artist's talents. The aria from "Samson et Delilah", showed marvellous tone quality; a Mozart composition displayed unbounded technique; and the encore, a Drinking Song from Dennizetti's "Lucrezia Bori", demonstrated the lighter vein of singing, at which Oegin is a past master. Her dramatic ability, of course, reached its highest point of the evening in Schubert's "Ed King", a number into which she threw herself wholeheartedly, and which naturally, caused her to show some emotion at its conclusion.

Her encores—which she most generously gave, were of the simple folksong type. Here, her pleasing manner, practically made the numbers. The first encore to the final group, was the "Gipsy Song" from "Carmen". Both the tempo and the interpretation of the numbers, were amazing. Our ideal "Carmen" had always been Mary Garden. We now are quite sure that Oegin has deeply undermined her position in our estimation. As a second encore, she gave a simple theme. The words expressed the hope that her parting would not cause too much sorrow. The theme, was one by Schubert. Toronto is indeed celebrating the centenary of Schubert this week.

"The Pennant Winning Battery Of Songland" at Shea's

Van and Schenck, "The Pennant Winning Battery of Songland," gave a splendid account of themselves this week at Shea's Hippodrome and were afforded a tremendous welcome by a more than capacity house. By far the outstanding feature of the program, they render a series of delightful duets, flawless in the twentieth century conception of harmony. One feels, however, that the choice of some of their songs is not the most discretionary one to appeal to the general hearer. Perhaps we ought to say this with a reservation, because all their songs, including three encores, were received with the utmost enthusiasm.

The other acts on the bill, including "Omer Herbert's Revue", which is a rapid-fire group of songs, toe and tap dancing. "Val Harris as the versatile sheriff of Punk County" assisted by Ann How, Ruth Warren and Company in a delightful switchboard skit, and last but by no means least a clever and dexterously executed acrobatic balancing feat by the "Angel Brothers" which verges on the miraculous, completes the vaudeville bill.

"Waterfront" with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackall is featured on the screen—a demicore movie of sea romance.

Galsworthy and Barrie

On Program at Empire

With Barrie's "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" as an appetizer, and Galsworthy's "Escape" as a main diet, the menu at the Empire this week is a tempting one. Although superficially "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals" has a sad theme, Barrie's genius saves it from becoming sloppy. We realize that the old lady is essentially happier in her grief than if her imagined son had never materialized.

The idea behind "Escape" that the only really impossible thing to escape from is one's own self, is not a very deep one philosophically speaking. It is the manner in which it is presented that is the attractive part of the play. Galsworthy doesn't hamper himself with the usual scenes and acts, but breaks his play into ten "Episodes", making an agreeable change. And what a further relief to find the attitude of the general public depicted as being essentially sporting and sympathetic toward the escaped convict, and not the usual "hounding", which some playwrights would have us believe to be the usual lot of these men.

The main brunt of the performance falls on the capable shoulders of Robert Leslie, with the remainder of the cast only appearing in the short episodes, with the exception of a few who do a double turn. For the remainder of the week, we can only hope that the property man remembers to put the flask in its allotted place, and that Frank E. Camp puts a little time on his lines in the fourth episode. For the rest, we congratulate The New Empire Company in combining these two playwrights to form such an excellent evening's entertainment.

WYCLIFFE SCORE 15-11 VICTORY

Defeat Emmanuel College In Fast Interfaculty Game

Wycliffe defeated Emmanuel by a 15-11 score in the Interfaculty Basketball series yesterday afternoon. Both teams were evenly matched and the game was lively and exciting till the final blow of the whistle.

While there was lots of action in the game the shooting of both teams was pitifully weak. At half time the score stood 9-2 in favour of Wycliffe. In the second half Emmanuel boys fought hard to overcome the lead and outscored their opponents but were unable to overcome the half time margin. For the winners Wilks and Hunt played well, Wilks using his long reach and size to break up many plays. Hunt was high scorer for his team. For the losers Beacon and Thomson played a stellar game. Final score 15-11.

The teams:—
Wycliffe—Wilks, Hunt, Perkins, Morissey, James, Cannon.
Emmanuel—Walkinshaw, Harris, Thomson, Beacon, Shepley, Danard, Wishart.

The speaker praised the President's grasp on all phases of University activity, and predicted that the time was not far distant when some sort of executive assistance would be required for him on account of the increasing duties resulting from the growth of the institution.

BLUE & WHITE MEET MCGILL IN WEEKEND TUSSLES AT HART HOUSE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

McMaster University's plucky hockey sextette went down to an overtime defeat yesterday afternoon at the University Arena at the hands of Varsity II. The Blue uncorked some nice hockey at times, and although having the edge in polish and experience, had considerable difficulty in disposing of the Bloor Street lads. The final score was 3-2.

* * * *

Sport lovers, especially those interested in swimming, water polo, and basketball, are in for a really active week-end on Friday and Saturday, when the University of Toronto plays host to the Red and White of Old McGill. The Intercollegiate swimming meet is being held on Friday evening, with water polo and basketball matches the following evening. And of course the Athletic Directorate is providing music after the games on Saturday, from ten to twelve midnight.

* * * *

Senior Intercollegiate Basketball appears to be in for a good season. No team can be judged a weak link, and all must be reckoned with before the championship will be decided. Queen's, in a last-minute rally, defeated McGill at Montreal on Saturday by two points, the score being 28-26.

* * * *

Sutton, Queen's pivot man, scored the winning basket from 20 feet out, just before the final whistle blew. Sutton and Dickie were outstanding for Queen's, while Sulverman's hard work at guard, made him the pick of the McGill team.

* * * *

Johnny Fitzpatrick, former University of Toronto track star, will compete as a member of the Canadian team in the medley relay at the Meadowbrook games in New York to-night. Johnny is carrying on in great style, and with the support of the Canadian Olympic stars, should give a good account of himself.

* * * *

"Red" Porter's Blue and White hockey squad faces the real tests of its season's career on Friday night of this week, and on Monday of next week. St. Michael's Double Blue will be Varsity's opponents on Friday at the Arena Gardens, and the rejuvenated Irishers are liable to make it very interesting for Harley, Whitehead and Company. We are not looking for a defeat for the Blue, but this hockey game is a queer one at times; you never can tell.

* * * *

The Monday night engagement at Kingston is sure to be the caviar as far as the O.H.A. season goes. In the last clash on the frozen reaches of the eastern metropolis, the Tricolored clan crashed through for a victory over the Portierites. And since revenge is sweet, and the Kingstonians are old rivals of the "T", there should be a bitter battle between the rival sextettes. Snyder and Co. are deserving of all the support the students can give them.

* * * *

University of Toronto students have every reason to feel confident that "Red" Porter's squad will finish in the play-offs at the end of the season. Judging by the form displayed in recent games, if the sextette does not finish in front or a close second, there will be an Ethiopian in the woodpile. The boys have shown the effects of good coaching and should win the O.H.A. Championship and go a long way in the race for the Allan Cup. They deserve every last bit of support that the men and women of the University can give them.

Blue and White Tank Crew Meets Central "Y" To-night

To-night the University swimming team meets the team of Central Y.M.C.A. at the Central "Y" tank in a joust between two well-conditioned teams. The 300-yard relay will not be included in the line-up of events but its place will be taken by the quarter-mile event. The other usual events will be on the program.

The meet will prove a good workout for the teams, as each is faced with strenuous competition over the week-end. The Blue and White squad will be at home to McGill, while the Central "Y" outfit will visit Detroit and the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Senior Dents Win First Tilt of Baseball Series

Winning their first game of the Interfaculty Baseball series from Sr. Meds yesterday, by an 11-3 score, Sr. Dents appear headed the right way.

Last year's defeat in the finals by S.P.S. was the first time the Interfaculty championship has strayed from Dents in seven years. The team is out to try and regain their laurels.

The line-up:
Sr. Meds—Hurwitz, McFadyen, Turner, Baxter, Slavinsky, Doyle, Costantino, Perry.

Sr. Dents—Somerville, O'Brien, Marshall, Hind, Butler, Brown, Quick, Zacheim, Mehaffey.

Umpires—Ward and Shields, S.P.S. Scorer—N. S. Murray.

Many a frosh-soph battle ended in tubbings in Taddle Pond, on whose site Hart House now stands.

MCGILL-VARSITY WEEKEND CLASH OF MERMEN BOLD

Swimming Meet on Friday Night and Water Polo on Saturday

BASKETBALL, TOO

The coming week-end will provide University students with an opportunity of seeing the greatest combination of Intercollegiate sports probably seen here for some years.

On Friday night at 8.15 p.m. the McGill and Varsity swimming teams will stage one of Canada's premier swimming events in Hart House Pool. Several Canadian records will either be equalled or lowered when such stars as the two Bourne brothers, Canadian Olympic representatives, now swimming for McGill, and the well known Varsity mermen, Goss, Sinclair and Marsh, meet in competition.

Clayton and Munroe Bourne form the foundation of the McGill team, but Mort Gibbons must also be considered. The latter's ability as a diver is remarkable and his part in the meet will be well worth seeing. Varsity's representatives in the diving will be Jack Gundy, a regular Intercollegiate veteran in this line, and Nevitt, a newcomer of promising ability.

Just at present it is hard to say what swimmers will make up the remainder of the Varsity team. Unfortunately the Blue and White has lost Leo Latchford as a doctor advised him to stay out of the water for some time to come. He is at present, however, filling the position of assistant coach quite capably.

On Saturday night two Intercollegiate events will be run off in Hart House. First at 7.30 p.m. will be an Intercollegiate Water Polo game between McGill and Varsity. From all reports Varsity should win unless McGill is pulling the dark horse stunt this year. The prospects are quite bright, however, after the recent showing of the Varsity poloists in the City League and against the renowned Montreal A.A.A. team.

Basketball in Hart House gym is the second big feature of the evening when the Red and White meets the Blue and White Senior Intercollegiate aggregation. It appears as though McGill might have a poor evening.

The basketball game follows immediately after the water polo and is scheduled for 8.30 p.m. After this feature there is music from 10-12 p.m.

No tickets are being issued for the swimming meet on Friday night but admission will be taken at the door.

Tickets will be issued for Saturday night, however. The price, one ticket, covers everything.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 10—Saturday at noon saw the completion of the stonework and most of the partitioning of the new C.P.R. hotel here, the Royal York, tallest and largest hotel in the British Empire, and there now only remains the plastering, wiring and furnishing of the great banquet and convention halls, ball rooms, dining and reception rooms, corridors and more than one thousand bedrooms and bathrooms before this vast hostelry is opened to the public on June 1. But the outershell is finished right up to the last square foot of copper for the roof of the thirty-story building, and the erection of the last of the three flag poles placed on the roof of the mezzanine floor. The last piece of stone has been let into the turrets of the central tower, 400 feet above street level, and the hotel stands as a massive structure of grey stone facing out over Lake Ontario, the tallest building in the city. On Saturday, therefore, less than sixteen months after excavation work started on what was almost a whole city block, this great building as far as bricks and mortar is concerned, was finished.

Work on the plain furnishings and woodwork is proceeding at a rapid rate, and those in charge are assured that the hotel, completed inside and out, will be ready for the interior decorators in less than three months. A hospital, kindergartens, convention halls of various sizes, a roof garden, grills, restaurants and stores are also contained in this monster building in addition to specially equipped radio service and the erection of the five-manual Casvan organ in the organ loft of the convention hall. And finally the rear of the mezzanine floor has been strengthened to take the supports necessary for an additional tower when such is required in the future.

CANADIAN IDEAS IN JAPAN

When K. Hashima, superintendent of rolling stock and machinery of the Sapporo District, Japanese Government Railways, was in Canada recently studying the operations of the Canadian National Railways for the benefit of the people of his own country, he was particularly interested in the methods used in clearing snow from the track. In a letter to W. A. Kingsland, general manager of the National system's western region, Mr. Hashima expressed his thanks for the co-operation given him by A. H. Eager, general superintendent, motive power and car equipment, Winnipeg, and A. McCowan, assistant general superintendent, car equipment. He went on to describe a new type of snow-fighting machine which he had devised from ideas given him by K. D. McLay, bridge and building master of the Canadian National Railways, Calgary division. The machine, which is the most successful of all the types tried on the Japanese railways, has been named McLay. The plow is seen here in action and the inset is a photograph of Mr. McLay.—Adv.

"Wings" in Second Week at

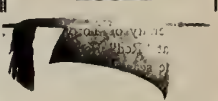

The Uptown Theatre

Paramount's movie-tone edition of "Wings" after two successful weeks at the Uptown continues on to its third week at that theatre. "Wings" was an outstanding event in the movie year when it first appeared as a Silent Drama. Movie-tone has maintained all the stirring action and superb air photography of the original production as well as enlarging its appeal by the use of the greater sound realities which movie-tone allows.

An interesting story of the production of "Wings" has recently been let out from the studios. Dick Grace, who engineered most of the "crashes" in "Wings" suffered a fractured neck in one of the worst of these. His life was saved by the use of a special brace for the injured part. Grace is also a survivor of the disastrous San Francisco-Honolulu air race.

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir,—

As two interested undergraduate readers of "The Varsity", we would like to take this opportunity of congratulating the new editorial staff on their good work in the recent emergency.

I feel that the positions of the resigning staff have been most competently filled, and as a result we found to-day's issue quite as interesting (if not more so) than any this year.

We extend our deepest sympathy to the Cat in the recent bereavement of one of his valuable nine lives, but we hope the other eight will live to a ripe old age.

GOODWILL LOAN FUND ESTABLISHED

HOPES TO CULTIVATE STUDENT GOODWILL AMONG THE AMERICAS

Established for Students by Peter E. Alliot of New Jersey

AT ANTIOCH COLLEGE

Practical Instruction Is Combined With The Theoretical

A student loan fund to promote international good will among the young men and women of Canada, the United States, and Spanish America has been established by Mr. Peter E. Alliot of New Jersey. Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, has been chosen as the institution where students can take advantage of this fund.

Canadian students have been attracted to Antioch because of its novel plan for combining in a single organized program a liberal education, training for a calling, and practical experience in real life. Half the students study at college while the other half work in industry.

In this part-time work, students are placed in carefully selected positions of unusual educational value in business, journalism, education, engineering, home-economics, scientific research, and many other fields. Two students alternate on each job in shifts of five or ten weeks. Antioch students are engaged in about two hundred firms in sixteen different states. This part-time work, under experienced direction, helps young people to determine their callings, and to prepare for them. It also enables the students to pay about half the cost of a college education.

Information about the loan fund can be had by writing directly to Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio.

CHINESE BOWLS MAKE JAPANESE MANNERS

Ten Cups From a Tea-leaf Is The Origin of Famous Chien Ware

MUSEUM'S TREASURES

Thousand year old Chinese bowls of great value which were the strange origin and guiding force of the involved etiquette which formed the character of the Japanese, have been acquired by the Royal Ontario Museum. Yesterday Mr. Curdell, curator of Archaeology, told the remarkable story to "The Varsity".

"One of the strange things in connection with our mechanical development is that a process of manufacture, if really fine, may be the origin and guiding force in something quite different—something certainly not intended or foreseen by the workers who produced the original—For example, the building of the Great Wall of China was one of the chief factors in the development of the feudal system in England, although it was so far removed geographically and in (Continued on page 4)

Impoverished Foreign Students Benefit By Proceeds of I.S.S. Gleaned in To-day's Tagging

Russian emigré students scattered over Europe, struggling to earn a living and continue their studies; Bulgarian students suffering from the devastation of the great earthquake last year; native African students, prevented from continuing their studies on account of the prolonged drought; Chinese students, impoverished by the upheavals of their government; these are some of those who are being helped by I.S.S. this year.

Direct relief is given in the form of student scholarships to the most needy cases, but the general policy of I.S.S. is to help students to help themselves; and to this end loans are made to various student bodies for the development of different self-help schemes, such as hostels and workshops.

In addition to this, I.S.S. is recognizing more and more the necessity for understanding and appreciation of the values and differences in the various cultures of the world. Small conferences of students of different races—such as the Jewish-non-Jewish; the Indian-European; and the European-Pacific area ones, are being held this year, to help towards a closer understanding.

I.S.S. is doing some splendid research work on the over-production of Intellectuals, which is a matter of great concern to all students. The openings for University graduates are limited compared to the number of graduates, and adjustments will have to be made between countries.

The activities of I.S.S. are directed by a committee representative of Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish students, and of many nationalities. It is supported by the contributions of students and friends, a considerable portion of its budget being raised by appreciative individuals and governments, who in the years since the war have received aid at one time or another.

Canadian students have always given generously to I.S.S. It is one of the ways in which we can share in promoting better feeling and good-will among the peoples of the world, as well as giving some very real and necessary help. The Tag Day on Wednesday is your chance to contribute.

FRIEND OF GHANDI AND TAGORE SPEAKS OF HIS EXPERIENCES

Aspects of Life in India Spiritual and National Discussed

MR. C. F. ANDREWS

Students Hear An Excellent Address Thanks To S.C.M.

The spirit of violence which is prevalent in India to-day was characterized as a definite phase of the growing pains of the national life of that country by C. F. Andrews, speaking in Trinity library yesterday under the auspices of the Student Christian Association. Ghandi, he said, was not the agitator he was pictured in the average Western mind, but the "greatest creative genius in the moral action the world has ever known".

A close personal friend of both Ghandi and Tagore, for the past twenty-five years, Mr. Andrews told of his acquaintance with these men and pictured them as seeking toward the fulfillment of high and definite purposes in the spiritual history of the people of India.

Tagore, he suggested, was seeking a solution in the realm of imagination, since he thought that the imagination of man had been dwarfed by the over-development of other sides of his character. Imagination, Tagore felt, was the only thing to overcome race prejudice and conflict. In music and art he found no racial distinctions and he looked forward to a brotherhood of man bound by chains of imaginative culture. In this connection, Mr. Andrews told of Dame Clara (Continued on page 4)

MORE BRICKS IN NEW WOMEN'S RESIDENCE

Successful Theatre Party Fills The Empire Theatre To Capacity

CANDY SELLERS POPULAR

The women of University College arrived a few steps nearer their goal last night when their theatre night at the Empire proved to be well worth the time they have spent in ticket-selling. The plays themselves have been already revved in the columns of this paper, so we shall content ourselves with remarking in passing that they were very good. Twenty co-eds sold candy between the acts, thereby gathering in a few more shillings, and their blue and white blazers transplanted a little of the university atmosphere into the down-town theatre. The patronesses were Lady Wallace, Mrs. Kirkwood, Mrs. Malcolm Wallace and Mrs. G. S. Brett.

Do Students Acquire Architectural Peculiarities of Academic Haunts?

(By Helen MacCallum)

Unlike most of the Universities on this continent, Toronto has grown, not from a single foundation but, like the Dominion, from a confederation of existing institutions.

Founded at different periods, the colleges have impressed their individuality on their outward and visible forms, their buildings. For an amateur their peculiarities, if not always beautiful, never become monotonous. Red brick, grey stone, and walls black with aged ivy, blend into an interesting whole.

The students too, seem all one picture. Except in the first weeks of October it is impossible to tell whether a man belongs to Meds. or to School, or whether a woman attends chapel at Victoria or skips lectures at the "Godless College". Are there no visible signs of the influence of the surrounding architecture upon the students? One would imagine that Meds would have round, bald heads. School men a careless, ramshackle manner. Wycliffe a square, ruddy austerity. U.C. co-eds a weakness for unnecessary ornaments.

For a four-square world of new apartment and office buildings, the University towers and turrets remind us that there is a past. For information see Baldwin House.

MEMORIAL TROPHY IS PRESENTED TO UNION BY ADVISORY BOARD

Given to Intercollegiate Union By U. of T. Athletic Body

IS PERPETUAL TROPHY

For Competition in Boxing, Wrestling And Also in Fencing

Yesterday the new "Tom Gibson Memorial Cup" was presented by the Athletic Advisory Board of the U. of T. to the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union as a perpetual trophy for championship competition in boxing, wrestling, and fencing. The cup is in memory of the late Lieut.-col. Thomas Gibson, D.S.O., C.M.G., and Dispatches, U.C., 1897, President of the Athletic Association 1896-97, who is one of the "great men" in the history of University athletics. Throughout his undergraduate career and until his untimely death in 1925, Colonel Gibson was one of the warmest friends and heartiest supporters of all forms of athletics carried on by the University.

The trophy which will be presented by Dr. John McCollum, Chairman of the Advisory Board, to Professor M. A. McKenzie, representing the C.I.A.U., is one of the most artistic as well as appropriate of all the Intercollegiate cups. Standing on a small, square base of ebony, the cup is shaped like a large goblet with open mouth and two plain handles. There is none of the ornamentation which characterizes so many of the trophies, the sole decoration being a wreath of maple leaves bearing the coats-of-arms of McGill, Toronto and Queen's in colored enamel.

A miniature of the cup has been made and will be presented to Mrs. Gibson by the Advisory Board as a mark of the esteem in which her husband was held by his fellow-members.

McCaul Street was named after Dr. McCaul, the first principal of the University.

MORE INVESTIGATIONS IS STUDENT RUMOUR AFTER STATEMENT

Secret Committee Sees President Sir Robert Falconer Yesterday

NAMES ARE WITHHELD

President Promises To Give Matter Concerned His Attention

A committee of students claiming to represent only themselves issued a statement to "The Varsity" yesterday in which they assert that they were received by President Falconer yesterday afternoon and submitted to him a memorandum on some problem or other. Whether the committee were interested in investigating some university wrong or in forming the rumoured new Gleu Club could not be determined by the statement. It claims, however, that "The president promised to consider the matters in which this committee was interested."

At press time the Varsity had not been able to get in touch with Sir Robert Falconer on the matter. The committee who issued the statement to the Varsity desire that their names remain entirely secret for the time being. The statement as received by this paper follows:—

"A Non-partisan Committee has been formed, and it was received by President Falconer this afternoon. The Committee is completely unofficial and its own members represent only themselves, although they come from every faculty. The President received the Committee very graciously and submitted a memorandum. The President promised to consider the matters in which this committee was interested."

Camera and Squash Committee Elected on Thursday Seventh

The elections for the Standing Committees of Hart House, the House, the Hall, Library, Music, Billiard and Sketch Committees, will take place by ballot in Hart House on Wednesday, 6th March. Nominations will be accepted from 9 a.m. on Tuesday next, 19th February, until nominations close at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, 27th February. Nomination forms, which must be filled out with the name, address and signature of the nominee, as well as those of his mover and seconder, can be obtained at the Warden's Office any time after Monday morning, 18th February. Names will appear on the ballot paper in order of the receipt of nominations at the Warden's Office.

Nominations for the Camera and Squash Raquets Committees will be received within the same period of time as those for the other committees, and the elections for these committees will be held at a meeting of all those interested in the activities of these two committees in Hart House at 5 p.m. on Thursday, 7th March. The elections will be held on the same system this year as last. AN EXPLANATION

It was stated in yesterday's edition of the Daily Mail and Empire that a letter, signed by forty students had been handed to "The Varsity" on Sunday, by a Victoria College undergraduate. The letter presumably was of a controversial nature. The article might leave the intimation that we closed the columns of "The Varsity" to the discussion of what we termed a "closed incident", merely for the purpose of avoiding the necessity of uncovering to student gaze, the afore-mentioned letter.

We have never received any letter, bearing a large number of signatures either before or since our pronouncement of Monday. If such a letter was written and signed, and there seems no reason to believe that it was not, it was unfortunate that knowledge of it has reached us by a roundabout means.

Further, there was no attempt whatsoever to suppress student opinion in the correspondence columns of our first few issues. The undergraduate body showed practically no interest in the whole affair as far as these columns were concerned and their apathy confirmed our opinion that not only was the matter naturally a closed incident but of the superfluity of allowing it to prolong itself through a lingering death. Hence our statement, "the incidents are closed as far as the columns of this paper are concerned".

Severe or mild, destructive or constructive, criticism of "The Varsity" is welcomed from the student body at all times. "The Varsity" is your paper and your opinions and criticisms are the only guide which your representatives may grasp in attempting to mould it along lines which will make it truly "your paper".

TO-DAY IS TAG DAY

We publish in our correspondence columns a letter from the pen of Professor Norman Mackenzie dealing with the work carried on under the Student Relief organizations. Professor Mackenzie's words give us a reliable and first-hand account of this work and picture most favourably the evident need.

Professor Mackenzie, while legal adviser to the International Labour Office of the League of Nations, was a member of the executive committee of European Student Relief and a delegate at the first conference of International Student organizations, called by the League, to meet in the Spring of 1926. His words have a direct bearing on the I.S.S. Tag Day which is being observed on the campus to-day, and they afford a strong recommendation of it to the student body.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Boosts The Tag-Day

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

While in Europe 1924-25-26 and 27, I had the opportunity of seeing for myself something of the work done by European Student Relief, and its successor International Student Service, and I can not speak too highly in its praise. It has distributed economically and efficiently (and without regard to the religion or race of the students helped) the large sums of money that it collected in Great Britain, Canada, the United States and other countries, and it has been a real factor in the reconstruction of Europe. At the present time while it is still interested in emergency relief in China and South Africa, it is primarily concerned with maintaining and furthering the friendly relations it has developed between students in the former belligerent countries; in conserving and utilizing the experience that it has gained in administering student self-help schemes; and generally in the promotion of international understanding and co-operation. I consider it a privilege to be able to recommend it to the students of the University of Toronto.

(Signed)

Norman Mackenzie.

More Improvement

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

Allow me the privilege of congratulating you on the elevating tone of your worthy S.S. paper. I was particularly impressed by the section entitled, "Whence Cometh These?" It has led me into a number of interesting conjectures as to whence could come a mind so subtle as to think that sort of thing interesting to college students. Of course, the theological mind often reverts to childishness, and that may be your condition. Particularly interesting is the fact that neither yourself, the proud possessor of a Bachelor of Arts degree, nor "himself" who has been assisting in the writing of your paper and who is supposed to be an authority on journalism, know enough about English Grammar to find the mistake in "Whence Cometh These?"

Should you ever run short of your little religious aphorisms, so unique, original, and refreshing, allow me to suggest—

"Better late than never."

"The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

"There is something rotten in the State of Denmark."

"Alas, my poor brother."

"Even your best friends won't tell you."

H. M.

(Ed. Note)—Obviously, the above letter contains an air of sarcasm, which we feel is more or less unwarranted. The advisability of the column we are not inclined to debate. Nor are we prepared to admit that our caption involves so great a breach of English Grammar as to merit our correspondent's caustic comments. "Whence Cometh These", is obviously not modern English, but is a piece of old Southern English dialect, and as such is quite correct. Another example of this can be found in the well known adage, "Manners maketh the man." However, henceforth, for the satisfaction of our correspondent, and others who might be inclined to agree with him, our feature will be captioned, "Whence Cometh These." We thank our correspondent for his suggestion.

THE BATTLE FOR LIFE

The dusk had turned to darkest night, But still went on the awful fight; Against the host just one man stood, Retreat? Not even if he could.

The blood was spattered everywhere, The shouts and tumult rent the air; On! On he fought, and rained his blows

In endless stream upon his foes.

Exhausted, tottering on his feet, But still he'd not admit defeat, And waving his weapon he kept right on Till the last muskitoe was killed or gone!

C-C

The Land of Ramping Rats Chapter I

Once upon a time, long, long ago, a great squabble broke out in the Land of Ramping Rats. The real cause of which was the editorial policy of "The Ratland Ripping Rooster."

C-C

And here is how it began. It seems that the editor of "The Ratland Ripping Rooster" was a little rat called Rufus. Now Rufus was a nice little fellow—sometimes.

C-C

There was a little rat And he wore a little hat Right in the middle of his forehead And when he was good He was very very good.

C-C

Now Rufus was always stirring up trouble in the Land of Ramping Rats. First he would tease the Roliccking Rats who lived next door. Then he would step on the tails of the Roaring Rats who lived upstairs. Then he would poke fun at the Roistering Rats across the road.

C-C

One day he went to a big, big meeting where the Reverend Rats were debating the merits of the new Limburger cheese.

C-C

Here, Rufus was, was a chance for further trouble. So he wrote an article in "The Ratland Ripping Rooster" saying that Limburger cheese was an accepted thing, that everybody ate it, and that it had come to stay.

C-C

Now the Ruling Rats grew tired of his cute but childish antics. And they threatened to deport poor Rufus from the Land of Ramping Rats.

C-C

And having carefully considered the matter, rascally Rufus decided he would just as soon not be deported. So he faithfully promised the Ruling Rats that in future he would exercise great care as to what should appear in the columns of "The Ratland Ripping Rooster."

C-C

So the Ruling Rats did not deport Rufus.

But Rufus was not dumb. (Continued from page 2)

STUDENT POVERTY IN EUROPE ONLY

Poverty among the majority of students in European universities is the only striking difference between foreign students and those in America, is the opinion of Chester S. Williams, travelling correspondent for the International Students' Federation of America.

Mr. Williams has just returned from an eight months' tour of twelve European countries. The purpose of the tour was to gain the interest of student publications in Europe in exchanging ideas on the relations of their home country with America.

"Too many students are unaware of some of the most important of the underlying causes of various events of world-wide importance," he said. "It is to make them take notice of affairs that will interest them later, and should interest them now, that this organization was formed."

Already interchanging of ideas has begun with two groups, one in England and one in the United States, to study Anglo-American relations. The underlying principles of all phases of their relations, including the need for armament, will be discussed next July at Oxford, when twenty-five students from the United States meet with twenty-five English students.

BLUE AND WHITE WINS TWELFTH INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY TITLE

SPEAKING OF SPORT

University of Toronto's senior hockey squad pulled the expected last night when they annexed the Intercollegiate title by defeating McGill on their own ice. It is a poor year for Varsity when they don't give other teams in the Union a lesson in speed and endurance.

Last night's win gave the Blue their twelfth straight Intercollegiate title in this sport. It's got beyond a habit now.

University of Montreal, when they were in the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey group, gave the Blue and White squads a run for their money on more than one occasion. They were always a dangerous threat to the Blue supremacy.

Several of the juniors managed to get into the line-up in last night's game. The team, as a whole, showed but flashes of senior calibre and the fans voted the game one of the duller of the season.

St. Mike's came back into the running in their Senior O.H.A. group when they defeated Preston last night. They are right behind Queen's now and are pressing hard for the right to meet Varsity in the group finals.

A loss last night would have meant elimination for St. Michael's and they played sixty minute hockey throughout. Despite the close score Preston only threatened seriously in the final stanza.

Whether or not the Blue and White will come through the series with the group leadership is hard to say. They are assured of a place in the play-offs, but anything may happen before the final gong is sounded.

DON SMITH WINS THE TWO MILE AT MEET

Half-mile Relay Race An Easy Win for School of Science Team

S.P.S. AND U.C. RIVALS

Don Smith of U.C. featured the indoor track meet at Hart House last night by a splendid run in the two mile. The field stayed in a bunch for nearly three-quarters of the journey with Young of Meds as the pacemaker. However, with about three laps to go Smith, who had been in second position throughout the race, started his final sprint and easily left the field behind with the exception of Nimmo of S.P.S. who gave him quite a fight in the final lap. Knight of S.P.S. just used out Seaborn, a harrier runner, at the tape. The time, 11:18, was slow because of an easy first mile.

S.P.S. won the half-mile relay by a comfortable margin over U.C., the times being 1:46 3/5 as against 1:52 for U.C. The S.P.S. team consisted of Howe, Thompson, Hymmen, Hewett, Smith, and Adams who ran in that order. Adams, the Olympic runner, and interfaculty indoor sprint champion, finished the relay with a real burst of speed.

BLUE AND WHITE WIN COLLEGE TITLE FOR TWELFTH TIME

Defeat McGill In A Listless Game at Montreal Last Night

WIN ROUND BY 9-1

Three Goal Rally In Final Period Gives Blue and White 3 to 1 Win

Defeating McGill University in a decidedly uninteresting exhibition of hockey, Varsity again annexed the Senior Intercollegiate Hockey title. The score was 3-2 for the game and 9-6 on the round.

Varsity showed a sad unfamiliarity with the large ice surface and their combination throughout the game was poor and ineffective. Despite this, they had no difficulty in holding the Red and Black to a 1-0 lead for two periods and had the game in hand throughout. A three-goal spurge at the beginning of the final period was enough to assure them of the victory.

Powers' sensational goaltending saved McGill from a worse defeat. The red defence of McTeer and Smith flopped badly at the start of the first to let the blue get three goals. Paul, Varsity's defence find, was much the best of the blue, both on the attack and the defence, and Harley sniped goals when opportunities offered, though missing many easy counters when an open net yawned in front of him. Murray Snyder had few hard shots, and was beaten on an extremely easy back-hand late in the third for McGill's second tally. The line-up:— McGill—Goal, Powers; defence, McTeer and Smith; centre, Ward, wings, Robertson and Farquharson; subs, McGillivray and Urquhart. Varsity—Goal, Snyder; defence, Whitehead and Paul; centre, McMullen; wings, Harley and Marshall; subs Murray and Statham.

ST. MIKE'S VICTORY PUTS THEM IN RACE FOR O.H.A. HONOURS

Defeat Preston 2-1 And Have Good Chance to Enter Play-off

ARE SECOND TO QUEENS

Belated Rally Fails To Overcome Even The Small Lead

Scoring a one goal win over Preston last night, St. Michael's saved themselves from elimination in their senior O.H.A. group. The score was 2-1 and the victory puts them definitely in the hunt for second place honours and the right to meet Varsity in the play-off series.

St. Michael's were decidedly the better team in the first two periods and scored both their goals in these frames. Preston came back with a rush after the second rest period but were unable to more than halve the two goal lead of their opponents.

The Summary

First Period
1. St. Mike's Garvey (Delahey) 15.00
Second Period
2. St. Mike's Lindsay 3.00

Third Period
3. Preston - Arnett (Ashley) 9.00
Final score - St. Michael's 2, Preston 1.

Penalties: First period—None. Second period—Hoffman. Third Period—Sullivan, Julke, McKay, and Talbot. Preston—Goal, Schmalz; defence, Ashley and Talbot; centre, Arnett; wings, Clark and Hoffman; subs, Julke and Beghtman. St. Michael's—Goal, Mueller; defence, McKay and Foster; centre, Lindsay; wings, Garvey and Delahey; subs, Barry and Sullivan. Referee—Jack Hemphill, Waterloo.

Royal Astronomical Society Shows Six-inch Telescope At Annual At-Home

The enormous figures with which astronomers must deal was vividly pointed out in an address by President W. E. Harper, M.A., President of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada, Toronto Branch, given to guests of the Society's annual at-home in the Physics Building of the university last night. Mr. Harper spoke on "Current Progress in Astronomy during 1928."

A home-made six-inch reflecting telescope, a microscope for measuring the radio frequencies sent out by stars millions of miles out in space and examples of the latest scientific apparatus used in astronomy were exhibited to the interested guests during the evening.

After pointing out that the outline must be fragmentary, since astronomical work extends over many years, the President's paper plunged into a recital of the stupendous figures with which star-gazers deal. The president mentioned a man who had estimated that there are 30 times 30 million stars within the comparatively small radius of 20,000 light years from the earth. Another scientist, the paper said, claimed that to account for the motions of the stars there must be somewhere a mass 800 thousand million times larger than the sun.

Color photographs by the new tricolor screen method were shown by a fourth year student, P. M. Millman.

THE EUROPEAN HARE

The Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology has just published, through the Department of University Extension, a bulletin on winter birds, which nature lovers will find most interesting and instructive. The junco, tree sparrow, horned lark, brown creeper, downy woodpecker, blue jay, chickadee, are all described and illustrated as are also three species of ducks—the old squaw, golden-eye, and merganser.

Included in this bulletin (which is distributed free to the public), is the story of the spread of the European hare in Ontario. So greatly has this species increased in Brant, Oxford, Middlesex, Kent, Bruce, and Grey that in some sections weekly hunts are arranged throughout the winter in order to keep down the numbers.

To those unfamiliar with the purposes served by a Museum the following brief outline from the introduction in this bulletin will be informative: "The modern museum which is fulfilling its function is a great educational institution for the public—a sort of people's university. It was owing to a recognition of the fact that museums were peculiarly adapted for certain phases of popular education that the movement for their establishment became so pronounced towards the close of the nineteenth century coincident with the movement for the popularization of knowledge.

CHINESE BOWLS MAKE

"Similarly a type of pottery made in China in the ninth and tenth centuries had a great effect in guiding the etiquette, self-control, and regard for ceremonial observance which characterized the people of Japan centuries later.

"During the ninth and tenth centuries in China there was a great deal of development in tea growing. As the Chinese used tea more than once, the expensive cup of tea was made with fresh leaves which were afterwards dried and used for a cheaper cup, the process being repeated as often as possible. Hence it was an important matter to find which tea could be watered most. As a result tea making contests became common.

"In some way it was discovered that a certain type of earthenware, Chien ware, showed the color of tea longer. As sight aided taste, tea brewed in bowls of this material could be watered more than in others.

"In this way Chien ware became the popular ware for these great tea contests. The craftsmen put the best that was in them into their product with splendid results, and as was common at that period a favorite bowl which had won prizes was buried in the owner's tomb.

"At the same time Japan, with that zeal for improvement which has characterized many periods of its history, had sent emissaries to China to investigate any improvements that might be adopted. Chien ware was adopted and with it some form of the tea ceremony.

As the Japanese never learned to make equally fine earthenware, the original Chinese bowls were so carefully guarded that some of them are said to have been handed down in use almost to modern times.

"Much has been written on the effect of the tea ceremony on Japanese life. Every detail was laid down by custom and every move each guest made was based upon definite precedent so that an education on exactly how to conduct oneself at tea ceremonies was the most serious part of a man's training. Everything had to be done with a precision which is said to have greatly influenced the development of Japanese character.

The bowl itself, consequently, was of tremendous importance and big prices were paid for bowls from famous potters, and thrice lucky was the family that possessed an original Chinese Chien bowl.

"When the building of railways caused many tombs to be opened a great number of the original Chien bowls were found and by a series of most happy chances were obtained by the Royal Ontario Museum. There is now exhibited a case of about 30 different types of this ware all of the examples dating from about 900 to 1,000 years after Christ.

"When found this ware sold for modest prices as the Chinese have long given up their connection with tea. However, now that their enormous significance has been realized they have gone to prices that are simply fantastic as the thousands of museums throughout the world have fought to get a specimen of this historically important ware.

BACK FROM THE BARRENS

Although he had not been out of the Barren Lands for fifteen years, George Yandle, trapper, maintained a fine sense of civilization. The first thing he did when he got to The Pas—he did not even wait until he reached Winnipeg—was buy himself a pair of spats with zippers. Yandle acted as interpreter when Count Illia Tolstoy entertained the Eskimos in the far north. The photograph, which was taken outside the Canadian National Railway station in Winnipeg, just after the trio's arrival, shows Yandle; Tolstoy, in the center; and W. J. Casel, photographer. Count Tolstoy, who is the grandson of the great Russian writer and philanthropist, headed an expedition into the Barrens to study the migration habits of the caribou, and some unusual photographs were obtained of the immense herds. After spending a day in Winnipeg, the party, together with five Eskimo dogs, worth $65 apiece, went to Timagami, the Ontario forest reserve, for further study of wild animals, and thence to New York.

MEN'S S.A.C. FAVOURS CHANGES

CONFIDENCE IS VOTED IN DISMISSAL

COUNCIL SUPPORTS JOINT EXECUTIVE IN ITS ACTIONS

Motion Passed at Open Meeting Held in Hart House

EXECUTIVE DOES NOT VOTE

Motion Arose From an Attack On Hasty Action Of Executive

Confidence in the recent action of the Joint Executive in dismissing Mr. Ryan from the position of Editor of "The Varsity" was voted by the representatives from the various colleges and faculties of the University, gathered together for the meeting of the Men Students' Administrative Council, in open session in the Lecture Room of Hart House yesterday.

The motion arose from a previous discussion during which the Joint Executive were attacked for the hasty way in which they had acted in dealing with the question. H. R. Zeigler, President of the Medical Society, rose to speak on the dismissal of Mr. Ryan and suggested that if the Joint Executive had not the confidence of the Student Councils, he felt that it would resign.

A motion of confidence was then moved by Wilson, seconded by Robertson, "That this body approves of the action taken by the Joint Executive in the recent matter concerning the dismissal of Mr. Ryan." All members in the Council holding seats also in the Joint Executive, refrained from voting on this confidence motion. The motion passed.

CHRISTIANITY AIDED INDUSTRIAL SYSTEM

Professor Fay Discusses Effect Of Religion on The Industrial System

CHURCH AIDS ECONOMICS

Professor Fay, speaking in the Music Room under the auspices of the S.C.A., introduced his subject, Christianity and the Industrial System, by tracing the rise of the industrial revolution. He touched on the Chartist Movement and the part played in it by ministers of the Baptist and Methodist Churches and the importance of religion in the movement.

He continued by outlining his conception of the part the church could play in industrialism. This was treated under the following heads: as a protection to non-mechanical values; as the champion of social invention; as a pattern for a social unit and its importance in international affairs.

The church was shown to be in a position to act as a bulwark against overriding of all else by industrial progress. It was further shown that the church has an opportunity to intervene for the best in new movements. (Continued on page 4)

Motion of Students' Council In Favour of an Investigation Receives Unanimous Approval

The following is the motion passed by the Men's Student Administrative Council setting forth their views on the present attitude towards Student Government as at present instituted in the University of Toronto:

Mr. Chairman:—
I beg to move that, "This Men Students' Administrative Council places itself on record as favouring a thorough and complete investigation, by a committee of disinterested persons, of the present form of student government, as existing in this University, with the object of recommending such improvements as might be deemed necessary. Further, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Board of Governors of this University, and the Joint Executive of the two Students' Administrative Councils."

The motion was moved by Allan H. Ferry, representative for Emmanuel College, and seconded by Carl Reinke, representing the fourth year at Victoria College. It was passed unanimously at the open meeting held in the Lecture Room of Hart House.

Part Played by Public Speech In Democracy Is Emphasized

STRESS ON CLASSICS
Ex-Finance Minister Advises Young Men on Subject of Oratory

"Democracy is like the ocean. It requires agitation to keep it pure." With the above words Sir Thomas White opened his address at the Albany Club last evening to the members of the Osgoode Hall Conservative Club and of the Macdonald-Cartier Club. Sir Thomas related how he had retired from the political arena in 1920 and had kept his silence out of fairness to those who were to succeed him.

The ex-finance minister urged his audience to take a keen interest in public life and to endeavour in every way to prepare themselves accordingly. To him, the university had opened the door to a larger intellectual life. He expressed the hope that it would do the same for the students present.

Sir Thomas said he did not intend to speak on the current topics of national life. He would leave those to the politicians of Queens Park and Parliament Hill. Rather did he intend to give some advice to young men who were entering upon a political career, as one who had been through the mill.

Taking up the subject of public speech, he said that he realized that many present were proficient at the art. In a democracy, speech plays a prominent part. "In the time of burning issues, eloquent speakers will arise to press their respective causes." In a peaceful country with only material issues there is little room for oratory." STUDENT SERVICE TAGGERS MET SPLENDID RESPONSE

Cold Weather and Falling Snow Failed to Stop Efforts To Raise Money

Amid falling snow flakes, fair taggers gallantly stuck to their posts on the University Campus yesterday and realized a total of approximately three hundred and ten dollars for the International Students Service Fund.

The students all seemed to feel the need of supporting this worthy work and everyone responded heartily. All the credit must be given to the taggers who threw themselves wholeheartedly into the task and by their winning smiles called forth many a contribution.

This money goes to help students who are less fortunate than those at Toronto. It is truly a contribution which makes itself felt to the ends of the earth.

Four years ago to-night, Mr. John E. Goodison, later Managing Editor, brought out the issue of "The Varsity" as Night Editor without the usual assistant.

To-day, Mr. Goodison lies in bed, having been compelled by ill-health to discontinue his course of study at Osgoode Hall last term and return to his home in Sarnia. "Johnnie" has this week been permitted by his doctor to resume his studies, being allowed to read two hours a day.

The staff of "The Varsity", in common with his many friends, hope that this is a step in the direction of a speedy, permanent recovery.

Dr. O. B. Jesness is Head Of Agricultural Economics Division

AUTHORITY ON SUBJECT

Speaking on "Co-operative Marketing", Dr. O. B. Jesness will address a public meeting in West Hall of University College on Tuesday, February 19th at 8.00 p.m. Dr. Jesness is Chief of the Division of Agricultural Economics of the University of Minnesota. He is a well-known authority on the Economics of Agriculture in the United States, and his lecture should prove of great value to those who are interested in such matters. His subject, "Co-operative Marketing", is of direct concern especially to Canadian Agriculturists as Canada is largely a farming country.

The public is cordially invited to attend, and it is expected that many will avail themselves next Wednesday of Dr. Jesness' knowledge of his subject.

While believing the purposes of the unofficial undergraduate committee which is known to have been working for the past few days on an investigation of Student Government, to be identical with those of the Council as expressed in a previous motion, the Men Students' Administrative Council yesterday voted against approving of the appointment of this committee to carry on the investigation on the ground that as yet not sufficient knowledge was available concerning the personnel of the committee.

The motion, "That the committee under discussion receive the approval of this body," was made by Mr. Henry, President of the University College Literary and Athletic Association and seconded by Mitchell, provisional Editor of the Varsity.

Action Not Inconsistent With The Dismissal of Editor

Belief that the S.A.C. were both willing and capable of going thoroughly into the matter of Student Government at the University and, if the student governing bodies as at present constituted were not thought satisfactory, of taking steps to have their organization altered, was expressed by President McGillivray at a meeting of the Men Students' Administrative Council at Hart House yesterday. The meeting at its outset had been moved from the Board Room to the Lecture Room on a motion of Mr. Ferry, the representative from Emmanuel College, by which it became an open meeting.

Mr. McGillivray stated that he did not consider his remarks in any way inconsistent with the action of the Joint Executive in dismissing the editor of "The Varsity". This action had been taken, he said, not because of the fact that Mr. Ryan had attacked the organization of Student Government as at present existing, but because of the manner in which it was done, of the vindictive tone of the articles, following as they did upon his general policy throughout the year.

Discussion of the relationship between the Joint Executive and "The Varsity" staff followed. Mr. Ferry attacked the Executive for the hasty manner in which they had acted in dealing with the question and voiced the opinion that they had exceeded their authority in so doing. He then presented a motion that, "This Men Students' Administrative Council places itself on record as favouring (Continued on page 4)

WHAT WILL THEY FIND?

A most fortunate thing has happened for the cause of student government in the University of Toronto. A definite interest has been created among the undergraduate body in the organization and constitution of the councils of their representatives. Such an interest is an absolute necessity if these bodies are to flourish and adapt themselves to ever-changing conditions. That such an interest has been aroused is due to two things. The dismissal of the Editor of the Varsity on the one hand, and the subsequent action of his staff undoubtedly centred interest on the question. On the other hand, the action of a small group of ten men and six women, chosen from six different colleges and faculties and working quietly and sincerely in an effort to get at the heart of the whole affair cannot be overlooked. It is now generally known that L. Gelber of University College is the chairman of this committee. Great credit must be given to Mr. Gelber and his associates for the work which they have done.

The action of the Men Students' Administrative Council last night, coupled with the interest of the students as a body in the matter makes it now seem certain that there will be an investigation. The question will then arise, What will the investigators investigate? Mr. Ryan has continually cried for an investigation. That his cry was justified seems evident by last night's meeting. For arousing the interest of the students in this he is to be sincerely thanked.

But Mr. Ryan's investigation was to be an investigation of his dismissal. That this has been confused with the question of student self-government is unfortunate. Last night's meeting definitely established that Mr. Ryan was dismissed not because he attacked student government, but because of the vindictive spirit of his articles, coupled with his action and policy throughout the whole year. It established also that the Student's Council are both ready and willing to accelerate any action which will lead to an improvement of the governing conditions existing among the student body at this university.

What then will the investigators find? They will be able to discover by a review of the past, that the present Students' Administrative Councils and their Joint Executive were established in 1920 in an effort to meet problems existing in the unsettled days following the Great War. They will find that the organization was then constituted went on its own undisturbed way building up a deficit of over eleven thousand dollars in a few years.

The investigating committee will find that there have been changes made in the organization and usages of the Councils from time to time. They will discover, for example, that in recent years the Board of Governors has recommended a financial policy to the Joint Executive, though they have never made any attempt to dictate this policy or to work out its details. They will discover, too, that a monthly audit of its books was instituted by the Joint Executive last year, and that a quarterly audit is being taken this year.

The Student Councils were instituted to meet the existing situation in 1920. They have been modified as time went on and conditions changed. That their organization is still in a formative stage is evident. The student body are for the first time taking an interest in the matter. They have expressed their impatience with the continuance of the slow development which has so far prevailed. The time has come to take bigger and more definite strides and the student body is showing its willingness to take a hand in the shaping of the destinies of its organizations.

If work is to be done at all on this scale it is evident that it must be done by an independent body. That the Student's Council has realized this and set forth these views in a unanimous motion is fortunate. The investigating committee will be in a position to recommend changes which will be far-reaching and, it is to be hoped, will carry the organization beyond the formative stage.

INDEPENDENT GROUP INAUGURATES ACTION

request of the Council, by Donald Buchanan, attending the meeting under the privileges of the open meeting.

Mr. Buchanan stated that although the members of the committee of which he was a member, wished to conceal their identity for the time being, they were quite willing that their purpose, aims and actions should be made known.

The committee had been formed spontaneously, he said, from a consideration of the complication arising out of the Varsity-S.A.C. situation and the confusing difference of viewpoint on the matter. With the purpose of getting more definite facts to work on, a certain number, who felt themselves to be fairly representative of student life, gathered together to discuss the matter.

This group met last Friday and decided that deeper questions of student government as related to the Varsity were at the heart of the matter. They passed the following resolution:—"That we constitute ourselves a non-partisan committee representing not one but ourselves, who favour an investigation of problems of student self-government as related to the Varsity."

A notice of this motion was sent to the President of the University and a reply received asking the committee to meet with him Tuesday. On Tuesday a memorandum, elaborating the purpose behind the resolution was presented to the President who received it gratefully and promised to lay it before the Board of Governors on Thursday.

Laments Intolerance

February 12, 1929.

The Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

Regarding the investigation requested by the "Ejected Members of the Varsity Staff", I would like to object to the rather smug attitude of the S.A.C. and present "Varsity" staff in remarking, "Is there a Situation?" saying no more and allowing time to smooth matters over.

Regardless of rights and wrongs of the affair, the fact remains that neither the S.A.C. nor "The Varsity", hold the confidence of the undergraduates as a body and the same applies in a lesser degree to the staff of "The Adversity", with whom my personal sympathies rest. The most regrettable part of the controversy, however, is the fact that a large number of supporters of either party take their stand through dislike of some member of the other.

Mr. Ryan broke his pledge—but it was a pledge which should never have been extracted. The only rules which should govern the editor are truth, decency and abstention from all useless mud-slinging or criticism. The editorial "Where We Stand" did not offend these and was merely fulfilling the highest trust of a truly undergraduate organ; for attacks, personal or otherwise, undesirable though they may be, are often the only method of clearing the way for healthy, constructive criticism.

The ex-editor incurred the displeasure of two far-removed groups—those who object to even discussing anything which is not absolutely "just right", especially concerning relations between the sexes (not considering that such discussion will only help their own cause); and on the other hand those who object to nothing, except being criticized.

I feel that there has been a decided lack of tolerance and fairness and believe that the undergraduate body if not the whole university, would like a complete investigation into the details of the relations between the Joint Executive and the ex-Varsity staff, including the voting which put Mr. Ryan out of office. Thus the matter of Student Government will be cleared up somewhat and a certain measure of confidence and good feeling may be restored.

Yours very truly,
F. M. Davies, U.C., 370

Suggests Debate in Hart House

1101 Bay Street,

Toronto,

February 9th, 1929.

Editor, "The Varsity".

University of Toronto.

Dear Sir,—

As a member of the Joint Executive of the Students' Administrative Councils, who was, unfortunately and through no fault of mine, absent from the meeting at which there apparently was drafted the statement appearing in your issue of Friday, February 8th, I would appreciate the courtesy of space in your columns for the purpose of giving expression to certain views of my own. I have only adopted this course after it has been made plain to me that my absence from that meeting has been misconstrued by both sides of this dispute in a way that best suits their own ends.

In the first place, I desire to state definitely that in general principles I have been in accord with my fellow members of the Joint Executive in all their decisions concerning the "Varsity" policy, excepting the meetings from which I was absent, and on account of which I cannot say how I should have voted. And I do not hesitate to state this personally. I was not satisfied with all that appeared in "The Varsity" during this academic year. To my mind, however, the pages of the undergraduate newspaper were definitely improved in certain directions, after the incidents of last Fall, except for certain ill-advised, indeed childish editorials, which should have been looked upon with just that measure of importance which they deserved—and no more. Furthermore, it is only fair to state that the majority of the matter contained in the "Varsity" during 1928-29 has been good, and most of the editorials have been of a really high standard. I think that this recognition is due to the former Editor-in-Chief, and I regret that in the official statement issued, this should have been overlooked, for it appeared to me to be generally conceded by members of the Joint Executive at many meetings.

I am also profoundly disappointed that the Joint Executive has not expressed itself as ready and willing to welcome the investigation of student government which certain students have demanded. To my mind the issues raised in that "fatal" editorial are altogether different from the troubles of the Fall, and the recent contentious editorials. And these new issues should not be merely dismissed by the Joint Executive. In this connection may I state that I hope the statement alleged to have been made by the Secretary-Treasurer of the S.A.C. and published by the downtown press, which is as follows, "Mr. Mitchell, the new editor, has said that the 'Varsity' will contain no reference whatever to the recent trouble about the paper," is incorrect. The "Varsity" is the undergraduates' newspaper, and to close its columns to undergraduate opinion on a question of vital interest to all undergraduates, would surely be most unfair.

It is also a matter for regret that the undergraduates of the University have not been told very plainly that there is only a measure of Student Government and not complete self-government in the University. Furthermore, from knowledge gained by intimate association with the governing even as now existing, I do not hesitate to state that until the students are themselves prepared to take their responsibilities more seriously, it would not be in the best interests of the student body to have complete and uncontrolled student government. It was tried, I understand, in the early years immediately following the war, but that $12,000 debt alone was enough to prove its failure.

The representatives of the Board of Governors, sitting on the Joint Executive have been greatly criticized, and as far as I have been able to judge, the criticism is most unjust. Instead of these gentlemen hindering the students in their "comic opera" government, they have been a merciful aid with their advice at difficult times. These gentlemen as a rule refrain from taking any part in discussions until a dead-lock has been reached, which by the way is not unusual; and as to the Director of University Extension, he hardly ever participates in discussions.

But, that there is room for improvement even in the "measure" of Government, as it now exists, I would be the first to admit. For one thing I do not think the Secretary-Treasurer and the Assistant Secretary-Treasurer should have votes in the Executive. They are not there as undergraduate representatives but in their capacities as staff officials. If these two graduate votes were removed, and having regard to the fact that the President has only a casting vote, which as far as I am aware he has never had to use, much of this talk about 5 graduate votes would not have been heard. Furthermore, the Joint Executive which is really the governing body, ought to be more representative of all the colleges and faculties. Its very name is a delusion and a fraud. It is an Executive of nothing. It is in itself the great ruling body.

But how are these matters to be righted without an investigation? and who is to do the investigating? not the ex "Varsity" staff, for they are parties concerned in the quarrel; not the Joint Executive, for it cannot be a prisoner at the bar and judge as well; not the Board of Governors, for although they are the logical body to interfere now, by interfering previously they have precipitated the whole affair; and in inviting graduate representatives of the Joint Executive without even including one undergraduate to say the vice-president to meet them and discuss the "Varsity" policy, they have led many undergraduates to believe that they do not give much consideration to undergraduate opinion.

It seems to me that the best plan would be a debate in Convocation Hall, with some outstanding man in the community taking the chair. Subject for debate, "That this house has no confidence in its Students' Government," Mr. Ryan to move the motion, 15 minutes allowed. Strict Parlia-

Dear Pussy Cat:—

Just came home from a party. The little boy that took me wasn't very nice. Do you know what he did? He took me home on one of those awful To-morrow Terrible-looking Corporation's One-Man Traffic Tying Contraptions. My, but it was full—I mean the traffic Tying Contraption. Now I ask you, Kitty, was that nice of him?

Golly, it's enough to drive any sane, respectable cat crazy. Never thought anyone could make such a noise. And look at the way he's coking his head—first one side, then the other as much as to say, "Hello, there, you darn-fool cat, what're you going to do about it? I hope you're just good and hungry, 'cause I know you want to eat me, and you can't, see?" Yahl! You wait, blame your feathers, 'til I get you! You won't sing that tune long—Golly, I am hungry. Guess I'd better see if there's anything to eat. —But just you wait, Mr. Canary Bird.

VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM MEET MCGILL HERE ON SATURDAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

BOXING, WRESTLING AND FENCING

The University of Toronto team will take part in the Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Tournament at Queen's this week-end. The recent American trip demonstrated the fine calibre of the Varsity representatives in this branch of sport; and if they are in good form, their opponents from the other Universities taking part will have to extend themselves to prevent the trophy again returning to Toronto.

BASKETBALL

McGill promises to put an especially strong team on the floor for the basketball game in Hart House Saturday evening. The end with the "sting", the forward line, is particularly threatening and can be counted on to keep things interesting. The Varsity line-up that took a fall out of Western recently will no doubt be kept intact. A clean, close contest seems assured.

WATER POLO

Varsity meets McGill in Water Polo also on Saturday evening, the game being scheduled to start at seven-thirty, one hour before the basketball game.

SWIMMING

This year the Intercollegiate Swimming Meet is held in Toronto. Those who go to Hart House Pool on Friday night should see some splendid exhibitions.

LADIES' HOCKEY

From the cleverness shown by the Varsity Women's Hockey team in the game against Aura Lee last night the hope for a victory over Queen's to-morrow seems quite justified.

McMASTER - WESTERN PLAY A CLOSE GAME

Baptists Take First Game To Be Lost By Londonites This Season

VARSITY LEADS GROUP

The McMaster Intermediate Intercollegiate hockey team defeated Western at Varsity Arena yesterday afternoon by the score of 3-2 before a rather poor crowd.

In spite of this victory McMaster is practically out of the running, having already lost twice. McMaster cannot come out on top unless the unexpected happens and Varsity, undefeated so far in the season, loses two games. Yesterday's game was the first loss for Western, the second time in the group. McMaster is third.

In the first period of yesterday's encounter play was fairly even, the only goal being tallied on a shot from the blue line by Jones, the McMaster captain, who displayed the best hockey shown by anyone on either team.

Half-way through the second frame Jones again broke through to score from very close in, making the score read 2-0 for McMaster. But before the bell rang, Brown, Western's outstanding player, notched the first counter for the visitors.

Just about two seconds after the face-off in the final period, Lanoue made a clever solo flight through the McMaster defence and tied the score, which remained even half-way through the period, though the play speeded up considerably. Then Pike of McMaster, landed a shot from the right boards into the net. Western then tried a five-man offensive for the last ten minutes of the game. Things moved very quickly, and a number of penalties were given out, but no goals were scored, though undoubtedly Cunningham, by his smart work in the net, in this last period, saved the McMaster team from defeat.

McMaster—Goal, Cunningham; defence, Smith and Dick; wings, Jones and Lawson; subs, Pike, H. Stewart and Walther.

Western—Goal, Bowen; defence, McTague and Lanoue; centre, Veandile; wings, Treman and Brown; subs, Kelly, Armstrong and Brent.

Final score—3-2 for McMaster.

AURA LEE LADIES BEAT VARSITY 5-2

"Fran" Crooks, St. Hilda's Freshette, Stars in Lively Workout

TEAM PLAYS WELL

Blue and White Fans Hope For Victory Over Queens To-morrow

Last night at the Mutual Street Arena the "unofficial Canadian Champion" Aura Lee team defeated the Varsity Women's Hockey team 5-2. The game served as a curtain-raiser to the junior O.H.A. play-off game between Markham and Victoria, and was planned as a work-out for the two teams. After the first period, however, when the Varsity forwards seemed lost without "Dot" Langley at left wing, the teams began to play real hockey and the spectators rose to the occasion and roared encouragement.

The outstanding star of the game was "Babs" Goulding, the Aura Lee centre, who scored three goals on lone rushes and gave the pass for another. But the player who caught the fancy of the crowd was "Fran" Crooks, who alternated at defence and centre for Varsity. This St. Hilda's freshee is a coming Marion Hilliard; she scored Varsity's first goal on a brilliant solo rush, and played well throughout the game.

The Aura Lee player who gave Varsity most trouble defensively was Helen McKinley, the Varsity sub-goalie, who was loaned to Aura Lee for the night. She saved at least four seemingly "sure" goals and caused considerable indignation in the Varsity camp. The new Varsity defence of Adele Statten and "Fran" Crooks proved unexpectedly strong, and the chances of the Blue and White against Queens on Friday night seem very promising. The line-up:—

Aura Lee—Goal, H. McKinley; defence, M. Trinell and E. Wilmott; forwards, D. Goulding, B. Barr, G. Minett.

Varsity—Goal, P. Tilton; defence, F. Crooks, A. Statten; forwards, N. Bateman, Helen Hilliard and J. Muirhead; subs, G. Martin and D. Starr.

"The object of public speech is to persuade," said the speaker. "Sincerity and truth are essential to public speech." "A sincere man may be eloquent with a vocabulary of six hundred words." "A man with a vocabulary of ten thousand words may fall short of eloquence if he is not sincere." Sir Thomas agreed that the Classics are most valuable to a public speaker. But he insisted that many good speakers had been spoiled by being steeped in classical tradition. The Latins had a rare sense of form and rhythm.

"Many a man can write beautiful English but his writing has no distinctive quality." "So it is with public speaking."

Although, in every day conversation it is difficult to cultivate, in this Age of Slang, accurate speech is the best training for public speech. Make good use of the dictionary, read the Bible, John Bunyan, and Bacon's Essays; this was the advice of Canada's Great War finance minister.

The preparation of a speech every man must worry out for himself. However, there are certain principles that must be adhered to, in the preparing of a speech. First, one must know the subject thoroughly. Secondly, the matter must be systematized so that a natural order of presentation may be used. The memorizing of a speech detracts from spontaneity. "Prepare the subject well," "Get up on your feet and think," "Be prepared to face your audience and take a chance."

Sir Thomas also spoke of the difference between speaking on the hustings and in the Commons. He made some general observations on qualifications for public life and related some humorous stories to illustrate his points.

When the speaker sat down the applause was loud and long. For an hour and one half the large gathering had been held spell bound by the words of advice of one of Canada's greatest statesmen. After a hearty vote of thanks had been passed, the gathering enjoyed refreshments and the finance minister of yesterday mixed freely with those who to-morrow may be sitting on the back benches at Ottawa.

A Feminine Viewpoint

February 11, 1929.
The Editor, "The Varsity".

While far from giving complete approval to the policy of the ci-devant editor of the Varsity, in my humble opinion the last state of that paper, like that of the man in the parable, is seven times worse than the first. Some of Mr. Ryan's editorials have been indiscreet, but the action of the S.A.C. in dismissing him and arbitrarily taking over the paper for its own use is something more than an indiscretion. Even viewing Mr. Ryan's policy in the gloomiest light, it was bound to come to an end with his term of office and the excellent organization he has given to the paper would have passed on to his successor. But the harm which the action of the S.A.C. is doing the Varsity will be irreparable. That the S.A.C. is not representative of the student body will be admitted by those who know it best. Yet this executive is deliberately establishing its right to dictate the policy of the Varsity. There can only be one result. The Varsity ceases to be the organ of undergraduate opinion and becomes an official bulletin. Though freedom of the press has been long established in the world of public affairs it would seem that for college newspapers the battle is just beginning. It will be a sad revelation of the lack of public spirit in the University of Toronto if the students as a whole show the indifference to the fate of their paper that unfortunately is apparent in some quarters.

Yours truly,
Josephine Phelan, '26.

JASPER'S BEGINNING

While Jasper Park Lodge and Jasper National Park, Alberta, are numbered among the best known places on the continent today, there was a time when Jasper was only a trading post of the North West Company. That was about 1813. For half a century it was the main support of the trade route across the mountains and an important point for all persons journeying through the Yellowhead and Athabasca passes. This cairn was erected last year on the site of old Jasper House by the Historic Sites and Monuments Board of Canada to mark the spot where this once famous trading post stood.—Photograph by Canadian National Railways.

JOINT EXECUTIVE ENDORSES ACTION OF MEN'S S.A.C.

COMPULSORY FEE AGAIN FAVOURED

EXTRA DOLLAR FEE TO BE CHARGED AGAIN NEXT YEAR

S.A.C. and Committee of Board of Governors Announce Approval of Plan

MERELY SAFETY MEASURE

The approval of the continuance of the extra one dollar S.A.C. fee for another year, by both the finance committee of the Joint Executive and the Committee of the Board of Governors was announced by President McGillivray at the meeting of the Joint Executive yesterday.

The president reported the recent meeting of the finance committee of the Joint Executive with a committee of the Board of Governors concerning the collection of fees for the coming year. As the deficit of the past few years has been finally discharged, the extra fee of $1, which has been collected for some years, would now be done away with. It was the general opinion of both committees, however, that if it were kept on for another year a sufficient contingency fund would be established to take care of any developments in the future.

The possibility must always be faced that should anything ever prevent the publication of Torontensis the society would be responsible to the students for the funds collected for the publishing of that book and would have to return the same.

MR. NEILLY TREATS DEVELOPING OF MINES

Mining Director Addresses The Mining and Metallurgical Club in Hart House

The Mining and Metallurgical Club held a very successful meeting in the Grads' dining room in Hart House last night. Mr. Balmer Neilly, Treasurer of McIntyre-Porcupine Mines Ltd., and Director of numerous other mining enterprises led an interesting and instructive discussion on mine organization and management.

Among the points stressed by Mr. Neilly were: appreciating the situation and sizing up the condition of a mine on first examination after taking over the management; willingness to receive suggestions from mine staff and to act upon them if conditions warrant; looking after the welfare of the community at large; familiarizing oneself with the influential members of the community such as the bank manager and government officials.

Mr. Neilly discussed in detail the features of paramount importance in the moulding of a successful mine in its various departments such as underground workings and surface plant.

Death of Sir Bertram Windle Deprives University of Toronto of Very Distinguished Scholar

The sudden death of Sir Bertram Windle, yesterday morning at his home, 5 Elmsley Place, at the age of 71 years, deprives the University of Toronto and Canada at large of one of her most distinguished scholars. His death was caused by Bronchial complications, which resulted from a slight stroke on Friday. Previous to this, Sir Bertram had remarked on the exceptionally good health which he then enjoyed.

Sir Bertram Windle was born in England in 1858, his father being vicar of Mayfield, Staffs. His mother was Irish, the daughter of Sir Josiah Coghlin, Baronet, and granddaughter of Charles Kendal Bushe, one time Lord Chief Justice of Ireland. Sir Bertram was educated at Kingston School, near Dublin, and Repton School in Derbyshire. Later he received distinguished academic and scientific degrees from Trinity College, Dublin.

In 1882, he left Ireland to accept a position in Birmingham and was received into the Roman Catholic Church in 1883. At Birmingham he played an active part, both in the formation of the school, and as professor of anatomy, and dean of the Faculty of Medicine. He was also a member of the Birmingham Board of Education. Later, and at various times, he acted in the capacity of examiner in anatomy in the Universities of Cambridge, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Durham, and for both the Royal College of Physicians, London, and the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland. In 1900 he was made a fellow of the Royal Society. Other honours include fellowships of the Society of Antiquaries, London, and an honorary L.L.D. of the University of Birmingham and the Royal University of Ireland. He was president of University College, Cork, from 1904 to 1918. He was also a commissioner of intermediate education and a commissioner under the Irish Universities Act of 1908.

He was knighted in 1912 and received the Order of St. Gregory the Great from the pope in 1909. He established the first course for a degree in journalism in the British Isles in Cork, and was the successor of the Irish trade mark.

DELVES INTO REASONS OF STUDENTS' CRIBBING

Research work of an unusual character has recently been carried on by Professor C. Brownell, of Colgate University, who has studied some 30 successful examination-cheaters, unknown to them.

His information was gleaned through underground and unofficial channels, and this information studied in the laboratory in modern scientific manner.

Eighty per cent. were found to be more emotionally unstable than the average. More than half fell below the college average in intelligence, and the majority belonged to the type known as psychological extroverts—good social mixers and more inclined toward activity than study.

"The cribber's low intelligence may make cheating a necessity," declared Professor Brownell in his reports of his findings. "His extroversion may further this. His emotional instability may make it easier for the spirit to succumb under the two-fold necessity."

More than half the cheating in colleges would be abolished if this psychological type could be eliminated, Professor Brownell believes. With the general type would go most of the "all around" college men who shine in team and track contests, glee club and dramatic productions and other book-less college activities.

University Crest

That worn in either silk or wool is now available to the students of the University to be worn with the University colours.

This decision, reached at yesterday's meeting of the S.A.C., brings to a conclusion a discussion which has hung fire for several years.

Last year it was decided that the crest should be sold only on official university blazers and in no other way, the reason for this being that it was undesirable to have university crests superimposed on college colours. Yesterday's decision guards against that by requiring an undertaking from every purchaser of the crest that it will only be worn on blazers, sweaters, etc., of University of Toronto colours. This action followed upon a recent recommendation to the same effect received from the Students' Administrative Council.

Battle Between Old and New Administrative Systems
Forecasted

The resignation of Dr. Clarence Cook Little as president of the University of Michigan may be viewed narrowly as the retirement under fire of a vigorous, frank, perhaps sometimes undiplomatic administrator whose admirable qualities proved both his strength and his weakness. But the Outlook (New York) prefers to see in it another step in the battle between the old and the new point of view in administering Great State universities.

Soon after coming to Ann Arbor Dr. Little began to arouse the strong antagonism and staunch support which characterized the three years of his administration. He advocated a "sane form" of birth control and immediately his resignation was demanded by outraged legislators. He antagonized the strong dry element in the State by terming prohibition an "international joke." He aroused resentment among the students by strong measures against student drinking and a ban on student automobiles. Only last fall he requested that Federal agents visit Ann Arbor and stamp out boot-legging. He attacked the D. A. R. blacklist, and offended Mrs. Alfred Brouseau, president-general of the organization who had given $115,000 to the university as a student loan fund.

The action of the Men Students' Administrative Council last Wednesday, unanimously voting their approval of the suggestion that the whole question of Student Government be gone into by an independent committee, was yesterday favoured by a motion of the Joint Executive of the Students' Councils. The motion approving the action of Men's S.A.C. was moved by Perkins of Wycliffe and received the unanimous support of the meeting. The Joint Executive also approved the suggestion contained in the Men's S.A.C. motion, that the Caput appoint an impartial Committee. Copies of the motion were sent to the Caput and the Board of Governors.

A motion by Ferry, Emmanuel College, that no official statements be made by members of the Joint Executive pending the investigation, was lost.

IMPERIAL STUDENT CONFERENCE

Henry, University College, made a report upon the work of the National Federation of Canadian University Students. The Federation has, at present, in hand preparations for the Imperial Conference of University Students in Montreal next summer and means of raising funds for that purpose were discussed. It was hoped to raise the necessary amount, in the neighbourhood of $500, by private subscription. A committee composed of Henry and Parkes, was instructed to look into the matter more fully and to report at the next meeting.

AMATEUR LEAGUE OF NATIONS

A communication was read from the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, urging U. of T. to send a delegate to an Amateur League of Nations to be held at Ann Arbor in April. The suggestion did not meet with the approval of the Executive, however, and no action will be taken to that end.

A SCHOLAR PASSES ON

The sudden death yesterday morning of Sir Bertram Windle has deprived the University of Toronto and Canada at large of one of her most distinguished scholars. A keen student of anthropology, he came to Toronto in 1919 to fulfill the appointment to the chair in that subject at St. Michael's College. Later he joined the staff of the University of Toronto as professor of ethnology.

The late Sir Bertram Windle received honours from learned societies and cultural institutions in all parts of the world. He was actively associated throughout his life in educational matters. He acted at various times in the capacity of examiner in the Universities of Cambridge, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Durham, and for both the Royal College of Physicians, London, and the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland.

THE STUDENT AND HIS MONEY

A better and a more stable financial basis for undergraduate enterprise is practically assured by the action of the Finance Committee of the Joint Executive and the Committee of the Board of Governors in expressing their general approval of the continuance of the extra dollar fee which has been collected with the Council fees for the past three years. This fee was first levied when an audit showed that the student body had a deficit of twelve thousand dollars. With the collection of this year's fees this deficit was wiped out. Its continuance for another year will mean in the first place an extra dollar in the budget of every undergraduate. From this point of view, the whole question of compulsory fees is an important one. From this point of view, too, it must not be overlooked that the student body has been burdened with this addition for the past three years chiefly because of the lack of a strong financial policy on the part of the student governing bodies. If the addition of this extra dollar for another year, coupled with the continuance of the present system of regular audit will prevent the need for such action arising again and provide a nest egg to look after the emergencies of the future, then it is assuredly a worth while move.

Well, folks, everything's dandy now. Yes, sir-ree. The old cat got back its other life to-day when Old King Cole came on to stay, and I want to thank the merry monarch for taking half the job off my hands. So hurrah for more and better fun from a more contented Cat.

It yet remains for someone to write a new "Hymn to Adversity."

Breathlessly we dashed into the office: "O Doctor, quick, can you do anything for me? I'm Champus Cat." "I'm very sorry, but really I have no remedy for that."

We would like a few more Champus Cat contributions. Perhaps you have some unique Latin: unus + equus poetry, just pining for the light of print.

Or perhaps an original and lateral splitting joke or short-story. Send them along: Varsity News Office or S.A.C. Office, Hart House. Don't forget. Come on School.

"Nu wull ya send or wull ya forget?"
"We wull."
"Ya wull which—send or forget?"
"We wull not!"
"Ah, that's the spirit—I kenneed ya would."

When we saw another pink paper in flames yesterday, we were reminded of that grand old saying, Sweet are the uses of Adversity. —Old King Cole.

The words aren't synonymous. "Bologna" is pork; "boloney" is bull.

And so we leave you until Monday.
Eee Tee.

MATTERS MUSICAL

February, 14, 1929.

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

No doubt I was not the only one who was deeply interested in an editorial of some weeks ago regarding the need for a Glee Club, or some sort of musical organization at the University. The Sunday Evening and noon-hour songsters in Hart House are sufficient evidence that there is plenty of vocal talent around the campus. The musical critic of a downtown paper has suggested a chorus of 200 men. Surely from among the many eminent musicians at the Conservatory of Music and elsewhere in the city, a director could be secured. Such an organization under capable leadership would promote real university spirit and should meet with the generous support of the music lovers here. Is anything being done?

Turning to another matter, it seems to me that something should be done to improve the attendance at Dr. Mauré's splendid recitals. Reports always mention a "rather small audience" and, at that, many are non-students. Could not a more popular time be arranged? Even a half hour at noon may result in a greater interest being shown in these enjoyable organ programmes.

Yours truly, "Eljy."

ETERNAL MOMENT

(With thanks to A)

In the moonlight I stood.
Pondering, dreaming, desiring, regretting,
Feeling the profound beauty, and the deep cold mystery
Of the moon, riding overhead on thin black cushions
Of clouds; and feeling, too, the infinity,
The soul-like perfection of the skies.
And I mused on Life's one Eternal Moment;
For me, that moment when we found we loved,
That moment of our long, first kiss,
So sweet, so bitter-sweet. It appeared
My hunger, my starvation, yet
It intensified my desire. For eternities
I shall hunger once more. For no moment
Of all those long, eternities
Shall I seek surfacing.

VICTORIA COLLEGE WOMEN AT JUNIOR-SENIOR DINNER

Victoriaettes of 2T9 and 3T0 Entertain Themselves At Annual Feed

The Victoria College Women's Junior-Senior Dinner was held in the Prince George Hotel on Thursday, Feb. 14th. About one hundred and eighty girls of 2T9 and 3T0 enjoyed the evening together.

Miss Evelyn Crow, vice-president of 3T0 was toast mistress and the toasts were:

The King
The Seniors, Our Guests
Misses Jean Pinchen, Jean Wheatley
The Past
Misses Lois Girvan, "Billie" Munroe
The Future
Misses Lowery Smith, Betty Batr
Miss Addison, Miss Manning, and those proposing or responding to toasts were at the head table. The speeches were brief, with humorous touches. The programme was concluded by the singing of "Victoria".
The Juniors who were on the committee of this most successful dinner were: Mary Lewis, Betty Gunnison and Helen Hilliard.

Prospective candidates should bear in mind that members of any committee who are absent from two consecutive meetings or three meetings in all, thereby forfeit their membership on that committee.

Nominations for two of the special committees, the Camera Committee and the Squash Committee, also open and close on the same dates as do those for the standing committees. Nominations for the Camera Committee must be active members of the Camera Club, and nominees for the Squash Raquets Committee must be undergraduate regular squash players. A regular squash player is one whose name has appeared on the reservation list at least five times during the academic year. The elections for these special committees will take place at special meetings held on Thursday, 7th March.

Nominations for the Debates Committee open at 9 a.m., Wednesday, 20th February, and close at 6 p.m. on Monday, 25th February. The election of the Debates Committee will take place at the debate on 27th February.

INTERCOLLEGIATE SWIMMING MEET IN HART HOUSE POOL

SPEAKING OF SPORT

McGill fans claim that this year's cage team is the strongest that has represented the Montreal College for some years. Varsity is playing the same strong team which was successful against Western and promise to give the Red and Black a hard fight. The game takes place to-morrow and is preceded by an Intercollegiate water polo battle between the same two colleges.

Queen's strong team in the Intercollegiate Assault has been severely weakened by injuries and sickness. Jimmy Haughton, their 112 pound wrestler, is laid up with scarlet fever, while Eric Nichol, boxing in the light-heavy division, is out with enlargement of the heart. Varsity looks to Queen's to give them the most opposition despite these casualties. McGill is as yet an unknown quantity.

This sure is a big week-end for Intercollegiate sport. McGill and Varsity meet here in Basketball, and Water Polo Saturday, while the three Universities in the Union compete in swimming and diving events to-night.

Then there is the Intercollegiate Assault at Kingston.

And the first of the home and home series with Queen's in the Women's Hockey group comes off to-night. The Varsity sextette lost to Aura Lee on Wednesday but they showed enough hockey to be a serious threat in the Intercollegiate series.

VARSITY BASKETBALL TEAM FACES TEST IN GAME AGAINST MCGILL ON SATURDAY

McGill Supporters Rate Present Team as Best in Recent Years

STRONG OFFENSIVE

Same U. of T. Line-up to be Used as in Recent Game Against Western

The University of Toronto entry in the Intercollegiate Basketball Union faces an important issue when they stack up against the much heralded McGill quintet in the Hart House Gymnasium on Saturday. The McGill fans have rated this team as the best that has represented the Red and White in a great many years and are confident that their big team will carry the championship to Montreal.

McGill will be captained by Faulkner, who is considered to be McGill's best scorer and will be remembered as a member of last year's team. Along with Faulkner on the forward line will be Grossman, of last year's team, two newcomers, Small and McBroom, and McLean. This looks like a heavy scoring division and the Toronto men will have a hard time keeping them out of the danger zone. Don Young looks after the pivot position at centre and while he is a newcomer to the Red and White he needs no introduction to the Basketball fans of the Dominion, having played for the Ottawa Rideaus when they were the Canadian Champions. Peiker, Rice, and Silverman are the McGill guards. Peiker is considered to be quite a "find", and it will be interesting to compare his play with that of the Toronto stalwarts, Curry and Murray.

It is not likely that there will be any change in the Toronto line-up from that which was successful against the Western five. Capt. "Mo" Mitchell and Ray Beaton will be the scoring threat for the Blue squad along with "Flush" Newman at centre, while the old reliable Roy Currie will look after the defence along with Johnny Murray. Earl Davey, Sakler and Hurwitz, will do the relief duty and there is no question as to their ability.

Captain Mitchell is beginning to find himself again this year and can be counted on to turn in a real game. Beaton is travelling better all the time and should be a treat to see. He has all kinds of speed and ability and teams in nicely with the rest of the forward line. Newman was a little off colour in the Western game and now that he has got rid of a bad game should stand out on Saturday.

Currie and Murray are both playing real basketball. This is the last year for both of them and they are fighting hard to finish with a championship.

The game will be preceded by an Intercollegiate Water Polo game between McGill and Varsity which will start at seven-thirty sharp. The Basketball game will start at eight-thirty. The hours have been arranged so as to allow the fans to take in both fixtures. The one ticket will admit to both games and is being sold at the regular basketball admission price of seventy cents, plus tax. There will be the usual music after the game.

Along with the water polo game at seven-thirty the Varsity intermediate entry will play the McMaster team and a win is required to stay on top of the heap. McMaster were fortunate to win the first game by one point and the Varsity boys are out for revenge.

QUEENS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY TO-DAY

Think They Have Good Chance Though Team Badly Crippled

SHOULD BE GOOD CONTEST

To-day and to-morrow will decide the Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Intercollegiate Champions for the year. The bouts are to take place in Grant Hall of Queen's University, and there will doubtless be some real exhibitions of the several sports to be contested. The Varsity team is in excellent hopes. The Queen's squad also feels confident that they will give a good account of themselves. However, the Tri-colour will have to go into action with weakened numbers, due to some of their men being laid off for various reasons.

Eric Nichol, boxing in the light-heavyweight class will be unable to compete due to enlargement of the heart. This eliminates one of Queen's best bets. Freddy Joliffe is also laid up, and the brunt of the scrap in this weight rests with Art Bayne. The red and gold depend on him for a good showing.

Jimmy Haughton, Queen's 112 lb. wrestler, is out with scarlet fever. His school had looked to him for a sure win, and will no doubt feel the loss heavily.

"Orv" Gamble, wrestling in the 175 lb. class will have to work with an injured arm. This handicap will not make matters any better for the home team.

Even with these casualties, Queen's feel that they will not need much sympathy as the rest of the outfit seems to be in good condition.

Following are the Queen's representatives.

Wrestling

112 lb.—(No representative)
118 lb.—McInnes
123 lb.—Wallbridge
135 lb.—Glen 147 lb.—Simpkinson
158 lb.—Hastings
175 lb.—Gamble.

Heavyweight—Kettlitz

112 lb.—Granger
118 lb.—Serright
126 lb.—Baker
135 lb.—Remus
147 lb.—Brophy
158 lb.—Bayne
175 lb.—(No representative)

Heavyweight—Gaez

On the Queen's wrestling team are three intercollegiate champions of last year. They made a better showing against the Montreal Y.M.C.A. than did the McGill crew, and consider themselves, to say the least, "pretty good". Whether they are as good as they think themselves, is another matter, and the final judgment must wait until they are tested "on the proving ground".

Though weakened by the loss of Agnew, Joliffe and Nichol, the boxers with the shirts of many colours are expected by their supporters to put up a real scrap against Varsity and McGill.

Queen's are somewhat stronger in the lighter weights this year than formerly, and think themselves capable of tearing things up quite a bit. Will they? Thereby hangs a tale. We shall know later, just what kind of a tale.

At the time of going to press, no word had been received as to the line-up of the fencing team, but again Queen's feel no qualms, and again Echo answers, "we shall see".

R. T. HALLOCK ON HEBREW PROPHECY

Meeting Addressed on Subjects of Hebrew Prophecy And Delphic Oracle

"There is a psychological basis common to Hebrew Prophecy and the Delphic Oracle, but the ardent political zeal of the prophets contrasts in a marked degree with the opportunism of the Pythian utterances." Such was the substance of a paper on Hebrew Prophecy read by Mr. R. T. Hallock before a joint meeting of the Oriental Languages Society and the Classical Association of University College at the Women's Union last night. The whole prophetic purpose was to preserve the finer spiritual values of the nation, and it is to the persistence of the prophets that the very political salvation of Palestine was due.

The significance of the Delphic Oracle in the ethical and religious life of Greece was very ably presented by Miss W. F. Hughes of the Classical Society. The natural loveliness and mystic charm of the Pythian site even to this very day arouses a supernatural awe and religious enthusiasm in the spirit of the beholder. The shrine was the source of reverence for moral law and solemn oaths, symbolizing in the early days of the Greek world the clear wisdom and kindly counsel of a beneficent father. The Delphic God, in short, became the conscience of Greece.

In the subsequent discussion the conclusion was reached that the narrow sphere of oracular influence was not to be compared with the vital national importance of Hebrew prophecy.

MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT RESIGNS

He aroused the powerful "landlady" element of Ann Arbor by pushing the plan for college dormitories. All of these incidents were undoubtedly contributing causes. But the chief reasons for his resignation are to be found in differences with the faculty and regents over matters of policy and administration. He refused a blanket salary raise to the faculty because he believed that merit alone should serve as the basis for boosting salaries. In turn, when he presented his scheme for "university college" in which freshmen and sophomores should be placed on probation and admitted to full membership at the beginning of their junior year only after a special examination, a large block of the faculty opposed him. The regents, who had supported the university college, disliked his opposition to all gifts excepting those made without hampering provisions.

In all of these concerns we see the stamp of a progressive, courageous man attempting to regiment education into line with new ideas in social, scientific and administrative fields. That Dr. Little will sever his connection with the University of Michigan next September, however, we believe is less significant than the character of his successor. The regents' choice will reveal whether Dr. Little's forward-looking policies are to be continued by a man perhaps more gifted in carrying out the necessary human relationship of his office or by a reactionary.

Both the Varsity and Queen's teams are being entertained at luncheon at the Diet Kitchen, and will have an early supper at Wymilwood before the game this evening.

The Queen's line-up is as follows: Goal, B. Paterson; defence, T. Whattam and M. Carson; forwards, D. Snell, I. Gordon, E. Adsl, M. Perry, F. Barrington and K. Allen; sub. goalie, M. McInnes. Varsity are entered in the intercollegiate league, McGill finding it impossible to put in a team. The Blue and White girls carried off the honours last year after two hard-fought games.

To-night's fixture will start at 7.15 p.m., and a Senior O.H.A. game between Varsity and St. Mike's forms the other part of the double-header.

Varsity's Star Reporter Obtains Low-down on Einstein's Latest

"What," inquired "The Varsity" reporter of the Assistant Professor of Technology, "does Mr. Einstein mean by his latest theory of Revolution, (or was it Evolution?) SIR BERTRAM WINDLE DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Sir Bertram was the author of a large number of books and papers, including the "Proportions of the Human Body," "Shakespeare's Country," "The Vessels of Thomas Hardy," "History of Chester," "Remains of the Prehistoric Age," "The Church and Science," and "Vitalism and Scholasticism." He was a member of the Irish convention.

In 1919 Sir Bertram came to Canada to become professor of anthropology at St. Michael's college, and soon after that he also became professor of ethnology at Toronto university.

Courses of popular lectures on scientific subjects tended much to enhance his esteem throughout Canada and the United States. He had the gift of being able to inject the popular note into subjects not usually considered of wide interest. Thus, on one occasion in a lecture on ancient religions he pointed to evidence existing that the women of 3,500 years ago were even more extravagant than the women of to-day and he went on to show that women's dress was sometimes the cause of calamities throughout the ages. In another lecture he put the human race into different divisions, indicating how distinction could be made by the hair of the head.

Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed, but it was tentatively suggested that it would be held from St. Basil's church, which is connected with St. Michael's College. A solemn high mass will be celebrated probably by His Grace Archbishop Neil McNeil, assisted by the heads of the Basilian community, at whose invitation Sir Bertram accepted the professorship at St. Michael's.

Mass production and standardization in the field of journalism were scored yesterday afternoon by Oswald G. Villard, editor of "The Nation," who spoke before the Social Problems Club in New York City, on "The Need of a Dissenting Press." More than three hundred heard the speech.

Women's Hockey Team Plays A One-All Tie At Varsity Arena

University of Toronto added to her Intercollegiate prestige over the weekend by winning the Swimming and Assault-at-Arms titles. Earlier in the season the Blue secured the Intercollegiate hockey title when she beat McGill 9-1 on the two game series. That was Toronto's twelfth consecutive hockey title.

Besides these two titles, Varsity made a good start in the Water Polo series by securing a 6-0 win over the Montreals on Saturday. This gives them a six point lead to carry into the return game at McGill.

Toronto also won her game against the Red and Black in the Senior Basketball series and secured a victory over McMaster in the Intermediate Intercollegiate series. The latter victory puts the Blue and White in the lead and relegates McMaster to third position.

Varsity's Women's Senior Intercollegiate hockey team, although failing to add to the list of victories for the Blue teams, managed to hold Queen's to a one-all tie. The return game will be played on Friday and since goals are to count, Toronto still has a fifty-fifty chance of securing the Beattie Ramsay Cup this year.

Goblin Editor Speaks To-Day On Journalism

Will Open The Sixth Annual Course On This Subject

HAS WIDE REPUTATION

His Short Stories Have Appeared In Many Canadian Magazines

J. E. McDougall, managing-editor of the "Goblin" will open the Sixth Annual Lecture Course in Journalism this afternoon at five o'clock in Room 22 of the Mining Building with a lecture on "Journalism as Seen by a Humorist." This will be a general talk on every aspect of the field of journalism and should be of interest not only to intending newspaper writers but also to those interested in any form of literary work.

Mr. McDougall has had a wide experience both in the newspaper and magazine field. His short stories have appeared in many Canadian magazines and a book of light verse under the title of "If You Know What I Mean" is being published for him this spring by Macmillan's of Canada. Mr. McDougall has many contacts among literary circles in Toronto and has the reputation of being a brilliant and witty speaker on journalistic subjects.

Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, in co-operation with the Department of University Extension, is sponsoring this course of six lectures.

Is run as an innovation in connection with Annual Dinner

The first annual Victoria College Athletic At-Home held at Burwash Hall Friday evening proved a decided success. It was run in connection with the regular Annual Athletic Dinner which was held at Burwash Hall earlier in the evening.

After the banquet, in Burwash Hall, the guests assembled in Wymilwood, where a very successful dance was held with Stan St. John and his orchestra furnishing the music.

Those present included the members of the various Victoria teams: Track, Tennis, Rugby, Soccer, Rowing, Basketball, Water Polo, Baseball, Hockey, B.W. and F.; also Victoria students playing on the Varsity teams.

This promises to be the first of an annual V.C.A.U. At-Home.

Le Coin Français

Voici un petit Morceau intéressant et divertissant que nous avons pris à "The Xaverian Weekly", Le Journal des Etudiants de L'Université de St. Francis Xavier's.

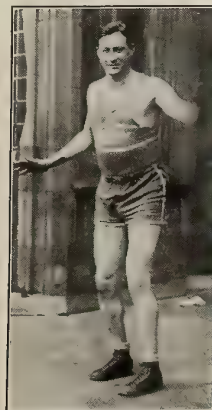

VERRONS-NOUS DES FEMMES SENATEURS?

Les femmes doivent-elles jouer un rôle en politique? Tel a été le sujet discuté mardi au cercle français qui semble décidément s'intéresser surtout aux problèmes féministes. Mr. Roy and Mr. McLean ont tracé un tableau pitoyable de l'infortuné mari moderne obligé de laver la vaisselle, de faire le ménage, de bercer et de faire têter les enfants pendant que sa femme allait prononcer des discours politiques: Les droits de la femme augmentent chaque jour, à mesure et aussi rapidement que la longueur de ses vêtements diminuent. Si les hommes ne se revoltent pas, où tout cela va-t-il s'arrêter?

Malgré le pathétique de ces arguments, c'est le côté de l'affirmative qui l'a emporté. Mr. Dubreuil nous a parlé de l'influence de la femme sur les lois sociales et la protection de l'enfance. Mr. Powers a déclaré que puisque la partie était inférieure au tout, la femme était évidemment inférieure à l'homme puisqu'elle a été formée d'une seule côté alors qu'Adam en avait trente-deux et beaucoup d'autres os encore. Cependant puisqu'elle était différente, il n'en était que plus nécessaire qu'elle soit représentée dans les assemblées législatives afin qu'elles puissent défendre leur point de vue et leurs besoins particuliers.

La petite causerie de Mr. Behal sur les sports d'hiver au Canada a été fort intéressante. Il nous a fait espérer qu'en gouvernement canadien, les jeux olympiques d'hiver auraient lieu dans notre pays.

A college education, declares the Oregon Emerald, probably costs an individual about $1,000 a year.

Above are shown two members of Varsity's strong Intercollegiate Basketball squad which scored a win over McGill here Saturday night in Hart House Gymnasium. The victory gives the University of Toronto a leading place in the Intercollegiate cage series. Varsity's Intermediates also scored a victory Saturday, defeating McMaster 25-22 score in a close game. ABOVE are Captain "Mo" Mitchell, forward, and J. C. Murray, guard.

EXAMINATIONS AND UNDERGRADUATES

"Harvard College is America's most blatant hypocrite. It wants to make the outside world think it has a monopoly on methods for procuring originality. What it really allows you to do is to pick up a comprehensive course in memory training and charges you $400 a year for it in the bargain."

This quotation is not, as might be expected, an excerpt from a tirade by an irate student of Technology. In fact, it had its origin in the editorial rooms of "The Harvard Crimson", the daily at Harvard. Nor was this the only scathing criticism bitterly voiced in the long editorial published recently by that paper.

In this matter at least, the "Crimson" agrees heartily with "The Lampoon", Harvard's humorous magazine, expressing approval of the comic's recent "Protest of the Masses" number. The publications combined in their condemnation of almost everything at Harvard, in fact, what they do not denounce seems hardly worth mentioning.

We printed in this column recently a discussion of the system of examinations in vogue in the majority of the Universities on the American continent to-day. This subject also comes in for discussion in the "Crimson". The following quotation is from its columns:

"In this college there is just one right idea in every course. And that is the PROFESSOR'S idea. The professor's idea has been cribbed out of other books. Now all you have to do is to read the book in which the professor's idea is found, slap that down and you're a success."

That the whole question of the advisability of the present system is interesting University students to-day is evinced by the fact that the Harvard "Crimson", the "McGill Daily" and "The Tech", of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, all carried articles on some aspect of the question in their editorial columns last week.

Under the heading "Room for Reform", the McGill Daily has the following to say on the subject:

"The subject of examinations has, for very good reasons, attracted a good deal of attention recently. Whenever exams draw nigh and we are forced to adjust ourselves to them, we are invariably reminded of the oft-reiterated complaints as to their unjustness. That examinations as conducted today, are not true criterions of scholastic ability or intelligence is generally admitted.

"The system results in group conferences in which students attempt, by the laws of chance an averages to determine what are the likely questions. They must study the fads and idiosyncrasies of each examiner; his personal bias must be consulted. In order to do this best, examination papers set by these examiners in previous years must be consulted in order to determine what each particular man considers important.

"All this wastes considerable time and energy that were better spent in studying the subject on which the examination is being held but it is self-evident that with such an examiner it is just as important to know his personal psychology as his subject. Many a student boasts that it is the knowledge of his examiners which has put him through.

"It is an encouraging sign to find that some professors have become fully aware of the injustice of such forms of examination and are looking about for better and truer means of judging a man's academic worth.

Discusses Hart House

Production

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir,—

With a certain diffidence I submit the question "Why?" in connection with that perpetration "Juno and the Paycock", so ably presented at Hart House Theatre during the last fortnight.

Surely a playwright may not be entirely irresponsible and must expect to be arraigned before the bar of public or private opinion, as so happens. The question that occurred to me during a somewhat troublous hour was "Does such a play by any manner of means justify itself?" Polonius in "Hamlet" offers a bewildering list of categories in which different plays naturally, or unnaturally fall, but evidently could not force such a distorted creature of a morbid mind as "Juno and the Paycock." So far from being tragedy it is mere morbidity. Perhaps the author meant to show some ray of hope in the final scene, when Juno and her daughter proceed to make a new beginning. But what chances would they have? The parties concerned had bungled in the past, so mismanaging and confusing the elements which life offered, that utter squalor resulted. How could the appearance of a baby, branded by heredity with the stigma of an unprincipled fool, help matters in the least? So on and so on—an infinite number of loathsome scenes rise before the mind, in which Tancred and Boyles figure in profusion under different names. The House of Atreus again appears on earth, having lost by this time all its pristine saving graces.

Some may say—what of the comic relief? But was there anything funny anywhere? I very much doubt if a laugh of pure merriment were prompted throughout the whole production. Sundry guffaws were noticeable on the night when I attended, but guffaws usually leave the mind a dreary dullness. (This excludes a certain group, who apparently found the most horrible scenes, such as the doctor's diag-

We had also intended to crash the 372 party Saturday night.

And little would they dream That a prowling Cat was there, And incidentally dancing with The fairest of the fair.

But we didn't, and so we weren't.

The word "fair" calls to mind an old story we heard in the navy:

"He plays a fair game of poker, doesn't he?"

"Yes, if you watch him."

O yes, we know that Valentine's Day is now ancient history but the best one we heard was the Trinity co-ed who sent herself sixteen anonymous Valentine's to impress the boy friend.

My wife then seized me by the throat: "What means this red hair on your coat?"

I ducked my head—prepared to fly—"Trouble, my dear. But hit me high."

nois, highly entertaining. Or perhaps even this was a kind of hysteria. I must admit, Sir, I found nothing funny. For me, Captain Boyle was ludicrous at times, Joscer merely objectionable, Maisie Madigan incoherent, thank God, Johnny Boyle pitiable, Jerry Devine stupid, Charlie Benham quite negligible as a dramatic character, and Juno and her daughter—well—utterly and entirely depressing.

It was true to life, I suppose. Nothing is too good or too bad to be true. But the idealist's dreams are just as real as the squalor of a brothel, and it behoves the layman, as it should behave the artist, to exercise intelligent discrimination.

So I would suggest that the play is unbalanced and disproportionate. Sean O'Casey along with his companion, the author of "Elmer Gantry", has died too far, has reached the mud and wallowed in it.

If our University were Callipolis, and if the author of "Juno and the Paycock" were to apply for admission, how should we greet him? I suggest we should not do "obsequies to him as to a sacred, wonderful and agreeable person", we should not "Anoint him with myrrh and crown him with a wreath of sacred wool", before sending him away to another city. But rather, in accordance with the spirit of the age, he would be handed over to our University Policemen, to be ushered ignominiously forth, after the manner of recalcitrant newsmen of the Telegram.

Trusting that this effort does not constitute a too exorbitant demand on space in your paper.

Yours truly,

B. R. English, 370 U.C.

Dear Sir,—

I wish to congratulate you on the excellent bulletin board which you have developed. I should say post graduate bulletin board. The paper under the former editor was at least interesting and also in my opinion a good paper in every other respect.

I heartily agree with "H.M.'s" letter concerning your very clever and interesting section which is now called "Whence Come These?" Another example of feeble mindedness is the

THE UPTOWN

The movietone, "The Shop-Worn Angel", was the feature reviewed by "The Varsity" at the Uptown, Saturday evening. This was a pictorialization of Dana Burnett's story, with the musical comedy star, Nancy Carroll, playing the part of Daisy Heath, "The dazzling red head in the front row of 'The Red, White and Blues', and Gary Cooper playing the role opposite, Bill Tyler, the rookie soldier from Texas. Paul Lukas acted as the "protector" of the actress, and faded out of the picture when she started singing about "A Precious Little Thing Called Love." The singing pair, Van and Schenk, also appeared on the screen. But the music, which was the outstanding part of the evening, was contributed by Jack Arthur. Besides the work of the orchestra, a galaxy of stars twinkled on the stage—The Ryder Sisters, Kathleen and Elizabeth, late of George White's Scandals, and Rose-Mary, acrobatic star from Rio Rita, and the King Sisters, who have just completed a successful tour of the West.

HART HOUSE THEATRE

The Cuckoo Clock Revue of Bertram Forsyth will be recalled at Hart House theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of next week when the players' revue will be presented by associates and friends of the late Mr. Forsyth in aid of a memorial fund. Many theatregoers in Toronto will recall his Cuckoo Clock revues. They were the essence of kindness, grace and humor, and in planning the revue for next week the management has attempted to catch the spirit of the late Mr. Forsyth's productions. Some of the numbers are: "The English Speaking Union," a burlesque by Merrill Dennison; "Some Scenes From Twelfth Night," "The Naughty Nineties" and "The Third Mrs. Tanageray." It is a mixture of singing, dancing and individual turns. Some of the players are: Howard Dunnington-Grubb, Ivor Lewis, A. J. Rostance, Heasel Mitchell, H. E. Hitchman, Monro Grier, George Patton and Jack McLaren.

said, "the same editorial, cartoon, human interest stories, and features appear in hundreds of newspapers at the same time."

This tendency towards standardization, Mr. Villard claimed, was making "absentee ownership" possible. "A man in New York," he said, "writes a story which, for example, is of vital concern to the citizens of Pittsburgh." Such a writer was held incompetent by Mr. Villard, as he is usually reporting a condition about which he knows nothing.

Mr. Villard stressed the work of the "crusader in journalism," pointing out the handicaps that confront him and the dangers entailed in liberal newspaper work. He paid tributes to such men as Boyd Gurley, Don Mellet, Thomas Adams, and Franklin K. Lane, who dispassionately carried out their work in bringing about reforms through the medium of the press.

VARSITY WINS ASSAULT, POLO, BASKETBALL AND SWIMMING

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The University of Toronto teams carried off the Intercollegiate Swimming Meet and the Intercollegiate Assault over the weekend.

At the same time the Basketball squad secured a win over the Montreal aggregation and the water poloists ran up a six point lead in the first of a two-game series with McGill.

One notable feature of the week-end was the decided interest that has been created in Intercollegiate boxing, wrestling and fencing. Over 1,200 fans crowded into Grant Hall Saturday for the finals. Queen's students turned out in force to cheer probably the best team they have entered in this event in years.

It's a far cry to Intercollegiate football but attention was attracted to that sport on Saturday when the members of the Ontario Rugby Football Union met in Toronto. One of the most interesting results of the meetings is the decision to send to the C.R.U. a recommendation in favour of the adoption of an onside pass into the Canadian game. Major D. Stewart Forbes of McGill has been advocating this move for some time and his idea received the support of a majority on Saturday. The C.R.U. annual meeting, which will be held here next Saturday, will deal with the matter and determine whether it shall be passed along to the Rules Committee for embodiment in the code.

And to get back to winter sports, announcement was made by the athletic directorate of the University of Western Ontario on Saturday that the University of Western Ontario has defaulted the second game of the O.H.A. intermediate play-downs between the Windsor Mic Macs and the University, scheduled for the London Arena, Monday night. Dr. L. W. Pritchett, club physician, announced that Mel Walkem, Ray Sinclair and Yeandle would be unable to compete, while Roy Brown was also advised not to play owing to injuries.

Western will continue in the Intercollegiate intermediate series, but do not play for another week. This will give the players sufficient time to recover from injuries.

VARSITY SECURE LEAD BY A VICTORY IN THE BASKETBALL SERIES

Final Period Rally Gives Victory To The Blue and White Cage Team

FINAL SCORE 38-26

University of Toronto increased her lead in the Intercollegiate basketball series Saturday when they secured a 38-26 point victory over McGill in a game played at Hart House. McGill were leading 15 to 9 at half time. The Blue team were slow in starting but made a determined rally in the second frame which put them in the win column. Varsity tied up the score shortly after the intermission.

McGill started the scoring when Faulkner, their captain and brilliant forward, counted two baskets in a row while Red defence kept the Blues out of reach of their nets. From the time Ray Beaton scored his first basket until the finish of the game, Varsity kept forging along, although they were able to regain but little of McGill's headway in the first stanza and at one time the Montrealers had them down 10 to 3, with only five minutes to go before half time rest.

McGill (25)—Forwards, McClean (2) and Faulkner (13); centre, Young (4); defence, Rice (4) and Silverman (1); subs, Parker, McBroom, Small (3) and Grossman.

Varsity (38)—Forwards, Mitchell (7) and Beaton (12); centre, Newman (10); defence, Currie (3) and Murray (3); subs, Johnston, Sakler (1) and Davey (2).

Referee—Percy Millar, Toronto.

SENIOR HOCKEYISTS DEFEAT ST. MIKES BY A 5-2 SCORE

Continue Their Success In The Senior O.H.A. Series

EIGHTH STRAIGHT WIN

Score Was Tie At End of The Second Period

Continuing their clean-up in O.H.A. hockey, Varsity's keen senior aggregation defeated St. Michael's on Friday night at the Varsity Arena by a 5-2 score. This makes their fourth straight victory over St. Mike's this season, and their eighth in toto. But they sure had to fight for it, not evening the score till the middle of the third period. The two winning goals were scored within half a minute of each other. For the first two periods St. Mike's were right on their heels, and threatened, with their somewhat altered line-up to break Varsity's lucky run.

The new Griffin-McKay defence of the Irish worked like a charm and with the assistance of Mueller in goal, turned aside the fiercest rushes of the Blues for forty minutes, but finally the latter got a break and clinched the result. Paul scored two goals for Varsity, and was easily the best man in the shindig.

The defence work of both teams was more than O.K. All but one of the seven goals were won on single rushes. Mueller turned in a stellar game for the vanquished.

The teams: Varsity—Snyder, goal; Marshall and Paul, defence; Stewart, centre, Harley and McMullen, wings; Murray and Brant, subs.

St. Michael's—Mueller, goal; McKay and Griffin, defence; Delahey, centre; Irvine and Hutchinson, wings; Sullivan and Bruyere, subs.

Referee—Dalt Lowery, Toronto.

WATER POLO TEAM SECURES A LEAD FROM MCGILL MEN

Win From The Red and Black By A Large Number Of Points

SCORE IS 6-0

Goals Will Count in Deciding The Two - Game Series

Toronto will carry a six-point lead to McGill for the return game in the Intercollegiate water polo series, by virtue of her 6-0 win over the Red and Black team in Hart House tank Saturday. Varsity scored four of her goals in the last period, but the Blue team were superior to the Montreal lads throughout. In passing and shooting they had a decided edge and should have no difficulty in winning the series. With a six-goal lead they should have no difficulty in winning the series and the title.

a real scare and were leading at the end of the first day's events. Over 1,200 people attended the Saturday events.

Billy Bell's plucky fight against the rugged Baker of Queen's for the bantamweight title was the feature of the meet. Bell sustained an injury to his right hand in the semi finals which made that hand useless as far as boxing was concerned. However, he entered the final and displaying pluck and ring generalship, managed to earn a close decision by his persistent one-handed attack.

The meet was made exceedingly interesting by Queen's determined fight for the title. Varsity made a good start by taking all three points for fencing, but Queen's came back strong in boxing and wrestling. When George Ketildaze won the heavyweight wrestling final, Varsity was but one point ahead with two finals remaining to be decided.

The light engine, in charge of Conductor Watling and with Engineer M. Lafontasie at the throttle, was returning to North Bay from Mattawa. As the engine rounded the curve the train crew saw the wolf on the tracks a short distance ahead. The engineer opened the throttle and the wolf was hit by the pilot steps. Conductor Watling ran back and killed the animal with a poker.

Burwash Hall, Friday evening.
The toast to Athletics was proposed by Dr. Johnson, Past Hon. Pres. of the V.C.A.U.
Mr. W. S. Douglas, the chairman, responded to the toast. His definition of a "hero", he thought typified the stand of many of this year's Victoria teams.
"I have seen these same faces," said Mr. Douglas, "that now look so fair in the candle-light, grim and determined, when the men now in black suits and wing collars, were arrayed in athletic uniforms."
As to whether or not athletes were good students as well, Mr. Douglas stated that "there are those of us who think it as great an honour to wear a 'V' on our chests as to get an 'A' in the May examinations."

Raises Objection

Toronto, February 16, '29.

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:—
We should like to call your attention to a literary effort of one Johannes Inepitus that appears in your issue of Feb. 15th, in which ineptitude reaches the point of genius. The remark to which we take exception is this: "Would a mass of empty gin bottles do, or would you prefer a High Mass?"

The unpardonable flippancy is at best the lowest form of wit that has as yet enlivened the columns of "The Varsity". At worst it is a deliberate insult to the Catholic professors and students of the University, making light as it does of a fundamental of Catholic belief. Since any reference to religion is not allowed in university debating it is surprising to find such a reference as this in a newspaper which is supposed to be the official expression of undergraduate opinion.

WOMEN HOCKEYISTS BATTLE TO 1-1 TIE

Queen's Hold Blue and White Scoreless For Two Periods

PLAY IN KINGSTON FRIDAY

A one-all tie was the result of forty-five minutes of women's hockey played by the Women's Intercollegiate teams from Varsity and Queen's on Friday. The hockey was exceptionally good, fast and open, for a women's game, and it needed to be for the sake of the spectators who patiently waited an hour while the Queen's equipment was tracked down and brought to the Arena. Ross Workman explained to the crowd that the transfer company had delivered the stuff to Mutual Street, while Coach Gib McKelvey of Queen's, hopped a taxi and did a "Percy Williams" there and back. Once the game was started, however, all was forgiven.

On the scoring chances Varsity should have piled up a lead of several goals, but Beth Paterson in the Queen's net was almost unbeatable. In the third period Helen Hilliard had at least a dozen dead-on shots, and Adele Statten and Fran Crooks were inside the defence more than once. At the other end, Pat Tilston had a much easier time, due to the excellent defence protection, but she made two or three stops of the "labelled" variety in the second period.

There was no scoring in the first fifteen minutes and the hockey was rather ragged. The second period started fast and Queen's and then Varsity scored off-side goals which were disallowed. Queen's were not to be denied and a Whattam to Snell combination netted a beautiful goal.

Varsity went out to do or die in the third period, and simply rained shots on the Queen's net. The break finally came when Adele Statten carried through on a brilliant rush and passed to Helen Hilliard as she passed the defence. Helen picked the corner on a whistling shot and tied the score. A minute later Dot Langley got right in and hit the post. The goal judge flashed the light but Red Porter overruled him. Varsity continued to press the play but the bell rang to end hostilities with no further scoring.

(Ed. Note)—We deeply regret that the phrases objected to in the above letter were thoughtlessly coupled, in the article in question. The writer of the article has expressed to me his sorrow that it appeared. That the whole thing was quite unintentional and that the error was due entirely to thoughtlessness, coupled with the fact that copy for a daily newspaper must of necessity be written hurriedly, and the time between its writing and its appearing in print does not allow for any great degree of editing.

PLENTY OF ROOM IN CANADA

For the wives and families back in the homeland it is often a story of patient waiting while the husbands and fathers win a new start in the Canadian West. But the re-union is happy and the future bright when they are once more joined in the new home. Here is a group comprising two families of Swedish colonists, Mrs. Eriksson with her family of ten children, and Mrs. Siden with two children, who have just been sent forward by the Canadian National Railways' Colonization Department and the Swedish-American line, to their husbands at Junkins, Alberta, one of whom settled here in 1925 and the other last summer. The statement is made that many more Swedish families of this fine type are expected to follow.

RIVAL DEBATERS IN CLASH AT TRINITY TO-NIGHT

RECEIVE PORTRAIT OF HART MASSEY

BOARD OF STEWARDS RECEIVES PORTRAIT OF HART A. MASSEY

Hon. Vincent Massey Makes Fine Gift to Hart House

PORTRAIT ON VIEW SOON

Hart House Established In Memory of Hart A.
Massey

A gift of considerable interest to Hart House has recently been made by the Honourable Vincent Massey. It is a photographic portrait of Hart A. Massey (1823-1896), whose estate was incorporated as the Massey Foundation, and in whose memory Hart House was established.

This gift was reported to the Board of Stewards at its recent meeting, and a resolution was passed conveying the thanks of the Board to Mr. Massey for this valuable gift, which will always be considered as one of the honoured possessions of Hart House.

It has not yet been decided in which room the picture will be placed; but it is felt that some suitable place will be found for it, where it will be seen by as many members of the House as possible.

DR. STEPHEN CYAKO TO SPEAK AT DINNER BEFORE LIBERAL CLUB

Holds Joint Dinner in Conjunction With Gladstone Liberal Club

COMES FROM HARVARD

Is Carrying on Research Work
There in International Law

Dr. Stephen Cyako, LL.D., Royal Hungarian Ministerial Vice-Secretary of Budapest, Hungary, will be the guest speaker at a joint dinner to be held Friday evening, February 22nd, at 7:00 p.m., at the Ontario Club, under the auspices of the University of Toronto Liberal Club and the Gladstone Liberal Club of Osgoode Hall.

Dr. Cyako is at present attending Harvard University, carrying on research work in International Law. He brings to his subject a keen grasp of the inner diplomatic intrigues of those various countries. He will speak on the present situation in Hungary and deal particularly with its international aspects.

Tickets may be obtained from members of the Executive of the University Liberal Club.

MISS STEWART GIVES ADDRESS TO WOMEN

"Vocations For Women" Is The Subject For Third Address
In Series

AT WOMEN'S UNION

"Vocations For Women" will be the subject of an address to be delivered by Miss K. Stewart, M.A., this afternoon in the common room of the University College Women's Union.

Miss Stewart is a prominent graduate of University College and is at present on the staff of Humber College, where she is a specialist in English. Miss Stewart is one of the outstanding teachers of the province and her address promises to be enjoyable and valuable to those of the fair sex who are worried as to a choice of vocation.

This address will be the third on that subject for the Women's Union.

JUGO-SLAVIAN NURSE ON FURLOUGH HERE

Nikica Bovolini Studies Health
Methods at University of Toronto

ARRIVED YESTERDAY

The University of Toronto, has a distinguished visitor in the person of Miss Nikica Bovolini, formerly superintendent of public health nurses in Jugoslavia.

Miss Bovolini was a member of the first group to graduate in her profession. Through the Rockefeller Foundation, health stations were established throughout her land to co-operate with the mothers, to teach nurses, and to improve sanitary conditions.

Asked about industrial conditions, she said: "Our country is mainly agricultural, but our factories are becoming busier. Belgrade has modern ideas and is advancing rapidly. Its population has increased to 350,000."

Miss Bovolini, who arrived in Toronto Sunday, is on furlough in this city for the next five months, and will study health methods at the University of Toronto, after which she will return home to become a member of the state board of health.

Journalists, in the Mining Building yesterday. Mr. McDougall is Managing Editor of The Gleaner, and is fully qualified to talk on this subject. He was introduced by "Don" Buchanan, of the sponsoring fraternity.

The college humorist came in for some worth while criticism. The great number of them, he said, resort to use of vulgarity, wise-cracks and puns, most of which are poor.

According to the speaker, few people seem to realize that humour is probably the hardest department of journalism. This is borne out by the large numbers of hopeful would-be humorists who plague papers like The Gleaner with their attempts at saleable fun. These amateurs do not appreciate the fact that something more than a mere "sense of humour" is necessary before their work will "go over".

Humour is constantly changing. This will easily be seen if one is to compare that of to-day with what was current only a short time ago. To-day we want a more sophisticated form than did our forbears, to-morrow will see something altogether different. The writer must read "current stuff", or he will soon find himself without a job.

It is impossible to make humorists. They are born, and the making is only the polishing. No one can tell the secret of well-written humour. All we know is that one thing is funny, and another is not, which is which depends on the reader.

Probably the two greatest types of humorists are the "columnists" and the "nonsense" writers. The former have not as yet become very well established in Canada, but are popular in the States. The columnist puts his own personality into his work, but on this side of the line the trend seems to be in favour, at least at present, of the wise-cracker. The humour column has given birth to certain forms of light verse, and also to the short paragraph. Stephen Leacock is probably the most well known of the nonsense group. His work is known by a great many people. An interesting example of this type was read, from the New York World.

When asked whether American or English humour was the most prevalent in Canada, the speaker said that there was no doubt but that the American had the majority of readers.

IRATE SEVEN OCCULT SOCRATICS MANHANDLE MOLESTING REPORTER

A representative of "The Varsity" was "tired" last night by the members of the Seven Occult Societies, famous Secret Society of this University. It happened like this. The reporter went to find out what he could about the philosophers, but in an attempt to find a good hiding place where he might overhear the evening's discussion, he opened the wrong door, and was seized forthwith, "tapped", and thrust out of the door of a certain institution in Queen's Park, clad only in his inexpressibles. When he had expressed certain opinions of his man-handlers in no uncertain or ambiguous

FRATERNITY MEMBERS ARE NOT SNOBBISH

Malcolm MacDonald Of Oxford Debating Team Makes Statement

SOCIAL LIFE OF OXFORD

The American college fraternity is not a desirable part of the college scholastic system in the opinion of Malcolm MacDonald, member of the Oxford debating team, and son of Great Britain's recent premier, Ramsay MacDonald.

Young MacDonald, when he was touring America with his Oxford colleagues, was entertained at many colleges and universities by various fraternities, and his opinion accordingly, came from first hand observation.

"I would not charge fraternity members with snobishness, or with being unduly frivolous, but fraternities create a definite boundary between members and non-members, which is to be deplored," he said.

"The fact is, that fraternities create most of the social life of the college, and men not in fraternities do not share in this."

In contrasting the educational systems of the two countries, MacDonald said the social life of Oxford was built around hundreds of small clubs; eating clubs, coffee clubs, philosophy clubs, conversation clubs, and athletic clubs. To these, members owe no obligation, and they can withdraw at will.

PITTSBURG DEBATERS ARRIVED IN THE CITY EARLY THIS MORNING

Debate the Merits of Policy Of National Advertising Of Present Day

IS IT HARMFUL?

University of Toronto Debaters Uphold The Negative Of Question

The University of Pittsburgh Debaters arrived this morning at 7:20 and appear in fine fettle for the coming "assault-words", which will take place this evening in the Trinity College Library at 8 o'clock.

The visitors have the difficult task of upholding the affirmative of the resolution: "Resolved that National Advertising as now carried on is socially and economically harmful."

The members of the teams are:—
For the affirmative: The team representing the University of Pittsburgh: Messrs. Roger S. Hamilton, David B. Buerger, C. T. Philips.

For the Negative: The team representing the University of Toronto: Messrs. A. H. Arcell, Victoria College, L. M. Gelber, U.C.C., M. T. de Pencier, Trinity College.

The Warden of Hart House, Mr. Bickersteth, has graciously invited the six debaters, together with Mr. A. H. Ferry, chairman of the Debates Committee, to lunch with him at Hart House at noon.

The Debates Committee has also prepared for an informal dinner to be held this evening in honour of the debaters.

With such agreeable preliminaries, a splendid debate is assured.

UN MOT DIPLOMATIQUE
M. de Saint-Aulaire, ambassadeur à Londres, possède au plus haut degré le sentiment de la délicatesse—et cela en toutes circonstances.

Au cours d'un récent déjeuner il donna une fois de plus l'exacte de son tact et de sa galanterie.

Il avait été placé à côté d'une dame fort jolie, mais dont le babillard tourdissant lui interdisait de placer une parole.

A la fin du repas la dame crut devoir s'excuser:

—J'ai causé à tort et à travers, Monsieur de Saint-Aulaire. Vous allez penser de moi que je suis une vaniteuse aimant uniquement à s'écouter parler.

Et M. de Saint-Aulaire riposta finement:

—Cela n'aurait rien que de très naturel, madame. Je sais que vous aimez beaucoup la musique.

—L'Avenir.

THE PERSONAL ELEMENT

College students as well as faculties the country over are watching with much interest the experiment in the student-adviser system now under way at Wisconsin. Five first year graduates, not over twenty-four years of age, were chosen to give half time to advising freshmen enrolling in letters and science. Selected for activities, distinction, for scholarship, and for active participation in university life, the men were told this was to be no side line but a real job. Each was given certain powers of a dean of men, with an office and stenographic service, then allowed to work out his own ideas and methods, conferring often with Dean Harry Glicksman for exchange of suggestions.

With the passage of a year since the inauguration of the experiment, certain results are apparent, according to J. Alden Behnke in the New York Times: "The most salient feature has been the intimately informal, friendly attitude of these young advisers. A youthful friend is always ready and eager to greet any of his freshmen with a smile and an open mind. When the student bumps a problem, he need not feel afraid to impose on the time of his adviser, because he knows he is not only welcome but expected."

The added values include: closer contact between student, school, and parent; quicker, easier, better adjustment of student to his new and difficult environment, hence earlier returns to the school itself, encouragement of hard-working pupils; vast saving of valuable time of professors to contribute to their fields of research; and general happiness for all concerned.

The criticism levelled at the larger institutions of learning on this continent, that they tend to become cold and impersonal in their relations with the undergraduate is in some measure justified. University of Toronto has reached the size where it is 'too big' from certain points of view. The necessity of handling a large registration makes the considering of each case on its merits impossible. All must comply with a definite system of rules and the great concern of those in authority should be to see that these rules are as comprehensive as possible, in order that justice might be done in every case.

Despite this the whole system is cold and impersonal. Much can be done and is done by unofficial and individual effort on the part of members of the staff. The experiment now in progress at Wisconsin is an official effort to bring the personal element back into play. Wisconsin has the same problems of large registration that Toronto has. Wisconsin has lost nothing by this experiment, but has, rather, gained much. Might not Toronto take up the idea too, not as imitation but as a new movement in the field of Canadian education, that of providing the best and most possible for every youth in this land?

M-m-m-Chicken, lamb chops, nice fresh milk—everything a healthy cat could want. But d'you think they ever give me any? Nothing doing. All I get is the scraps—and precious little of that. And I'm so hungry. Oh well, guess I'd better go see if it's at all fit to eat. But just wait 'till they leave that door open. Maybe I won't have a feed then.

I didn't know him then as now: For when the winds grew bold, From other folks I've heard as how He'd make your blood run cold.

I should a know'd when I saw that leerd

That sumthin' was mighty wrong; And I tell you now, I've come to fear The nights when the winds blow strong.

For I know a story would make you cringe

With horror at its tellin'. Of how old Jim went on a bingie When the awful winds were yellin'.

I hate to think of poor old Jim When the wild winds are sighin', Of how when he was full of gin He set the echoes cryin'.

Now Jim as I said, was an engineer And a darn good one I'll say, But his only failin' was gin and beer As soon as he'd got his pay.

Well anyway, on a certain night The pay sheet he had signed, And away he went, got awful tight, So drunk he was nearly blind.

And down to the round-house he strode away, (Continued on page 3)

With the Theatres

SHEA'S THEATRE

As the Tommies used to say "Another Day another Dollar" This week at Shea's prompts the remark, another week another $1.20—well spent.

It is, however, just too bad for the undergraduate who attends Shea's and happens to arrive just at the beginning of the vaudeville. The first two acts are to say the least, terrible. The first "The Music Art Review" lives up to the last part of its title but the art part is scarcely noticeable. We feel that the bouquet given to the prima donna will be rather shop-worn by Saturday night. The second act consists of a conglomeration of "Alley Talk", and at first does not seem to fill any real part on the bill until one sees the next act. The contrast is so striking that one is only too glad that Miss Clara Kimble Young has been preceded by such a trashy offering. Miss Young is beyond description, giving such an entirely new and refreshing type of performance that words are futile. The trained artist of scores of dramas stepped down from the silver sheet to the extreme satisfaction of Shea's audience. The last two acts combine a wealth of spontaneous laughter and an unusual exhibition of tumbling. Lorge and Morgan have capitalized on one of the most tragic of life's hardships in utilizing the great strength developed in their arms by the loss of one leg each. Where others would beg on the street these chaps provide the best of entertainment for their fellow men.

The film, a drama of the under-world, stars Mary Astor and Robert Elliott. Robert Elliott weaves a thread of rather morbid humour through an otherwise common-place film that at first promises to be the same old hokum. By the time the orchestra has got around to God Save the King, the patrons are more than satisfied with the film offering.

VICTORIA

For the current week "The Victoria Players" are presenting the comedy "Keep Out of the Kitchen". It is a play well worth seeing and no woman interested domestically should miss it.

The scene is in Virginia and shows an old aristocratic family in their Colonial homestead. The four children are left by their parents who are forced to go abroad for the father's health. These are striving with their backs to the wall to secure money enough to see their father restored to health. The only solution proves to be to rent their home to a millionaire in Washington. He demands all white help and the "darkies" are forced to leave. The new help fail to arrive and the four members of this aristocratic family must play the part of servants.

Miss Taliaferro assumes the role of an Irish Cook and forces the guests, especially the men, to the kitchen by her loveliness. In playing her double part she acts with such ease that her audience is entirely taken up.

The plot is very old with the usual complications which all turn out for the best and the hero and heroine live happily ever after.

VARSITY DEFEATS QUEEN'S 2-1 IN SENIOR O.H.A. AT KINGSTON

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity's defeat of St. Mike's in the Senior O.H.A. series on Friday put Queen's in a position to make a definite bid for a chance in the group play-off. Had the Tricolour won from the University of Toronto last night they would have been almost assured of second place and the right to meet the Blue hockeyists for the group title.

And Queen's sure put up a struggle. According to press reports last night's game in Kingston must have been a wow. Even a free-for-all was thrown in for good measure.

The score was 2-1 and only the superb goal-keeping of Snyder saved the Blue team from defeat in the last period when the Tricolour gave everything they had in an effort to put over a last-minute victory.

ministrative Councils. Then, the dismissal of the minister is final for as long as those representatives of the people remain in office. THEN, the dismissal of the Editor is final for as long as those representatives of the students remain in office.

In a word, my point is this: That if these elected representatives have not acted in accord with the wishes of the students in general, the only thing the student body can do is to elect different representatives at the next election of officers. Just as in the government of the country, if the people in general disapprove of the actions of their representatives in parliament, they simply see to it that these members are not elected again, and that is all that sensible and law-abiding citizens can do.

This, Mr. Editor, is my impression of the present much-discussed action of the Executive.

Sincerely,

Claims Criticism of "Juno And The Paycock" Unjustifiable
Editor, "The Varsity".

A lengthy and somewhat incoherent discussion of "Juno and the Paycock" in Monday's "Varsity", prompts this reply. The charge that the play was morbid and distorted is as unjustifiable as the statement that O'Casey and Sinclair Lewis dive into the gutter and complacently wallow there. Our erstwhile Critic shows a lamentable innocence with regard to existing conditions and to the more human side of human nature. The characters were remarkably well drawn and throughout played true to type. "Pure merriment" would have been out of place; the underlying tragedy is never forgotten. But perhaps because the humour is not of the slap-stick type, it has been overlooked. The humour of characterization is profound in Joxer, the Captain, Mrs. Madigan. The humour of incident and dialogue is certainly worthy of mention, and is never forced or untrue to character.

I admit that the Captain was ludicrous at times, Maisie incoherent, Johnny pitiable, Jerry stupid and Charles a negligible character. They are drawn deliberately so. Could they have been anything else without detracting from the merit of the play? The ending was the only logical one, and surely the advent of a child would not seriously affect the future of two women who had the force of will to break away from their sordid environment! It is rather unfair to call any baby an "unprincipled fool"; and I do not recall a single "loathsome scene".

The only adverse criticisms of the play that I would make are that the machinery used to produce certain effects is too exposed to public view, (by which I mean, the author too obviously plays with the emotions of a sympathetic audience); that Captain Boyle's character is too saintly (as represented he is an interesting old probate, the more so in view of his character is only hinted at, gently, the author has been altogether too tactful and discriminating.)

I shall forbear commenting on the

QUEEN'S HOCKEYISTS DEFEATED BY U. OF T.

Varsity Scores 2-1 Victory Over Tricolour at Kingston Last Night

FREE-FOR-ALL IN SECOND

In one of the best games of the O.H.A. season, Varsity senior hockeyists defeated Queen's by a 2-1 score at the Kingston Arena last night. The game was featured by the smart goal-keeping of Snyder, especially in the final period when Queen's made a desperate effort to win the game. A victory for the Tricolour would have almost assured them of a chance to meet University of Toronto in the group play-off series.

The Blue team were the aggressors in the first period and kept Quinn busy in the nets for the Tricolour. Both goalies put in a good exhibition of net tending and the period ended scoreless.

The second period was enlivened by a free-for-all in which nearly every player including the subs took a hand. Whitehead of Toronto and Reist of Queen's were in the melee early but both teams and some onlookers were in the struggle almost from the start. Rink officials went on the ice and soon succeeded in clearing it. Whitehead and Reist were given three-minute penalties.

Stewart scored for Varsity when he skated through the Queen's defence at the start of the second period. He was right on top of Quinn and the Queen's goaltender didn't have a chance to save. Britton scored for Queen's in the middle of the period on a fine piece of individual work. Mc Mullen scored the winning goal near the end of the period and the final stanza went scoreless.

Reads "Le Coin Français But Finds No Frenchman
St. Michael's College.

Feb. 18, 1929.

Editor, "The Varsity".

We should like to take issue with U.C. 3T1, who declares in your issue of February '8 that there is a Frenchman in the woodpile. Perhaps so, but certainly not on "The Varsity" staff. In your "Coin Français" the same issue you publish what purports to be a passage of French "intéressant et divertissant". (Divertissant—very!) A casual perusal of this masterpiece presented for the delectation of university students reveals some score or so of childish blunders, both in grammar and spelling. No doubt it represents quite well the standard of our super-graduate bulletin for big business men, but is there any reason why the "Varsity" should outsource the sensibilities of our compatriots who speak "la langue belle et simple" by such perverted zeal for elegant filler? Further efforts of Uncle Wiggly would appeal to us much more than "Le Coin Français".

Yours Sincerely,
T. V. Kennedy, 3T0.
D. J. Sullivan, 3T0.

Editor's Note:—
No one likes to be blamed for something for which he is in no way responsible. The authors of the above letter have apparently failed to read carefully the preamble to the passage to which they take exception. It was clearly stated that the excerpt was taken from the Xaverian Weekly, which is the undergraduate newspaper of the St. Francis Xavier's University in the Maritimes. It was reproduced exactly as it appeared in the exchange paper received by us and was intended to be taken as a sample of the French produced by a sister University. With this explanation it is hoped that the Editor of "Le Coin

VARSITY ENCOUNTERS C.A.C. INTERMEDIATES IN SCHEDULED GAME

The Aggies Promise Fast Game With The Varsity Basketeers

GAME STARTS AT 7.30

To-night in the Hart House Gymnasium the University of Toronto Intermediate Basketball entry will have the stage to themselves when they entertain the Ontario Agricultural College in a scheduled intermediate game. The Aggies have always been noted for their fast driving basketball teams, and under the tutelage of Prof. Baker have turned out some mighty fine teams. This year's team is no exception and the Varsity boys will be pressed to the limit to hold first position in the Intermediate series.

The Varsity team have been going strong against every team in the good basketball and have uncovered talent that will no doubt grace the Senior ranks next season.

The game will start at seven-thirty and will be open to all members of Hart House; there will be no admission charged. All the fans should be on hand as this promises to be one of the best Intermediate tilts of the season.

François" may still be worthy of the title, "The Frenchman in the woodpile".

Asks—Should Strikers Dictate?
Editor, "The Varsity".

We understand that the former "Varsity" staff, having failed to reinstate their ex-chief, have decided to come back without him. We further understand that they have deemed it quite possible to work under another chief, so have coolly elected one of their own number to that office.

Now we have nothing against the former staff. We believe they should all be given a chance to come back (U.C. with the exception of the ex-editor-in-chief). But they should be taken back as individuals, not as a body. And further, we do not believe that the S.A.C. should be compelled to select the new editor-in-chief from a striking staff. Surely there are other good men in the University who could fill that office equally well.

This will show once and for all whether there be any strength in our Student Government. Is our S.A.C. compelled to permit its employees to strike when they see fit, to stay out so long as they may choose, and to return when they so decide, on conditions imposed by them alone?

If this is to be the case, the strength of Student Government in the University of Toronto is indeed a myth.

Snow Cleaning And The University
Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—
It is one of the fundamental principles of our municipal constitution that all good men and true shall clean their sidewalks within four hours after a snow-fall.

The remark of a student recently that this centre of learning is no place for toil, either here or in the life hereafter, is significant of the laziness which is eating away the vitality of educated civilized life; students do not know how to work; they do not want to work. So elementary a duty as side-walk cleaning is unthinkable to the average undergraduate. It is our hope and prayer that the faculty will see their way clear to cancel such transient and superficial activities as lectures, and lead their pupils in a clean-up campaign to rid our Campus of this crying shame, and pre-historic survival, the snow and ice which mar the beautiful grounds of our university. One thousand able-bodied students of U.C. could completely clear their front campus in a few hours. Surely the praise-worthy example of our oldest college would be followed quickly by the other faculties. A veritable renaissance of manual labour might ensue and go down in history as the turning-point of mankind from an atmosphere of academic artificiality back to the conscientious muscular effort of our forefathers. Only thus were the foundations of our great Dominion laid. Only thus may the summits of its greatness be attained and perpetuated.

Yours for action,

CHAMPUS CAT

And into his engine he leaped;
He grabbed the throttle, nor did he stay
Except till his fire was heaped.

Didn't give a hang if the line was clear

Nor bothered about the storm;
He only thought of his engine dear
And the cab was nice and warm.

So there sat Jim in the awful din,
Nor knew that the rain was pouring,
But thunder and lightning and bootleg gin
Must have made an awful roarin'.

And on through the night, oh what a night!
The wind and rain was blinding,
But all around poor Jim thought right
As the wheels the rails was grinding'.

The cut was narrow on the mountain side,
And treacherous as all creation;
But Jim rock'd not that a big land slide
For him alone was waiting'.

On! On he thundered through the night!
His mount was gaining speed,
And he saw it then in a flash of light,
But still he paid no heed.

With a crashing roar in the fiercest gale
(The worst you e'er heard tell)
The mountain track, all twisted rail
Right into the canyon fell.
And poor old Jim (its an awful tale)
Though he was cooped in the cab,
He pulled right off his old shirt tail
And sailed across the gap.

And now, if the staff doesn't go to work and knock the tripe out of the press, this twin will twindle again on Thursday.

Blake, in order to avoid arrest for assault, dresses in women's clothes, and appears as the Fascinating Widow, Mrs. Monty.

The action takes place at a summer resort during the last week of the college vacation and continues after the opening of college in the fall. Miss Marjorie Foster as Margaret Leffingwell, plays opposite Mr. Martelle and gives a very creditable performance. To complicate matters Oswald Wentworth, played by Nat Burns, who is assaulted by Hal is also in love with Margaret. Many complications arise out of Hal's impersonations of Mrs. Monty, but he is able to straighten everything out with the help of his friend, Tut Leffingwell, and Lank Wells, the coach. These are played very well by John Holden and Herbert Leslie, respectively.

The musical program is pleasingly rendered by the New Empire Concert Orchestra under the direction of Murray Adaskin, and successfully rounds out a very good show which is well worth seeing.

William of Orange and Xerxes Meet Outside Ye Hart House

(By Jonah)

"Well," said Napoleon sadly, "now he's gone and done it!"
"Who has?" asked Plato.

"H.G. has," said Napoleon. "He'll have to rewrite the 'Outline' now. Rotated us through the wrong dimension of time, and here we are, Lafayette, we're here! Well, it's good to be put in the right faculty anyhow."

"What faculty?" said Plato.
"School, of course," said Napoleon.

"I'm taking rowing over there."
"That's the bunk," said Plato solemnly. "I'm yours for peace, and how! Have a 'Wrigley, Boney'!"

"Thanks, I will," said Napoleon, "who's that coming out of U.C.?"
"That's Charley I and Wellington," said Plato. "Look at Well's scowl! He's sore because they want to Reform the S.A.C."

"Well, Plato," said the Duke, stepping up arrogantly and putting his feet down firmly.

"Lo, Welly," said Plato, "where's your pipe?"

"Left it in Baldwin House," said the Duke arbitrarily, "only place I ever use it!"

"Just a minute," put in Chas. I. "I've got something to show you." Turning himself and his shanks with a twisting movement of exotic grace, Chas. I. pirouetted languorously upon his left (big) toe. Then he opened his mouth convulsively, almost professorially.

"This is my piece," he explained bashfully.

"Whoopee, Chuck!" said Plato, andante.

"Chas. I began to recite, pianissimo et tremolo:
"I lost my head on Monday last. I'd like it found 'fore Sunday's past—"

"Whoa!" cried Plato and Napoleon in unison and crescendo.

"What's the big idea?" protested Chas. I, "that's my piece."

"It's the dance we don't like," said

Plato. "It has a rather bourgeois flavour. Now, personally, Comrade, I prefer the Charleston."

"Don't do it now, you old Fabian!" shouted everybody else fortissimo.

"I'll do it Friday night."

"Ole!" said the Duke, "who's the woman?"

"Anne Hutchinson," said Chas. I. "Mary Queen of the Tights for me!"

said the Duke.

"Hot stuff!" cried everybody else, retrospecto.

"I'd take that Antoinette woman if I were going," said Plato sadly.

"Not going?" cried everybody, the Duke dictatorially.

"Not this shot," said Plato pathetically, "I've got to help make the noise."

"Tough luck, old man," said Chas. I. "Whaddya play?"

There was a note of plaintive melancholy in Plato's voice as he turned to leave the library. And he told them A Priori:

"The harp that once through Tara's Halls."

"There oughta be a check-up on that Hall Committee," said Napoleon, with an air of the profoundest binningesquerie.

"Hear! Hear!" cried everybody, de profundis.

Archibald Flower Speaks On Stratford-upon-Avon And

LECTURE IN WEST HALL

Young People Are Unfortunately Forced to Study
Shakespeare

Before a large audience Mr. Archibald Flower of Stratford-upon-Avon, England, delivered a very interesting lecture in West Hall, U.C., on Stratford and the Shakespearean Plays. His charming style, typically English, his genuine humour, his rare intimacy instantly made a great impression upon the audience.

"I am fighting a battle against that great army of commentators who strive so hard to make Shakespeare so dull. What I don't like is that so many young people of to-day are being introduced to Shakespeare by being forced to study it, instead of getting the fun of the thing, the thrill of the thing.

"When one has lived the whole of his life in Stratford one likes to think of Shakespeare as a typical schoolboy, not a model one. I like to think of him as full of mischief, making love to all the girls, making friends with everyone.

"The finest thing about Shakespeare is the appeal he makes to the whole world. He knows no barriers of class, creed or colour. He knew how to tell a story in an interesting way, a human way, and so he is read with great fervor by the Hindu as well as by the Englishman.

"It is indeed wonderful that classes are going on to-day in the classroom where he studied 300 years ago. I (Continued on page 3)

For the Honorary President's prize, G. A. Gale, E. M. Henry and J. W. Miller were nominated, the award going to G. A. Gale.

Mikah Was a Smart Lad and Still Theorizes on Theology

Theology, sir, is the spice of life, meat and drink to every man. Why, I tell you, sir, without theology we'd all be—

Say did you hear what Mrs. Smuts heard from that old gossip Miss Squibbs who was told by Mrs. Pomperan's washwoman? My wife's brother's mother's sister's cousin's husband told me all about the awful scandal about our minister's step-son's great grandfather—and him a minister too! What's the ministry comin' to—all this gossip! You know, I never gossip. No, sir! Why, any man that peddles scandal ought to be—should be—why, my goodness, sir, any man that gossips—why, it's unthinkable! I tell you, sir, I'm a dang good Prestlerian, and it says in my catechism 'Very well, he who soever shall be found in gossip, or otherwise being in antiquity, shall be heretofore everlastingly expurgated from the gates of paradise.' Yes, sir! I learnt this when I was no more'n knee-high to a beer-bottle. 'Er, 'scuse me; have another glass? No? Well, I think—a-h-h!

Yes, by gum, I was a smart lad when I was young! And it's all due to my theology! I suppose you heard what Auntie Hearst said about old Dean Wizon? You know he's an old bachelor, and she's never been married, and they was kind of lookin' across onto each other's porches. I was the first one to notice it and I told Mrs. Murphy about it; you know, the stout red-faced lady that sings so loud in the choir. She was over to the Women's Help tea and told the minister's wife—'Nother glass? No? I believe, —Um' that's real!

Yes, sir, my theology's as safe and sound as democracy! I'm a good Rotarian, and if Noah didn't build a bigger and better Ford, I'm danged! 'Nother? No? Old Paul's my particular favourite; you know him, bosom friend of Angus McPae. 'Nother? No? What? None left? Dang it, sir, good-bye!

MORLEY CALLAGHAN GIVES SECOND TALK THIS AFTERNOON

Author of "Strange Fugitive" Gives A Lecture On Journalism

IN MINING BUILDING AT 5

Has Had Many Stories Accepted
By The Scribner's
Magazines

This afternoon at 5 o'clock, Mr. Morley Callaghan, Canada's recent addition to the World of Literature, will give the second of the series of lectures on subjects relative to Journalism in Room 22 of the Mining Building.

Mr. Callaghan, a graduate of this University, has had many short stories accepted by Scribner's Magazine, and caused much discussion by his recent book, "Strange Fugitive". He is at present at work on a second novel.

Mr. Callaghan has many original ideas on the subject of Canadian Literature, and his lecture ought to prove of interest to all followers of modern thought in literary fields.

METAL DISSOLVED BY WATER

Last evening the Provost entertained the Science Club of Trinity College as his guests. Mr. John T. Wilson was the speaker of the evening, and gave as his topic "The Life History of Gold". His lecture was illustrated by moving pictures of the Hollinger Mines and of the Royal Mint at Ottawa.

Under great pressures, the acid rocks, the last of the series to crystallize, do so, without taking on water of crystallization. Water at the interior of the earth, due to pressure, is hot enough to dissolve silica to form a strong acid that will itself dissolve such metals as silver, copper, tin and gold. When this water is cooled by reaching the surface of the earth, the silica is left as quartz with the metals throughout it.

All present members of the staff and any who desire to try out for positions will attend a meeting of the staff in the Varsity Office, Hart House, on Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

G. K. CHESTERTON PREFERRED TO SHAW

"Resolved that this house prefers G. B. Shaw to G. K. Chesterton," was the subject of an open-house debate at Loretto College the night of Feb. 19. The decision was awarded to the Opposition by a vote of 27 to 16. The speakers for the affirmative were Miss Helen Radigan and Miss Mary Fitzpatrick and for the opposition, Miss Mac Rouselle and Miss Helen McGrath.

U.C. LIT. MEETING UPHOLD SYSTEM OF CO-EDUCATION

Beamish Supports It As Practiced
But Not As A Principle

SOPHS WIN FROM JUNIORS

Complete Co-Education Or None At All Advocated

The present system of co-education was upheld at the U.C. Lit. meeting last night when the 2nd year defeated the 3rd year on the motion, "Resolved that this house deprecates co-education as practiced in this college."

B. D. Beamish, taking the place of Mr. Bell, who was unavoidably absent, began by stating that he was not debating co-education as a principle, but as it is practiced at University College.

"We should have either complete co-education of none at all. Co-education should include common lectures, common debates, common dining rooms and common sleeping quarters. The present system goes only half way, it is neither hot nor cold, it is lukewarm. "College is a pattern for our future life," stated A. A. Wood. "We are supposed to form habits and ideas of life which will be useful to us when we graduate."

If not for co-education a man, coming into the business world, after graduation, and meeting with women there, would be at a loss as to how to deal with them. Mixing is natural and economical.

Co-education is the only logical conclusion to our present system of education. (Continued on page 3)

RELATION EXISTS BETWEEN MUSIC AND OUR LIVES

J. D. Atkinson Addresses The Women Students In The Union

ILLUSTRATED ON PIANO

Motion Debated At Loretto College on Tuesday Evening

Mr. J. D. Atkinson addressed a goodly group of women in the auditorium of the U.C. Women's Union, at 1.30 p.m. yesterday. His subject was "The Relation of Music to Life."

"It is not necessary to know how to sing or play an instrument to appreciate music," Mr. Atkinson remarked. "It is an excellent vehicle of expression; and its beauty makes it appeal in its own particular way.

Miss Marjorie Watson was present to illustrate, on the piano, the speaker's references to the music of expression.

"Music is an intimate thing, making its appeal to us through the emotions. Every event of our life can be put to music; and in this way, the charm and the beauty of our daily experiences can be made manifest.

"The irritating and monotonous regularity of life can be very easily dispensed with, by simply introducing into the music of life a few variations of tempo and tune.

"All of us have a deep, hidden, innate love for the beautiful," the speaker insisted, "and life deprived of its music can be made the dulllest of occupations."

He exhorted his hearers to avail themselves of the excellent opportunities which Toronto affords, of hearing the best music by the best artists. In order that the keen latent sense of the beautiful which is in every one of us, might be developed to the full; and that life in all its colour might be truly presented to us.

Mr. Atkinson very effectively illustrated his remarks by his own playing at the piano, the reading of Wordsworth's poem "The Rainbow," and by the showing of an artist's conception of the same subject; and showed how "each in his own tongue," the artist, the poet, and the musician, expressed the beauty of life.

TORONTO U. BEATEN BY U. OF PITTSBURGH IN HOME DEBATE

National Advertising As Carried On Is Socially And Economically Harmful

DEBATE PROVES HUMOROUS

Procedure Marked Departure From Usual Procedure At
Hart House

"Resolved that National Advertising as now carried on is socially and economically harmful," was the subject for debate between the University of Pittsburgh and the University of Toronto last night. There was a rather good crowd on hand, but the debate was well handled and highly humorous.

The procedure last night was a marked departure from the usual procedure at the Hart House debate. A. H. Ferry, (Emmanuel College) acted as chairman and each speaker after having spoken once at some length, was permitted to speak again for about three minutes, at the conclusion of which a vote was taken on the motion before the house on the merits of the respective teams, resulting in a 35-4 victory for the affirmative upheld by the visitors. After the speeches from the floor the chairman called another vote on the question, which was defeated 25-8.

R. S. Hamilton, the first speaker for Pittsburgh, claimed that National Advertising gives no reliable information about a certain commodity, but rather centres upon illustrations and slogans which have the effect of "scaring" people into using that commodity, confusing them in their purchasing. Advertisers make of even religious holidays, a commercial venture, creating artificial demands. "It has made of society a hen with its head cut off, hopelessly floundering about." Le Coin Français

A propos, voici un petit poème. Je sais bien qu'il vaut presque rien, mais puisque c'est le premier poème en français que je n'ai jamais écrit, j'en suis fier. Le voici:

Les Premières étoiles.
Les premières étoiles du soir—
Les seules lumières du noir

Avec la lune vous êtes les gardes
Du firmament; et puis, plus tard,
Dans la nuit,

Arrivent les autres étoiles d'or
Proclamées, sans bruit, du cor,
Des premières étoiles du soir.

Pouvons—Nous féliciter M. Storg, et le remercier de ce poème. Si c'est son premier, nous avons grand espoir pour son avenir.

Nous sommes très contents de retrouver qu'il y a quelques-uns entre nos lectures qui apprécient nos efforts et qui pensent percevoir un peu de valeur dans notre coin. C'est avec grand plaisir que vous prenez la liberté d'imprimer toute les lettres d'un de nos amis qui a employé le non-de-plume de Storg.

Mon cher monsieur:
Je vous assure que tous les jours je parcourais avec beaucoup d'intérêt Le Coin Français. J'apprécie bien vos calembours bien qu'ils soient, à ce qu'on dit, le plus pauvre.

OUR STAND

Until a week ago the "Varsity" was under the editorship of L. J. Ryan. During his regime he gathered around him a staff of competent undergraduate and graduate journalists. The staff thus organized proceeded upon a career which to say the least, invited disaster. On several occasions when trouble brewed, the Students' Council, representative of all parts of the University and publishers of the "Varsity", backed the staff in its actions and pointed out the danger of its ways. Time came when the Students' Council and its Joint Executive felt that they could no longer continue to uphold its policy maintained by Ryan and still publish a representative paper. As owners of the "Varsity" and employers of the staff they made certain demands as to policy. When these were disregarded, the editor was dismissed.

Throughout the history of journalistic endeavour, and it is a devious path to follow, one thing has gradually defined itself and become the centre of the journalist's ideals. "Loyalty to your paper" and "above all the paper must come out" are phrases which adequately express the newspaperman's obligations. On the dismissal of Ryan, the editors of the then "Varsity" staff called a meeting, moved that the staff resign and 'orated' the junior members into passing the measure.

Feeling that public opinion in undergraduate circles was not behind the resigned staff in the support of their 'grievances', former members of "The Varsity" staff, together with some members of the then immediate resigned staff, undertook to maintain publication.

The old staff, then identified with "The Adversity", continued their abusive attitude and filled their columns, in a downtown daily, with technical "abuses" and personal attacks.

With the call for nominations for the vacant position of Editor-in-Chief of "The Varsity" the evicted editors continued their defiant attitude and in their nomination of Ussher as their representative demanded that those members of their staff who had returned to service on the paper as well as those members of former staffs who had volunteered to fill in the breach, be summarily dismissed. In return for these concessions, what remained of the former staff proposed returning as a body. By this move the former editors showed that their ability to lead the majority of the staff around by the nose still persisted. By this move, too, they obligated the junior members who acquiesced to a moral obligation not to return to the paper except under the conditions they had imposed. By this move also they continued towards their own destruction. They proposed a contract so one-sided that no sane-minded executive would consider it for a moment.

WE HAND OVER OUR DUTIES

With this issue we hand over our duties to W. Sanders, appointed yesterday to the position of Editor-in-Chief of this paper. We congratulate Mr. Sanders on his appointment. We are convinced that he is well fitted for the position. Mr. Sanders has held various positions on "The Varsity" staff and was its Managing Editor when he resigned at the end of the Christmas term of this academic year.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

More of "Juno"

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir—

I have always suspected the university undergraduate to be of a romantic yet unimaginative mind, in spite of his loud spoken determination to "get the most out of life." Mr. English's criticism of "Juno and the Paycock" seems to justify my opinion. Ten-ment conditions exist (even in Toronto), and it is incomprehensible that an artist who understands these conditions as honestly as does Sean O'Casey, should be forced by middle-class opinion to give up expressing the tragic sincerity of the play when obvious enough to convince anyone that it was not written deliberately to horrify. There was nothing deliberate about it; it was the natural expression of intense feeling, clearly so even to those who have not lived with Ireland's history.

To call a play so essentially sympathetic "an infinite number of loathsome scenes" is almost libellous. What was loathsome, was the perpetual misunderstanding of the play's beauty and seriousness by each audience. So used

"Juno and the Paycock"

(Several letters have appeared in our Correspondence Column with reference to the recent Hart House production of "Juno and the Paycock". The following review and appreciation has been contributed by an old member of "The Varsity" staff. We publish it in the hope that our readers will find in it a faithful criticism of the play.—The Editor.)

"Juno and the Paycock"

Fortunately last week I attended the Hart House theatre production of "Juno and the Paycock" by Sean O'Casey. It was the first play of his that I have seen upon the stage, and the grim reality of it haunts me. Its atmosphere is the same as that in which for so many years Mr. O'Casey lived, where he had abundant means of studying the events and the personalities at close range. His characters are terribly real, poverty, ferocity, mock heroics, despair—all the dread sentiment of the human heart are represented. Ireland is presented in her stark reality.

"Juno and the Paycock" like all the other plays of Mr. O'Casey, has its setting in the troubled times when there was violence on the one side among the Revolutionaries, and the Black and Tans on the other. We read all about it in the papers, but how little we knew of its realities we find when Mr. O'Casey brings us behind the scenes. His story is of a family living in that slumland which he himself knows so well. There are two principal figures—a husband and wife. The husband is the "Paycock", and the wife is Juno—called so in joke.

The "Paycock" is just what his name suggests—a boastful, idle, cocky creature; he boasts of deeds he never achieved; and when work is offered him, he prefers the dole and a bottle of stout, and goes to bed on the pretence of illness. The wife is a splendid contrast to all this; hard-working, sensible and pious. There is a third figure—a poor, maimed, paralyzed, huddled-up thing, broken down to a continuous whine by the wounds he has received in the street-fighting in O'Connell Street, the centre of the Rebellion of 1916. There is a fourth figure—called Joxer—who is really, as interesting as any even of the more prominent figures in the drama, for he is as great a sot as the "Paycock", with the addition that he is a sponger on the less penniless. They are all in the single slum room when there comes the announcement that the Paycock has inherited a small fortune, and at once the Paycock decorates his room with cheap finery—including a gramophone. There is something which moves you at once to laughter and to tears in this enjoyment of their sordid luxury.

And then came the disasters that overwhelm the little family. The inheritance proves to be only a false story; the girl of the house goes wrong; the cripple is taken out—he is accused of having "informed" to save his shattered body from execution—and is shot. Mrs. Tancred, a poor widow, comes in to tell the story of the assassination of her son also; and then the mother of the household, bowed down under this accumulation of tragedies, utters a word of prayer to the image of the Blessed Virgin on her wall, and prays God for strength to bear up against all this accumulation of tragic sorrows.

"Maybe," she says, "I didn't feel sorry enough for Mrs. Tancred when her poor son was found as Johnny's been found now—because he was a Die-hard. Ah, why didn't I remember that then he wasn't a Die-hard or a Stater, but only a poor dead son. It's well I remember all she said—and it's my turn to say it now; what was the are these idealists to mocking at realities, that whenever they see a drunken man on the stage they must perforce laugh—because a drunken man is invariably meant to be funny when he appears in a play.—If anything was wrong with "Juno and the Paycock", if anything robbed it of strength, it was the stupidity of its audience. Less talk and more thought might start a fresher wind blowing.

Yours truly, 371.

pain I suffered, Johnny, bringin' you into the world to carry you to your cradle to the pains I'll suffer carryin' you out of the world to bring you to your grave . . ."

And then there comes another and final scene, to add to the already terrible tragedy. The "Paycock" and Joxer enter, they are helplessly drunk, and they fall helpless on the stage, making comments on that bewildering crowd of tragedies that has descended on their family, and on Ireland generally:

"Paycock" (taking a sixpence from his pocket and looking at it): "Wan single, solitary tanner left out of all I borried. . . (He lets it fall) The last of the Mohicans . . . The blinds is down, Joxer . . . the blinds is down."

Joxer (walking unsteadily across the room, and anchoring at the bed): "Put all . . . your troubles . . . in your ould kit bag . . . an' smile . . . smile . . . smile."

"Paycock": "The country'll have to steady itself . . . it's goin' . . . to hell . . . Where'r all . . . the chairs . . . gone to . . . steady itself Joxer . . . Chairs'll . . . have to . . . steady themselves . . . No matter . . . what any one may say . . . Irelan' sober . . . is Irelan' free."

Joxer (stretching himself on the bed): "Chain . . . an' . . . slavee . . . that's a darlin' motto . . . a darlin' motto."

"Juno and the Paycock" is a powerful play of intense reality, and I congratulate the Director of Hart House theatre in choosing it. The actors also deserve special mention, as to their work was of the highest order. It was an evening, the memories of which shall linger for many a day.

Dr. Moure's Recital

Dr. Moure's fortnightly recital yesterday afternoon was attended by a small but enthusiastic audience.

The Becker Sonata, but slightly known to Toronto audiences, was particularly interesting for its delightful "Adagio" movement and for the rather original treatment of the "Finale".

The well known Bach "Fantasia", Fugue in G minor is always acceptable fare.

Dvorak's popular largo, received the most sympathetic treatment and the finest reception of the afternoon. The more beautiful and delicate effects of the organ were used to excellent advantage.

A "Minuet" by a rather obscure contemporary of Handel, perhaps lost some of its sprightly grace by an excess of retards.

Umare's Tarantella, a showy wild creation, done with most pleasing vigor, completed the programme.

S.P.S. WIN THE JUNIOR TRACK CHAMPIONSHIPS

Decisively Defeat University College in Finals Last Evening

MARGIN OF 11 POINTS

Adams Swaps The Entire Sprint Series, Taking 100 Yards in 11 Flat

S.P.S. won the Interfaculty Indoor Track Championship by decisively outscoring University College in the final events of the season at Hart House last night. Adams, Thompson, Peaker and Sprague scored for S.P.S. to surmount U.C.'s one-point lead and to win the championship for S.P.S. by a margin of 11 points. The final summary by faculties: S.P.S. 67; U.C. 56; O.A.C. 10; Meds 5; St. Mikes 3; Vic 2.

Adams swept the entire sprint series by capturing the 100 yards dash in 11 seconds flat. There was a three cornered tie for second place but the final heats gave second position to Duff Thompson, and third to Jermyn of U.C. A large field of twelve sprinters competed in this event.

School's crack mile relay team (Adams, Nimmo, Howe, Thompson) came dangerously close to a new interfaculty record in winning the mile event in 3:38.45 to win easily from U.C. (Jermyn, Merritt, Vila, Smith) who were timed in 3:43.15. School "Frosh" (Smith, Black, Hymmen, Donaldson) finished third in this event.

Second, the O.A.C. track and field star, showed splendid form in the jumps, winning both the standing broad and the running hop, step and jump. He won the broad with a leap of 9' 11 1/2", one of the best jumps recorded at Hart House. Adams of S.P.S. was fairly close with 9' 6 3/4" and Finlayson with 9' 4" was third.

Finlayson gave Secord a close fight in the hop, step and jump but Secord's mark of 27' 1" won the event. Finlayson's jump measured 26' 11". Duff Thompson secured the single point for third with 25' 4".

JUNIOR SCHOOL DEFEATS U.C.

Win From University College In An Interfaculty Game

SCORE WAS 10-0

Junior School defeated Junior U.C. in an interfaculty baseball game last night when they ran up a score of 10-0 in four innings. The engineers were first in and from the start they gave a good account of themselves. Their fielding was excellent and the pitching faultless. Earl Davey, who was the school twirler, only allowed one hit and he was ably supported by Irv. Chalmers in the catcher's box. Davey's pitching was the sensation of the game.

The U.C. team was always on the alert and combined effectively but despite their good fielding, they were unable to get on the bases. Sobel, as pitcher, and Bamwell, the catcher, were both outstanding for the red and white team.

The teams:—
Jr. U.C.—Bamwell, c.; Sobel, p.; Jacks, 1st; Priefield, 2nd; Brighton, 3rd; Caldicott, s.s.; Lee, l.f.; Algate, c.f.; Daugherty, r.f.
Jr. S. P. S.—Chalmers, c.; Davey, p.; Moerer, 1st; W. Campbell, 2nd; Edmonds, 3rd; Carbone, s.s.; Hewitt, l.f.; Carmichael, c.f.; Adams, r.f.

Parker had a very clear margin over all other competitors in the shot-put and won the event for School. Baldwin of Meds and Contway of Meds, were second and third. The distance was 34' 2".

Ralph Adams, the Olympic runner, won the all-round indoor championship by winning the 50 yards, the 100 yards, and the 220 yards, in addition to a second place in the standing broad. Don Smith, of U.C., earned the middle-distance indoor championship of the university by winning the half-mile, mile and two-mile runs for a total of 15 points. This is a remarkable showing for a freshman and the first time that all three events have been won by one runner in years.

Jermyn of U.C., Thompson of S.P.S., Dennis of U.C., Secord of O.A.C., and Nimmo of S.P.S., were the other leading point-winners for their respective faculties.

O.A.C. DEFEATS THE INTERMEDIATE TEAM

In Basketball Game By A 28-18 Score Last Evening

HALF-TIME SCORE 15-14

The O.A.C. cage-team defeated the Varsity Intermediate by 28 to 18 in a flashy basketball game in Hart House Gym last night. The visitors were a shade better than the U. of T. players and held the lead all through the game. They were a heavier team and combined splendidly in a number of powerful rushes which generally ended with a basket, although the blue and white defence put up some stiff opposition.

In the first half both teams played well with a deal of rigorous rushing and checking. Currie opened the attack with a foul shot for the Aggies, which he followed up with a basket from close-in. Brady, then put in a basket for the blue and white team. Riggs of Varsity, then started out to tally and got nine points before the end of the period. The Hull brothers each got two more for O.A.C. when the stanza ended with the Guelph team on the long end of a 15 to 14 score.

The final game was a very different story. Varsity just couldn't get the ball in the basket while the visitors plopped it in time after time. The play see-sawed back and forth, but the home team had no luck at all at the basket. Hewer, of O.A.C., ran up eight more points, closely followed by H. Hull, with four. The game ended with O.A.C. easily victorious by 28 to 18.

The teams:—
U. of T.—Forwards, Riggs (10) and Brady (2); centre, Pasternak; guards, Devitt (1) and Cock (5); subs, Foxe, White and Laughlin.

O.A.C.—Forwards, Mewer (9) and H. Hull (8); centre, Currie (8); guards, Graham and G. Hull (3); subs, Griffiths, Welber and Eckert.

J. H. Gringorten began in a humorous vein, saying that it was co-education that brought him to the debate unprepared and that it was most likely co-education that kept his colleague away.

As one example of the detriment of co-education he cited a case in which lectures were reduced to afternoon sessions. In conclusion he pointed out the distracting effect of the use of co-like to think of Shakespeare going back to visit the room where he used to "pull the leg" of the dull professor, because William undoubtedly indulged in boyish pranks, as may be inferred from many pointed references throughout his plays to the taskmasters of the old English school.

Mr. Flower was instrumental in bringing to Toronto his famous company of English Shakespearean players, who have had unparalleled success throughout the British Isles and the U.S. Next Monday his company opens a two-weeks' engagement at the Royal Alexandra, presenting a series of plays including "Hamlet", "Julius Caesar", and the popular comedy "The Merry Wives of Windsor".

TORONTO U. BEATEN BY U. OF PITTSBURG

The first speaker for the negative, A. H. Arrell (Victoria College), lauded national advertising for the effect it had in the shaping of production, directing the lines along which it should proceed. It is an instrument to aid mass production, with its manifold benefits accruing to the consumer.

D. B. Buerger of the affirmative, decried the harmful effects on society of national advertising from the economic point of view. The cost of advertising is borne in the end by the consumer. Advertising itself is of a competitive nature, and does not increase purchasing power, since each consumer has a fixed buying power. In addition it fails to relate the quantity, quality and price of a commodity in question.

That national advertising is invaluable in making possible the publication of newspapers and magazines, was the contention of L. M. Gelber (U.C.). It makes possible too, the broadcasting of fine concerts, and the construction and maintenance of beauty spots. And the remedy suggested by the affirmative, of specification buying, does not take into any consideration the personality of the consumer.

The constructive part of the affirmative argument was outlined by C. T. Phillips. At present large manufacturers buy their materials according to specifications. The U.S. Bureau of Standards publishes a specification list of over 11,000 articles. Thus the consumer could buy without the aid of advertising, but by definite scientific specifications.

M. T. de Pencier (Trinity), the last speaker on the debate, declared that national advertising is a most vital instrument at the command of modern industry. The time of fraudulent advertising is over, and advertising now serves to bring about a better feeling between producer and consumer.

Miss M. Winspear, speaking from the floor, expressed the view that modern advertising has a moral value in its note of warning by the presentation of information.

metics and the unnecessary display of sophistication assumed by young ladies during lectures.

"Co-education has a stimulating influence on both men and women," was the point stressed by J. Sheppard. "Friends of opposite sex will take an interest in each other to the extent of helping each other in their studies."

The presence of women has a refining influence on the men and at the same time the women are influenced by the men.

When the question was opened to the house, it was cited that it was co-education that had brought the recent trouble of "The Varsity" to a head.

Refreshments and a smoker completed the programme for the evening.

WITH THE MUSES

Some Recent Books and some not so recent

"ELIZABETH AND ESSEX" — By Lytton Strachey. (Chatto and Windus.)

Anyone interested in history who has not read this should do so at once. It carries on the tradition set by "Eminent Victorians" and "Queen Victoria", but surpasses both. The author has gotten over his tendency to quibble over petty things which somewhat marred the earlier works.

"POINT COUNTER POINT" — By Aldous Huxley. (Chatto and Windus.)

If you enjoyed Mr. Huxley's other novels you will enjoy this one. There is the same brilliant satire and caricature of "Antic Hay", as well as the introduction of a new note in the form of a couple of characters who are normal people. There is somewhat more than a suggestion that perhaps, after all, the author does believe in something. Mostly, however, it is about the same old type of mis-fits who feel that because they have achieved a deviation from a conventional normal, they have advanced. One feels there are more profitable novels to read than those of Mr. Huxley.

"MIDSUMMER NIGHT AND OTHER TALES IN VERSE" — By John Masfield. (Heinemann.)

Masfield revels in action, and in these tales chosen from the Arthurian legend he finds a Happy Hunting-ground. Enjoyable, very, but one feels that the Round Table does not show to its best advantage decked in such modern verse. Nobody has done more than John Masfield to show us hidden beauties in our commonplace world, and now he turns his attention to showing us the commonplaces in a world we had always regarded as being the acme of romanticism. We prefer him when he is doing the former.

"ACTION AND OTHER STORIES" — By C. E. Montague. (Mason.)

When Mr. Montague gave up the editorship of The Manchester Guardian in order "to get some books written", those of us who were familiar with his work, looked forward with happy expectancy. And now, less than three years later, his last book is published posthumously. The thirteen stories it contains, serve to enhance a reputation already established by some half dozen volumes, and to emphasize the loss to British letters through his untimely death. Some of the stories deal with the late war, and are reminiscent of his earlier "Rough Justice", decidedly the best war novel we have come across.

Will Durant, Doctor of Philosophy and the author of "The Story of Philosophy", is being urged to make a lecture tour of American colleges.

Campus Scenes Sympathetically Portrayed By Local Artists

James Blomfield, Famous Landscape Painter And Authority on Architecture Talks For "Varsity"

For a long time we have been aware of the pictures which Mr. James Blomfield has been painting in and around Toronto,—pictures dealing with such varying subjects as the bluffs of Scarborough, corners of down-town Toronto, the island, the ravines of Rosedale, the buildings of the University of Toronto, etc.,—and for just as long a time we have known that we liked them.

We were vaguely aware, also, that Mr. Blomfield is an Englishman who visited the Canadian west in his youth, and later came to make his home on this side of the Atlantic. We had heard of him in British Columbia,—of his mural decorations in the Government House at Victoria, which have been praised by critics from all over the world. We have seen him referred to as an authority on the Indians of the West Coast. We knew that after an enviable career as a designer in Chicago and as a journalist and illustrator in Boston, he had come back to Canada some eight years ago and settled on the outskirts of Toronto.

The products of his creative genius during these past eight years have become too well known and too numerous to mention. They include church mural decoration, stained glass windows (notably those in the new Hamilton Mausoleum), the intricate sgraffito work design over the entrance of the Sunnyside Bathing Pavilion, and the collection of paintings mentioned above.

When asked to write about Mr. Blomfield we felt it would be more profitable to have a talk with him than merely to attempt to describe his work, and so made a trip to his studio cottage in Scarborough Township.

After introductions, we began: "We represent the 'Varsity', the undergraduate—"

"Oh yes, I have been reading about you in the press. If there is anything I can do for you I will be very pleased."

The questions we had intended to ask were completely forgotten as we looked around at the picture-covered walls and attractive furnishings of the studio. The formal interview we had planned was hopelessly impossible with so much to look at. Mr. Blomfield himself came to our rescue.

"Perhaps you would like to see some pictures."

We would and did.

In the course of looking at the pictures and listening to the conversation of the artist, and drinking tea served by Mrs. Blomfield, who is herself well known as a writer, we were able to arrive at some conception of Mr. Blomfield's theory of painting. His artistic credo might be expressed in some such way as the following.

Making a picture does not consist of making a morphological record in line, because if that is all one wants, a five-cent picture post-card will serve the purpose. The last thing with which a painter has to do, if he be a painter, is the photographic record of things. What he should do is to set forth in their proper valuation of forms and areas, of tones and colour, the mental impressions which he may receive from any aspect of nature, interpretatively expressed by means of the particular medium in which he happens to be working. That gives him a possibility of mental expression in terms of natural form and colour, that may range anywhere between the curl of a single wave breaking at dawn on Kew Beach, to the ashes of roses ghost of Mt. Baker, floating in the green twilight above the blue mists of September in British Columbia.

"Many people at many times," remarked Mr. Blomfield, "have complimented me on the truth and minuteness with which I paint details. As a matter of fact, I have drawn it to the last pebble on the beach or the last vein of a leaf, but I don't paint it in my pictures, because for one thing it would be a visual lie."

What Mr. Blomfield does do is to state the great facts of nature with such accuracy of generalization, that the mental reaction of the beholder is that of a subconscious inference, or within-himself understanding, of the unstated detail.

The case in point was illustrated by the next picture, a summer garden scene. Looking at the iris covered hillside as a pictorial whole, one is conscious of certain areas of blue and gold of various degrees of luminousness and certain defined form; certain other areas of more or less tinted white, with occasional golden centres; above, a mass of running rhythms in various tones of full green, blue green, and grey green; all against a background, which, rendered with an appropriate rhythm, in a just balance of colour, tone, and value, is the true mental equation of the distant trees which clothe the hill-side. A mere photographic draughtsman would have recorded every last petal of the cosmos, every last whisker of the iris, every last leaf of the distant trees. That would not have been a work of art so much as a mere cataloguing. What was before us was a mental concept of the splendid blaze of colour and light expressed in floral forms upon a summer hill-side. It was the difference between the masterly phrasing of a polished speaker or writer who summarizes many small things in one great sentence, and the painful particularization of a lesser qualified man.

"The Heights of Scarborough at Sundown"

Mr. Blomfield is not so much interested in making pictures of places or pictures of things, as in looking at them, or as much of them as he chooses to take, as a means of expressing certain mental ideas of time, atmosphere, light, the sentiment of a place and so on. There are so many ramifications of the thing. While it is true that most of his pictures are pictures of a place, the place is to him an accident.

We remembered some of the phrases which have been used so freely to describe pictures in recent years, and seized the opportunity of having them explained to us.

"What is your conception of 'Significant Form'?" we asked.

"Significant Form" is form which says anything," was the reply. "It may be as general as you like, but unless the generalization is absolutely right as far as it goes, the alleged form won't be a form of anything. It is all very well to signify one or more pine trees with a wonderful swipe and a few twiggles of the brush, but I think the painter should have mental elasticity enough in his devising of significances to be able to make a difference between one type of pine and another. Any more questions?"

"What about the buildings of the University of Toronto, from the standpoint of an artist?"

"They give me a greater pleasure every time I see them, if only for the well-bred Mid-Victorian conscientiousness on points of architectural style which they present. The men responsible for the original buildings brought a noble tradition with them and tried to give it life on this side of the Atlantic, and they were so nearly successful that strolling before the great arched door-way of Victoria College some summer evening as the after-glow fades and the twilight deepens, you might almost imagine the ghost of great John Ruskin himself to be sauntering over the hazy lawns."

We felt that the artist was right,—that it isn't necessary to dig very deeply into "Stones of Venice" to know where the earlier buildings of the university had their architectural inspiration. And then as we were shown a series of pictures dealing with university subjects, and saw as Mr. Blomfield evidently had seen, the great round and bulk of the porch of Convocation Hall lifting dark against the after-glow, or above the grey good-breding of the Medical Building, the first flush of morning sun on its twin towers, or the last rosy gleam of a September sundown ruddily slanting across the front of Hart House, we realized as never before the privilege of being permitted to roam at large on the campus of The University of Toronto.

The accompanying cuts are from typical examples of Mr. Blomfield's work. The two pictures of Scarborough are the property of Mrs. Charles Price of West Hill, through whose courtesy the reproductions were made, while that of the campus is in the possession of the artist.

CANNOT RECONCILE WAR AND RELIGION SAYS DR. ROBERTS

Member of Fellowship of Reconciliation Speaks At Hart House

WAR CAN NEVER END WAR

Believes if Peace Can Be Kept For Generation There Will Be No More War

"I believe that if we can keep peace for a generation there will never be any more wars at all," said Dr. Richard Roberts in his address on "Christianity and War" at Hart House yesterday. As one of the earliest members of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, Dr. Roberts has for some years taken a leading part in the movement for a more serious study of the attitude which Christians should take toward war. He stated that the man who is forced to reconcile his duties as a citizen with his sense of Christian values is placed in a "most terrible dilemma. I've been through it, and I know," remarked Dr. Roberts.

Taking up the problem of war in two ways, first with reference to the acknowledged essential points of the Christian attitude, and secondly, from the viewpoint of the Church and the church-member, the speaker proceeded to outline the reasons for the incompatibility of War and Christianity. He defined the essentials of the Christian attitude as a reverence for personality, a reverence for truth, and "the will to love."

Dr. Roberts described the philosophy. (Continued on page 4)

CHANCELLOR BOWLES OUTLINES CAMPAIGN

Circular Letter to Victoria Graduates States Present Conditions

EXTENSIVE PROGRAMME

In a circular letter issued to the graduates and Alumni of Victoria and Emmanuel Colleges recently, Chancellor Bowles, of Victoria, outlines an impressive building programme. An appeal for one million, two hundred thousand dollars will shortly be announced, to provide for (1), a suitable building with lecture rooms and offices and a library reading room at Emmanuel College; (2), a Dormitory or Residence for at least 75 students in Theology; (3), a Dormitory or Residence for women students not to increase accommodation, but to take the place of the present rented rooming houses; (4), a Chapel to be equal for use by all the students in both colleges.

The circular letter also outlines the difficulties under which the colleges have been labouring since Union, in the overcrowded lecture rooms, in the inadequate Residence accommodation of Burwash Hall, and in insufficient library accommodation. The rented houses in which the women students have been compelled to live are below the standards of Annesley and Wymlwood. "A most unsatisfactory experience is this seeing numbers go up and standards go down," states the Chancellor.

The Chancellor's letter merely acquaints the graduates and Alumni in both colleges with the intimation that the campaign has been inaugurated, and is not an appeal in itself.

WOMEN INTERFACULTY DEBATERS SAY COLLEGE GOWNS SHOULD BE WORN

Whether the wearing of gowns was conducive to the development of the most desirable academic atmosphere was the subject under discussion at the Women's Interfaculty debate at Wymlwood last night, and the time-honoured custom was upheld by a vote of 26 to 12.

The speaker of the House, Miss Kay Best of McMaster, placed the motion before the house and Miss Marjorie Winspear, of St. Hilda's, as first speaker, said academic atmosphere was created when a number of people were directing their thoughts towards one thing at the same time. The lack of academic dress she maintained, detracted from this. The Great Hall at Hart House, she said, was not as popular as the Gym for dancing because there was an academic atmosphere produced in the Hall by the gowned figures hanging on the wall that was not conducive to dancing. The gown wherever worn stands as a symbol of fight against the vanities of the world.

Miss Joyce Plumtre in opening the argument for the negative, said that if the speakers for the affirmative really believed what they said they would sell themselves in a gown till they had obtained their degree. She claimed gowns were originally worn for warmth but they were no longer needed with our steam heating systems. Mustiness and lack of fresh air were what she thought made up academic atmosphere.

Miss Helen Radigan of Loretto, the second speaker for the affirmative, quickly replied to the last remark by saying that one from U.C. naturally would connect academic atmosphere with lack of fresh air. "In a play you act better when dressed for the part, so in life dress to suit the part you are to act." Feminine dress, she claimed, was very distracting and gowns did away with this. Well-stocked minds add more to college than well-dressed students and if the dress were standard then judgment of people would be on their intellectual capacities.

Miss Anne Bicknell of Victoria, the second speaker for the negative, said real academic atmosphere was found in the study midst books and notes. Gowns, she said, were hopelessly medieval and quite impractical for science students. She said money spent on books or Lit membership would do more to create an academic atmosphere than the same money spent on a gown.

The House was then opened for discussion. The speakers from the floor were for the affirmative, Misses Spence, Clarge, Winspear, Doran and for the negative, Misses Craw, Winspear, and M. Bicknell. The tellers were Misses Blackburn and Craw for the ayes and Misses Winspear and Dore for the noes. Miss Helen Spence was Clerk of the House.

The debate deserved a much larger attendance than it had. The thought of approaching exams together with the epidemic of debates at the University during the last month, probably kept a good many of the debating enthusiasts away.

CLASSICS STUDENTS MAKE PRESENTATION

Dr. A. J. Bell Recipient Of Pen Set As Token Of Appreciation

HUMOROUS PAPER READ

As a token of appreciation of debt to a professor who had opened the way to a fuller knowledge, the third and fourth years in classics of Victoria College, last night made a presentation of a fountain pen set to Dr. A. J. Bell at the meeting of the Classical Association. The gift was presented by Miss Grace Irwin, who referred to the learning and humour of one whom she had come to regard as a friend. In reply Dr. Bell expressed his pleasure at being with his former students and hoped that he would be able to enjoy the company of members of the society for some time.

The paper of the evening was read by Mr. H. R. Jolliffe, on the "Superior of Timbalio" by Petronius. The subject and the commentary ranged from the serious to the laughable and learning was agreeably mingled with humour.

Refreshments consisting of canes, cold, coffee and ice cream cones were served under the direction of Miss H. T. Wickett. The meeting closed with the usual Deus Salve Regem.

MORLEY CALLAGHAN ANALYSES MASTERS OF SHORT STORY

Technical Knowledge Is Not Essential Requisite in Good Story Writing

SERIES ON JOURNALISM

Sameness of Form Is Very Often Commercially Useful

"In the short story as in all else, art is essentially simple," stated Morley Callaghan, speaking in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon. Mr. Callaghan is a former St. Michael's College boy who has "made good" in the field of journalism. When at the U. of T. he was one of the originals of Sigma Delta Chi, Professional Journalistic Fraternity, which body is sponsoring the present lecture series.

"The short story differs from the Novel only in that here the author writes ten pages instead of three hundred," Mr. Callaghan explained. He did not believe that the so-called technical knowledge was the essential requisite to good short story writing.

"If you have anything to say, say it simply and interestingly," he said. "Tell your story as you would tell it to your friends; when walking along the street tell it to yourself. This will eliminate involved and obscure constructions and will give your story the animation the public demands."

Mr. Callaghan remarked that the short story knows no fixed form or subject. Sameness, on the other hand, he said, is often commercially useful. When the public ask for more of a certain writer's story, they really mean: "Give us more stories by this man, like this story."

"The only way of studying the short story," Mr. Callaghan continued, "is to read the works of the great short story writers." He then outlined certain characteristics of the masters in this phase of journalism.

Balzac, he said, is best in his longer works, but he also excels in the short story. Balzac possessed the happy faculty of saying something about even the commonest drudge, that captures the imagination.

Flaubert's "A Simple Heart", Mr. Callaghan considered a landmark in the history of the short story. Guy de Maupassant copied Flaubert. But de Maupassant's popularity lies in the fact that he "jazzes it up." "De Maupassant takes a single incident and snaps it like a whip," the speaker said.

Mr. Callaghan also discussed Chekov, Edgar Allan Poe, Kipling, Catharine Mansfield, Galsworthy, Joseph Conrad, O. Henry and Bret Harte. The greatest short story writers of the present day, he considered to be: Sherwood Anderson, Ruth Suckow, Ernest Hemmingway, and Conrad Aiken.

Graduating Classes Entertained

127 PRESENT

Malcolm Wallace and Baker Speak

The University College Alumni Association entertained the graduating class of University College at a dinner in Hart House last night. There were some 127 members present, 73 of the graduating year and about 54 graduates of whom the senior member was Professor A. S. Baker of the class of '69. Mr. T. A. Russell, '99, gave an outline of the development of the University during the past 30 years and, as a member of the Board of Governors and head of the finance committee of the University, outlined some of the problems with which the University was faced.

According to the expansion in the last 30 years he prophesied that in a similar period the University would have 27,000 students and a staff of 5,000. He presented these problems and urged the graduating year, as future members of the Alumni Association, to consider them seriously. Mr. Russell also urged the future graduates to stick to their college, their University, and above all, their country; not to cross the border in search of a wider field when such a glorious future lay in store for them in Canada. Principal Malcolm Wallace made (Continued on page 4)

Le titre de ce discours, c'est: "Toronto et les paragraphes suivants forment le chapitre que l'auteur a nommé "Point de vue intellectuel." Étes-vous d'accord avec lui?

Si la ville reine (car il faut tout appeler Roi, Reine ou Prince à Toronto). Si la ville reine, dis-je fait des progrès au point de vue industriel et commercial il en est de même au point de vue intellectuel.

C'est au Varsity que l'Ontario envoie la grande majorité des étudiants qui sont au nombre de plus de 5,500 à cet endroit cette année.

Les professeurs du Varsity ont leur titres du Yale ou de Cambridge d'Angleterre ou de Sorbonne ou encore de quelque grande université d'Europe.

Il y a trois professeurs de français parmi lesquels se trouve le baron Deschamps, qui je crois jouit un grand rôle à l'université. Il y a aussi des professeurs d'Italien, d'Espagnol et d'Allemand.

On encourage beaucoup les sciences avant tout et nombre de bourses sont accordées chaque année et par le gouvernement et par des particuliers.

Les Ontariens toutefois sont moins orateurs que les Canadiens-Français parce qu'on s'occupe peu et même pas du tout de l'art oratoire dans les collèges et les écoles. Aussi les sermons de nos bons curés dans la province de Québec sont de beaucoup plus intéressants que dans l'Ontario parce qu'ils gesticulent appropriés, le maintient, la voix, tout est en harmonie avec les paroles généralement.

En terminant ce point on peut dire qu'on enseigne tout à Toronto. Il y a même un collège de tatouage, "The Tattooing College."

On enseigne le français bien superficiellement dans les écoles.

CONVALESCENT

"The Varsity" has received a jolt. The unprecedented upheaval of its internal organs which it has recently undergone will naturally affect the visage which it presents to the public. It will appear a little dark under the eyes, perhaps a little listless, certainly a little pale, but never, we hope and trust, jaundiced.

For a person in such a condition one does not apply drastic remedies. One realizes that the malady is by no means fatal, and that in the course of time the old vigour and colour will return. We are not optimistic enough, therefore, to expect your paper to stage a startling and immediate recovery. Despite the gallant and very successful attempts of our immediate predecessor to "soothe the fevered brow" the patient is still a little groggy. During the period of convalescence, we would humbly suggest that our inevitable critics refrain from delivering too hefty wallops on the rather tender solar plexus. "Naturally, however, legitimate criticism will be welcome, but remember, please, that we are still on a diet.

The question as to whether those responsible for this disorganizing upheaval were justified, remains to be proven. We do not intend to discuss this subject, for enough time has elapsed, and enough has been said to enable any student with the modicum of intelligence to judge for himself the pros and cons of the matter. It might be pointed out, however, that it would necessitate a very serious grievance to justify the complete disorganization of a newspaper, and that if such a grievance were not proven, those responsible for this unnecessary upheaval would be in debt to the whole student body.

OUR NEW FEATURE

We would like to draw to your attention our new weekly feature, which appeared for the first time in yesterday's issue, headed "With the Muses". This section is under the direction of Mr. Porte Marshall, and will run every Wednesday. It is intended to fill the need, long felt by many, of a literary section in this paper. Mr. Marshall will welcome any contributions or constructive criticisms.

Student Verse

REWARD

To say that I have lived—enough
Reward for all life's toils and failures.
To know that I have known
More joy than they upon a throne
Can feel,—short lived
The glowing moments pass
Too soon, and leave us breathless, dreaming,
But still repaid for the daily dreariness
Of human life.
For unexpected comes the flame,
An understanding heart,
A beauty which stills the breath,
Dazzles the eye, and thrills us
With the joy of living.
Then leaves us to a gray dawn
And the falling of the snow.

A FAREWELL

Can the winds assuage
An old sorrow
Or will they drive it deeper
Into the soul?
Can the rain cool

An old hatred
Or will water widen
The gaping hole?

Glad is the wind
That drives out grief—
And merry the raindrops
That wash away hate;
But wind or rain
Cannot cleanse my heart:
Hatred will not flee
Nor grief abate.

Fled is the joy
Of the crimson dawn—
No more the nodding rose Feels my caress;
The sky's warm blue
Is colder than snow—
Hateful is the leafage
The trees possess.

Tell me not
That all sorrow must have ending,
For my chasm of grief
You cannot know. . .

Go your way, friend,
And I will follow mine—
We will forget
The long ago.

Art, Music and Drama

H.C. Players' Guild

At a regular meeting of the University College Players' Guild on Wednesday afternoon, Miss Margaret Colvin produced Eugene O'Neill's "Dreamy Kid", a playlet in the negro dialect for which O'Neill became so famous in "Emperor Jones". The title role was admirably portrayed by Earl Fauman, and others in the cast were Hazel Gore, Margaret Donald, and Isabel Curtis.

The play was one of O'Neill's earlier works, and was a very slight sketch, slightly melodramatic in tone, containing no humour and having only motif, but there was no lack of interest, and it possessed much dramatic intensity. The set was very good, and the old patchwork quilt on the Mammy's iron bed was a realistic and picturesque touch.

It was unfortunate, however, that there was no door in the set, as it played an integral part in the drama. Also, some of the most intense moments were marred by slowness in picking up cues, a fault which might have been remedied in a few more rehearsals. Although the finale was pictured very vividly in the speeches, noises off-stage, judiciously used, might have brought out more effectively the intensity of the climax as the curtain fell.

Despite all this the play certainly created an "atmosphere", and was most effective, and the players are to be congratulated on their able handling of the negro dialect. We should also like to congratulate the Guild on being able to produce plays weekly of the same calibre as "Dreamy Kid".

Corrects Wrong Impression

Editor, "The Varsity".

I notice in yesterday's "Mail and Empire" that I am reported as having stated in a debate at the University College Literary and Athletic Society that, "Women lecturers in University College are not only failures themselves, but a serious hindrance to the education of their students, causing academic work to deteriorate into social outings and occasional class parties."

I want to state that the impression which the above statement conveys is completely misrepresentative of the opinions I actually hold on the subject. I did not say that "women lecturers are failures themselves," nor am I in a position to say so, because my experience has been with just one of them, and I am emphatic in stating that I have the highest respect for her both as a teacher and a consummate scholar of English.

It is lamentable that the down-town papers should take our debates on the Campus so seriously. I was completely unprepared to speak at the debate, and hence have no manuscripts to which I can refer to verify my statements; but I remember distinctly opening my remarks by saying in effect that the humour of the situation consisted in the fact that our opponents were taking us seriously.

What I had to say at the debate was the product of scarcely a moment's thought; but even then there can be no reason for my being misquoted. I was asked to oppose co-education; and I did so simply because I was asked to do so. My actual opinions on the subject are quite the reverse of those I upheld for the purposes of debate. On numerous occasions in the past, I have derived a peculiar delight in debating against my own convictions; but if I felt, as I am now made to feel, that such activity would be held against me, I should have thought twice and shall do so hereafter.

Sincerely,
J. H. Gringorten.

Still More

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—In bidding a fond farewell to our little discussion on "Juno and the Paycock", I desire to make one or two suggestions.

Vic 370 misses the point of my letter entirely. (Incidentally, he must see, if he thinks for a minute, that of his two criticisms of the play, one necessarily cancels the other.) It is not from ignorance of true conditions that I object; on the contrary, I have every reason to know that such a play is painfully true to a very small section of life. And here too, 370 misunderstands the spirit of my letter. Granted that the play is a faithful representation, I still object to it as an artistic production. Its "power and intense reality" alone can never justify it as a work of art. If Vic 370 or 371 find their hearts stirred by such morbid stuff, which fact in itself suggests (Continued on page 3)

What a frightful catastrophe has befallen our poor little pussie-wussie! Pas de lettre! Pas de lettre! as they would say in "Le Coin". But, dear me, I haven't the foggiest notion what to write. O All-Puissant Pussy, by no ominous omen guide my withering hand and show meow to sling the slinking ink. (Do we see anyone Goblin this one down?) Alas, I can but raise a tremulous voice of protest against that accusation that thou, Petite Pampus Puss, art anything else but a tale-bearing individual; for, indeed, yea, in very deed, thou bear'st no tail but thine own. Really, you don't know how glad we are that we're in this here dag-goned old tub. Really you don't. You know, Cat, if we weren't in this here tub we'd probably be drowned by now. The whole thing of it is that we really are in the tub and that so far we aren't drowned. Anyway, dere Cat, the Dogoronto harbour is one dickens of a place to fall into. You know, the whole 3 of us think as how this here Dogoronto Harbour Concoction is full of tripe and shouldn't ought to be allowed to function for the simple reason that this here harbour is such an awful place to fall into and therefore the Concoction should be severely cauterized. Anyway, you know what we mean.

Sincerely yours,

The 3 Men in a Tub.

C—C

Well! Well! I really didn't know grown up men could use such awful grammar. I think you ought to be ashamed of yourselves, you men, for writing such stuff, and I am almost sure you must have had quite a wet cargo in the tub with you.—Puss.

JR. DENTS VICTORIOUS IN INDOOR BASEBALL GAME

Sr.U.C. Defeated By Lone Run In Closely Contested Game

Jr. Dents defeated Sr. U.C. in a closely contested baseball game yesterday afternoon by a score of 7-6. By virtue of their victory Dents now lead their group, having also trounced Wycliffe. The Anglicans are in second place with a win and a loss to their credit. Since the teams all have another game with each other, the ultimate victor is yet in doubt, although Dents are off to a good start.

The game was very exciting and the score is indicative of the play. There were few errors. Mitchell scored the winning run for Dents in the last inning on a lovely slide home.

A most enjoyable evening was spent by the 219 girls of U.C. at a bridge given at the Women's Union on Tuesday evening. After a few hours of bridge the tables were abandoned and everyone danced. Miss Carolyn Davidson was awarded the prize.

Refreshments were served by the year executives.

"This division is very simple, John. If your father made fifty dollars a week and gave your mother half, what would she have?"

"Gee, she'd have a fit."

He: May I have the last dance with you?
She: Don't worry, you already have.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Two important basketball games in the Senior Intercollegiate take place on Friday and Saturday. Varsity will play their return game with McGill on Friday and take on Queen's at Kingston Saturday. Although the blue and white are as yet the only undefeated team in the league it is no cinch to play two games in as many days, but McCutcheon's men ought to be equal to the job. At present they are going great guns and a double victory is predicted.

The Jennings' Cup play-offs have aroused a great deal of interest this year. Five teams still remain in the running—Jr. U.C. Emmanuel, Dents, Pharmacy and Victoria. Vic, last year's champions, have a strong tie again this year. They had little difficulty in winning their group but it remains to be seen whether they will again win the cup. The next game is to be played on Tuesday between Jr. U.C. and Emmanuel, from 4-5, and anyone who can do so will find it well worth their while to be on hand.

The Intercollegiate Gymnastic meet will take place next Saturday evening at 7.30 at Hart House. As in Intercollegiate hockey, McGill and U. of T. are the only teams competing. Unfortunately some of the blue team have been recently injured and efforts to postpone the meet until March 9, have failed. Nevertheless, all those who saw the team perform during the intermission at the basketball game last Saturday night will agree that McGill will have to be exceptionally good to retain the cup. There will be dancing from ten to twelve.

The swimming meet last week-end unearthed a real prospect in the person of St. Clair Balfour. By his excellent showing in the breast stroke he gave Varsity the necessary margin to win. It is perhaps unfair to single out one particular member of the squad for special mention when everyone did so well, but it was the unexpectedness of his showing that aroused so much interest. Teaming up with Sinclair he opposed Clayton Bourne, McGill's crack swimmer and Olympic entrant. Sinclair was first, Balfour second and Bourne third. Had Bourne been second the red would have won the meet.

gests that they only have a nodding acquaintance with it, they might try some of the disreputable quarters down town and be stirred still further, possibly with the added advantage of not having to pay for admission.

It was suggested the other day that there seems a subtle conspiracy to approve and applaud everything that is "modern". Certainly my two critics manifest themselves as children of the age in this regard. As art, this play fails to please. Such is my contention. Since there is nothing absolute in criticism of art, nobody can justify or argue away opinion about it. My letter still stands as a bona fide expression of opinion. Intelligent people won't try to render it absurd, but rather to present their point of view, which, as far as I am concerned, will have most appreciative consideration.

Yours truly,
B. R. English.

Resent Editorial

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

As two of the junior members of the former staff of "The Varsity", we wish to draw your attention to certain statements appearing in the editorial, "Our Stand".

In the first place, it was stated that on the dismissal of Mr. Ryan, the staff called a meeting and "Orated the Junior Members" unto passing a motion by which the entire staff resign.

This statement is absolutely untrue. At the meeting in question the upper staff merely laid the matter before the meeting. It is a plain fact that junior staff members carried on the major part of the discussion at this meeting. The vote on the motion was unanimous, and was taken by secret ballot, a system of voting which certain other bodies would do well to emulate, thus preventing any remote possibility of coercion.

Then, again, it was stated that the upper staff, in nominating Mr. Usher showed their ability to lead the majority of the staff around by the nose. Here, again, "The Varsity" is obviously misinformed. The meeting of the entire staff, at which Mr. Usher was nominated, lasted during three and one half hours of discussion in which junior members of the staff took a very important part. Two prominent members of the upper staff were absent during the greater part of this meeting. It was also decided that any

Girls of Yesteryear

Are the girls of to-day too forward? Should the "good old times" when girls were supposed to be shy and unassuming be preferred? If the history of our own country is consulted it will be found that the old feminine "get-him" spirit was there to a pronounced degree almost 200 years ago.

The authority for this statement lies in the description by the Swedish professor Peter Kalm of his visit to Canada in 1749. His description in his "Travels into North America" shows his keen power of observation and judgment of human nature. Any attempt to paraphrase his account would be futile. In describing the women of Montreal he says:

"One of the first things they propose to a stranger is, whether he is married? The next, how he likes the ladies in the country; and whether he thinks them handsomer than those of his own country; and the third, whether he will take one home with him?"

"There are some differences between the ladies of Quebec and those of Montreal, those of the last place seem to be generally handsomer than those of the former. Their behavior like wise seemed to be somewhat too free at Quebec. The ladies at Quebec, especially the unmarried ones, are not very industrious. A girl of eighteen is reckoned very poorly off, if she cannot enumerate at least twenty lovers. These young ladies, especially one wishing to return to "The Varsity" should feel quite free to do so. That none of those present at this meeting have so far done so is a significant fact.

It indeed reflects small consideration of the junior members of the former staff that we should be thought so lacking in intelligence, initiative and spirit of our own as to be coerced into actions of which we did not approve. Speaking for ourselves we may state that any action we have entered upon with the body of the former staff has been entirely in agreement with our own personal convictions.

In conclusion, may we give assurance that this letter has, been written entirely on our own initiative, (however surprising initiative may be in junior members of the former staff), and not because we have been "orated" or "led by the nose" to do so.

CANNOT RECONCILE WAR AND RELIGION

sical life as the "basis of personality", and remarked that: "In general no man has the right to deprive another of this basis." But he could imagine circumstances under which the destruction of life is justifiable. The trouble is in the spiritual rather than the physical world. He quoted the Russian general who told his troops that the only way to regard the enemy was as vermin. This attitude, said Dr. Roberts, did little harm to the enemy, but it was seriously degrading to those who adopted it. "Hate—contempt—the whole thing tends to cheapen personality." Dr. Roberts also read an extract from the British Manual of Military Law stating that it is legitimate to use corruption, deception, and bribery in order to achieve victory.

War inevitably violates the Christian reverence for truth, said Dr. Roberts, because in war: "Victory is the supreme value... nothing will stand in the way. He referred to the Red Cross conventions and the various international agreements before the Great War, and their complete breakdown when the war actually came. "Probably the severest casualty of the war was truth," the war itself was brought about by the corrupt, deceptive diplomacy of Europe. "Cavour said that he knew how to mislead diplomats; he told them the truth."

Dr. Roberts stated that: "War under all circumstances and in all cases is a violation of the will to love." He denounced the popular conception of love as a kind of mawkish sentimentality and demanded a new realization of its meaning as the highest form of human fellowship, expressible in many different ways. He went on to say that: "War can never end war. One war inevitably leads to another... The two toughest lusts in human nature are the lust of power and the lust of vengeance."

Even in war time the Church must plead for reconciliation, said Dr. Roberts. Such an attitude would undoubtedly handicap the militarists, and he thought that no state would allow a church to keep its doors open. Like the Roman Temple of Peace, our places of worship would be closed in time of war.

As for the individual, Dr. Roberts believed that his attitude should be determined by his own conscience alone. During the late war there were friends of his whose conscience led them into the trenches; whose conscience led them to prison. "Every man," said Dr. Roberts, "must decide for himself."

Home-like Chatter of the Great In the Land That Never Was

(By Jonah)

"I feel," said Napoleon, "like the last rose of summer."

"Tough luck," said Plato, "how do you get that way?"

Napoleon closed his calculus book.

"The fact is," he said confidingly, and then stopped.

"It can't be a fact," remarked Plato wisely, "if it isn't anything."

"Well," said Napoleon, "it's this way. Daniel and Nebuchadnezzar arrived yesterday. Neb's taken Daniel to his house. Mene Tekel Upharson, you know, and as long as the Maple Leaf rules the waves, young Dan is safe from me."

"I get you," said Plato, "and I suppose that means that Dan takes Helen on Friday night?"

"Isaac Brock wants to take her and I want to take her," said Napoleon, "but it looks to me like Dan'll this time."

"If they were true sportsmen," said Plato, "they'd toss up with you."

"I think," said Napoleon, "I think that Helen has already tossed up."

"She told me that she'd toss it all night about it," said Plato.

Just at this moment Geo. Washington, Plato's room-mate, came dashing in.

"Have you seen 'The Varsity' to-day?" he shouted.

"No," said Plato and Napoleon in common unison.

"Well," gasped Geo. Washington, "no kidding, straight goods, cross my heart, and all that—the S.A.C. has thrown Daniel into the Cats' Den for smoking in Wymiool!"

"I knew he'd get caught sooner or later," said Plato sagely.

"He was bound to meet his Waterloo," agreed Napoleon. "I guess that narrows it down to me and Izzy Brock."

"Waterloo is a suburb of Kitchener," opined Plato.

"Tell that to the Marines," said Lief, coming out from underneath the bed.

"Boys, meet Lief the Lucky," said Napoleon, "We call him lucky because he likes American cigarettes, and gets away with it."

"It's plural, you mean them," said

Lief. "That was a good sleep I had, boys."

"Lief was night-editing the Varsity," explained Plato.

"Is this rue about Dan?" inquired Napoleon agitato.

"It was audited and found correct," said Lief, "we got it straight from Marie Antoinette."

"Did she kick him out?" said Plato rapturo.

"Elizabeth kicked him out," said Lief, "and Wally Raleigh held her coat while she did it. Dan'll run, but Lizzie ran faster, spluttering and knocking all the time, and he hadn't got past Trinity when she ran him down. Now the Cat's roaring around him."

"How do you mean around him?" asked Plato, curioso, "ist his a case of cannibalism?"

"He was born 1820," said Lief, "but he's still going strong. Bill Shakespeare wrote a Hymn to Adversity for him and he sang it so loud that they had to cancel all lectures in Baldwin House."

"That's tough on Robert Baldwin," said Lief, "tout le monde sympathique."

"It only shows that Canada is not yet autonomous," said Plato.

"What does?" said Napoleon.

"Baldwin House does," said Plato.

At this critical juncture the phone rang, loud and piercing sweet as Pan would have said.

"Hello," said Lief. After about an hour he hung up respectfully.

"Well," said everybody breathlessly.

"That was the boss in temporibus pastis," said Lief. "You know, Jack Wilkes. He says he's just got a F.P. wire to say that Helen of Troy is going on Friday with—not you Boney—and not Dan'll either, and not Izzy Brock, but—but—"

"Who?" cried everybody passionately.

"Parry Sound," cried Lief the Lucky, lighting one.

"Parry who?" cried everybody sans Napoleon.

But Napoleon had understood. He turned away with a groan, both deep and loud.

"So this is Paris!" he said, despondo.

GIRLS OF YESTERYEAR

those of higher rank, get up at seven, and dress till nine, drinking their coffee at the same time. When they are dressed, they place themselves near a window that opens into the street, take up some needle-work, and sew a stitch now and then; but turn their eyes into the street most of the time. When a young fellow comes in, whether they are acquainted with him or not, they immediately lay aside their work, sit down by him, and begin to chat, laugh, and invent "double entendres"; and this is reckoned very witty.

In this manner they frequently pass the whole day, leaving their mothers to do all the business in the house. In Montreal the girls are not quite so voluble, but more industrious.

Their fault is that they think too well of themselves.... The girls at Montreal are much displeased that those at Quebec get husbands sooner than they. The reason for this is, that many young gentlemen who come over from France with the ships, are captivated by the ladies at Quebec, and marry them; but as these gentlemen seldom go up to Montreal, the girls there are not often so happy as those of the former place."

a few short and pithy remarks recalling the old days of the then Literary and Scientific Society.

Professor Baker, who made the speech of the evening, carried the reminiscences even further. Professor Baker, although one of the only three members of his class still living, looks younger than he is. He recalled the days when the U.C. Ltd., was not allowed to hold its meetings on University grounds but used a hall on Temperance Street. The election did not live up to the name of the street and 8 a.m. the following morning miss still find the "Brute Force Squad" coercing voters to poll their votes and lacking University men, persuaded workmen on their way to work to come in and vote.

Ross Anderson, president of the graduating year, thanked the Alumni Association for their splendid hospitality and, on behalf of the year, assured them of the whole-hearted support of '29. Mr. Anderson said that while many members of the Association may be getting old, grey, and finding the bald spots spread, they too could claim the same distinction in the person of Joe Evans, "The Grand Old Man of '29."

Magistrate Jas. E. Jones, '88, when called upon for a few remarks, asked such of the graduating year as entered business to try to elevate the present low standard of methods, quoting as examples his own experiences in dealing with cases of the stock exchange.

After the dinner the guests were entertained at bridge which made a very pleasant end to a most enjoyable evening.

Among those present were G. D. M. Spence, '89, President of the Association, who acted as chairman; J. A. McLaughlin, H. A. Clarke, J. A. Rowland, '96; W. A. McKinnon, '97; Rev. Dr. Wilson, '00; John Jennings, '96.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 18—Sixty-four amateur golfers in quest of the new Beatty Challenge Trophy, drove off in the qualifying round of Victoria's first annual mid-winter tournament at Oak Bay course this morning.

Two low handicap men, H. A. Linham, Colwood star, and Carl Blackstock, of Inglewood, Seattle, were first off the tee, followed by D. J. Ferguson, of Saskatoon, W. J. Meagher, of Nelson, B.C., and C. P. Wilson, of Winnipeg. Also Rose, Editor of the Pacific North-West, and W. F. (Bill) Stedman, golf editor of the Seattle Post Intelligencer, were further down in the draw and drove off shortly before noon.

First of the ladies to drive off was Mrs. C. Martin, formerly Mrs. Dillon Cost, of Calgary, paired with Mrs. Lawson, Oak Bay. Other entries in the ladies section were scheduled to start at 2 o'clock.

The weather was slightly cloudy in the morning, brightening up as the sun peered through in the early afternoon. Fairways were dry and the greens hard and fast during the first hours of the tournament.

SOME STARTLING INFORMATION

In its issue of February 18th, "The Montreal Daily Star," in an informative mood, sets out to give the world in general, and Montreal in particular, the up-and-up on the University of Toronto. This editorial, which was run as a news feature in yesterday's edition of a local morning paper, contains probably more mis-statements per line than any serious article which has hitherto come our way.

It is illuminating to learn, for instance, that there is an established course in journalism at our University, which, according to the writer of the editorial, "goes in for principles, and ethics, and things like that". If the writer had said "stuff like that", he couldn't have conveyed more contempt. It is peculiar to find a newspaper of the standing of "The Montreal Star" openly professing contempt for principle and ethics in journalism.

Furthermore, the article reveals the somewhat disturbing news that "our Editors, who number an average of one to a page, are very important—there are no reporters". To list all the idiotic mis-statements of this kind in the article would involve the quoting of the whole thing, word for word. The author hasn't even bothered to get the name of our paper correctly.

Although any person at all cognizant of the facts, would immediately see the errors in the article, nevertheless, it is a pity that such an erroneous impression should be given to the paper's many subscribers. If the story had been written as a news story, it might not have been so bad, as people are slowly learning "not to believe everything you see in print, m'dears", but an editorial writer on a big city daily is at least supposed to ascertain the facts before presenting them to the public, or attempting to comment on them. If the public cannot depend on the editorial page of their daily newspaper to at least give well informed expressions of opinion, on what can they depend?

In concluding, and speaking of the present paper, The Montreal Star says, (aye, here's the rub) that we "talk like a parrot". Never having made much of a study of the linguistic attainments of these birds, we are unable to yea or neigh (to speak like a horse for the moment, and with apologies to the Montreal Daily Star) this statement. But we might point out that a parrot (at least all the parrots which we have met in the course of life) also have a tendency to speak without being well informed.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The amount of space which certain sections of the press gave recently to the McGill beer drinking contests, and the recent frosh-soph-you-broke-up-or-dance-you-nasty-thing act at Queen's is significant. The public has a certain mythical conception of a "College boy", whom it likes to think of as a sort of comic strip cut-up, a conception which is a vague mixture of the beer swigging scene in "The Student Prince" and the Junior Prom. scene from any collegiate film comedy. In giving prominence, therefore, to such incidents as we have mentioned, the press is merely catering to this mythical taste in the public.

VARSITY SENIOR BASKETBALL TEAM PLAYS MCGILL TO-NIGHT

EXPECT HARD FIGHT WITH RED AND WHITE FOR THE CARON CUP

Odds in Favour of McGill With Johnson And Heslop Out Of The Game

MCGILL TEAM VERY STRONG

Gymnastic Display Will Be Followed By Two Hours Of Dancing

The Red and White gymnasium squad will invade Hart House to-morrow night to defend their Intercollegiate Championship in a battle of skill and brawn with the Blue and White team coached by D. M. Barton. With the title goes the possession of the Caron Cup.

The prospects for a Blue victory are not of the best. The local squad has been weakened by the loss of Johnson, who had the misfortune to fall and break a bone in his hand and it will also be without the services of Heslop, who is just recovering from the flu. On the other hand McGill has a very strong team with the odds greatly in their favour.

The meet will start at 7.45 p.m., and there will be two hours of dancing afterward.

Women's Basketball

There will be a practice for the Second Year Squad on Friday, February 22, at Lillian Massey, from 5-6 o'clock, and on Saturday, February 23 at Central Y.M.C.A. from 1-2 o'clock.

SPECTACULAR SHOT TEN SECONDS TO GO AGGIES WIN GAME

Smart Playing Characterizes Intermediate Basketball Series

HERO OF THE HOUR

Osgoode Bows To The Superior Skill And Luck Of The Farmers

A game which held the audience spellbound until the final whistle was played at the Hart House Gym between O.A.C. "Aggies" of Guelph and Osgoode Hall, representatives in the Intermediate Intercollegiate Basketball series.

The score at half time was 14-11 in favour of Guelph. The lawyers, with Turville and Cohn playing spectacular basketball, tied the score with 10 seconds to go. A two minute rest was called by Osgoode and when the game resumed a long shot from centre by Walker won the game for Guelph. Final score 28-26.

Close checking, long shots from difficult positions and the fighting spirit of both teams until the final whistle blew, held the small but interested audience spellbound.

KNOX CINCHES TITLE IN BASEBALL LEAGUE

Errors And Wild Pitching Combine To Make A Loose Game

O.C.E. BADLY DEFEATED

Knox baseball team cinched the honours of their group by a third win over O.C.E. last night. The score of 15-4 indicates a rather loose game, which was the case, due to numerous errors and wild pitching at the outset. Crazy for the Presbyterians, gained better control as the game progressed which, together with the support of his hard hitting backers, steadily increased the number of runs. With bases full in the second, O.C.E. seemed to have things coming their way, when a double play dampened their rising hopes. The losers were compelled to take the floor minus several of their regulars.

HOCKEY PRACTICE

There will be an Intermediate hockey practice on Friday, 12-1 and on Saturday, 11-12.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity's Senior O.H.A. sextet are working out regularly in preparation for their game with Preston on Monday. Although the game does not affect Varsity's standing in the group, as they are assured of finishing in first place, "Red" Porter is taking no chances of allowing any of the men to get stale. It is expected that all the regulars will take the ice against Dad Ashley and Co., who still have a mathematical chance of qualifying for the playoffs if they can win the rest of their games. The finals do not take place until March 4 and 6. Unless the unexpected happens Toronto will be opposed by either St. Michael's or Queen's.

In the Senior O.H.A. race the Blue and White have outclassed their opposition to some extent. The only game on the wrong side of the sheet was marked up by Queen's when the Blue made their first visit to the Limestone City. Following this victory, however, the Red, Yellow and Blue dropped two straight to St. Michael's. Queen's have a good sextet with plenty of speed but will need to improve considerably if they hope to represent the Senior Series in the coming play-downs.

For some time past there have been rumours that Hugh Plaxton was going to play for St. Michael's. Unfortunately for them in particular and for senior hockey as a whole, he has not as yet seen his way clear to turn out. Hugh was one of the smartest puck chasers in the game when he lined up with the Grads and many thought that it was a toss-up between him and Cammie Seagram as to which was the better centre player in amateur hockey. Should he change his mind he would be a great source of strength on St. Michael's forward line.

By to-morrow night the Intercollegiate Basketball title will probably be won and lost. Varsity takes on McGill to-night and Queen's on Saturday. Both games are away but McCutcheon's men should come through with their usual stuff. The regular lineup of Beaton, Mitchell, Newman, Currie and Murray will start, with O'Leary back to sub. He was out last night and potting them in his usual way. The Blue and White have yet to lose a game and should come back with the same clear sheet.

The Intercollegiate Gym meet at Hart House to-morrow night should attract a good crowd. Coach Barton's men will have a real job on their hands to defeat McGill, the last years winners. The Red are said to have a very good team and are called to retain the title. Following the meet there will be a dance.

And More

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:—
As regards the recent play, "Juno and the Paycock", staged at Hart House theatre, a great deal of criticism has been showered at it and rightly so.

A letter published in your paper of February 20th by "JTI", says that if there was anything wrong with the play, it was due to the stupidity of the audience. This I doubt very much. Referring to the criticism of "Vic 310" of Tuesday's issue, 19th. He says that the ending is the only logical one. I guess this accounts for the poor attendance. If this is so why do they have in Toronto a board of censors, to censor the motion pictures and plays that come to Toronto? You may go to any play that is put on in the city and there is no scene that is so outpoken as the unfortunate scene of "Juno". In some way or another they camouflage such a happening as this. In "Juno" there is no attempt at camouflaging. The play was an extremely good one if the sordidness had been left out. The humour of it was shown by the hearty laughs of the audience. The characters were exceptionally fine, especially that of the "Paycock", played by Mr. Ivor Lewis, who showed that he was a finished actor. "Juno" should be given a great amount of credit. She had a very difficult part to play and in this she showed that she was an AI actress. Thanking you for your invaluable space.

Yours truly,
Gerald E. Lee, JTI

Camera vs. Canvas

Hart House,
Feb. 20, 1929.

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir:—
The article in Wednesday's issue on the work of Mr. Blomfield was so attractive that to criticise at all seems ungracious, but a minor point suggests a friendly comment.

The phrases "photographic record of things" and "a mere photographic draughtsman" occur in a contest that indicates a sharp contrast between the art of the painter and the chemico-official record of the photographer. This traditional opposition leaps to the pen, but the modern pictorial photographer never reads it without a squirm. It is true that the camera can record with the utmost precision everything in front of its lens and is thus peculiarly fitted to produce "visual files", of great perfection; for the scientist this is a merit beyond price, since it means that the camera can record things hidden from the unaided eye. The pictorial photographer tries to interpret his subject; he no more sees every stick and leaf than the painter, nor does he want to record them, and since the camera is his chosen medium he must often use all his skill to avoid a moodless "photographic likeness not to produce a picture in which details are properly subordinated to the main masses. Those of your readers who saw the recent photographic exhibitions at Hart House will recall a number of prints which owed their beauty to such control.

The photographer is not, of course, in competition with the painter; the differences between their media prevent that: in his own way, however, he is trying to make pictorial generalizations of such truth and beauty that the beholder may share with him the

EMPIRE THEATRE

The Empire Theatre presented a special show last night to mark its 500th performance. From the stage-shifting exhibition at the first to the congratulatory speeches at the end, this show was obviously designed for regular patrons, and as such was enjoyed by the management as much as by the large and noisy audience. Eight fair dunnets of varying dimensions did several rather good dance numbers; the solo efforts were frankly and crudely burlesqued. Singing and shimmying were interspersed with good orchestra music and atrocious vaudeville gags. The lighting was only fair while the shifting and noise backstage were positively amateurish. The audience developed a most distressing habit of breaking into shrieks of laughter on the slightest provocation, and succeeded in drowning out some of the best numbers in this way.

A. J. Rostance of Hart House Theatre fame did his Bufuz act from Pickwick as only he can do it. This was much the best feature of the program, although the audience did not seem to think so. Another high spot of the evening was a most convincing interpretation of that classic doggerel, Kipling's Gunga Din. The climax came, however, with the presentation of a one-act play by Wilson Macdonald. A setting in an Ossington Avenue "drawing-room" and the work of a medium were all that was necessary to call both dead and living onto the stage. Much clever nonsense involved Sam McBride, Lloyd George, Cleopatra, Disraeli, Queen Elizabeth, Willy Shakespeare, Dora Copperfield, Tommy Church, Sir Robert Falconer, and other immortals. DELTA
(With Thanks to A.)
In the Dusk, far-off, stand desolate Villages.

Under the darkening Sky, the Trees Rustle softly, as if in sorrow for some man Whose heart is burdened with a secret load.

Along the narrow, torture-twisted Road,

Two people walk; he straining 'neath the weight

Of a dark, ungainly, heavy piece of Stone.

The Girl fingers it fondly, meanwhile Looking with eyes of love upon the Man.

He with heavy heart, and his face wan,

Stumbling carries the load . . . so bravely.

Once he falters, but one glance At the Girl beside him, and he plods on

With hope renewed, yet with puzzled eyes

Upon her hand. The load is heavy. He sighs.

And yet 'tis nothing. Then why carry it?

A man, he thinks, would throw it away.

A Lover cannot. And so They walk on, reaching, I hope, at last

Their Destination, which he had hoped to gain so fast.

But think of the Stone, that knew itself To be a burden, but could not say a word.

Did not it suffer torture Being by Satan posed, Tortured, because it could not be really loved.

CASH VALUATIONS OF COLLEGE DEGREES CONDEMNED BY DON

exact reflection of the condition of our civilization.

"That many men who are now in college should not be there, is an evil so generally recognized that we are apt to overlook its significance. I have known situation where a full seventh of the students have no reason to be enrolled. Perhaps this figure is not impressive; but in an undergraduate body of 4,000, this percentage would exclude 600!

The vast majority however, of these collegiate non-essentials are driven to books by the absurd demand of the business world, which seems to consider a degree as some mystic key. Nor is this attitude confined to industry. When a college tells one of its instructors that if he gets a doctor's degree his salary will be substantially increased, one can hardly blame the youthful aspirant for acting on this advice, even though he is regulating his mind in a suspiciously commercial manner.

"On the campus our tendency to standardize, to produce en masse, is also evident. I do not think that there is as large a proportion of real students to-day as there was in the middle of the last century. Our colleges, overburdened by these disinterested hordes, have to resort to methods which may incite passivity and unconcern in the students' mind. It is from these dangers that the modern undergraduate must shield himself."

"Ye Fabian Occult Fanatics" Unearthed by Professor Simion

(By Mike)

Professor Simion, head of the department of Bathrology, entered the class-room and proceeded to unroll a long parchment whereon was writ the class attendance. The professor was a man of wizened stature, with deep-set optics piercing through shaggy eye-brows supported by an enormous dome-shaped bald head. Professor Simion began to read the roll. No one answered.

"Ha," quoth the aged man of wisdom, "this is fine! I shall have the entire class-room to myself."

"Now, ladies and gentlemen, in my last lecture, you will remember, I pointed out to you the remarkable remains found on the Continent of Americanism. To be precise, they were found in or around the once-lake Ontario—a monstrous body of water, ladies and gentlemen which, astounding evidence tells us, was at one time dry on one side and wet on the other. Ha! Ha! an historical witicism, ladies and gentlemen. Well, to this vicinity, prolific of evidence of the gigantic ancient culture, was a peculiar religious cult now identified as Studentium Universitarium—a most astounding secret society, ladies and gentlemen! One of their peculiar practices was to attend tri-daily gatherings for the furtherance of learning. How amusing, ladies and gentlemen! As if any age but our own could have an inkling of what constitutes knowledge!

"About two hundred years ago I was doing some research work there, and I found charred remains of a very peculiar substance, all marked up in an extraordinary manner. It is believed by some of my colleagues that this is evidence of an heretofore unknown code of letters. Some go so far as to suggest that it is unmistakable evidence of a pamphlet published by the junior members of this occult society. I was able to decipher one of the sheets. This astonishing reference smote my cerebral organism—"Ye Fabian Occult Fanatics."

"Now ladies and gentlemen, this is most significant! Think yourselves back hundreds of thousands of years. Picture the electrofied atmosphere as those black-gowned, scarf-capped Fanatics stalked austere through the darkened labyrinths of their so-called higher learning. Can you feel the terror writ deep upon the faces of the uninitiated, hear the awful shrieks of anguish whistling down the dismal passages? This is the point I wish to emphasize.

"This is the point I wish to emphasize. It was the evil influence of this ascetic cult which caused the downfall of that magnificent centre of culture. The point of decline seems to have come when this branch of the larger cult came into physical conflict with what has now been identified as another branch of the same society, known as the Rule of practical Application. This branch seems to have been more spirited, ladies and gentlemen; yes, much more spirited—in fact this scion appears to have had the name of being rowdy at times.

"Now in closing, ladies and gentlemen, let me emphasize this point once more. This pre-historic community showed remarkable signs of development, but because of these two conflicting religious bodies, the entire culture was lost to posterity. Ladies and gentlemen, that is why I believe in Missions."

BULLETIN BOARD

Dr. Stephen Cyako, Royal Hungarian Ministerial Vice-Secretary of Budapest, will lecture in Baldwin House, Room 1, at ten o'clock on Saturday, February 23rd, and on Monday, February 25th. He brings valuable first-hand information from Hungary. All students interested are invited to attend.

"MO" MITCHELL SCORES 12

But "Ike" Sutton Stands Out
With 22 Points Scored For Queen's

Staving off a desperate rally of the Tricolour basketballers which had changed a half-time deficit of 8 points to a one-point lead, the Blue and White pulled out a thrilling victory over Queen's at Kingston on Saturday night by a score of 35-32.

The struggle was probably the finest exhibition of the cage game that the Intercollegiate has witnessed this season. Both teams set a terrific pace and the gymnasium was filled with a tremendous din as a capacity crowd shouted themselves hoarse in an appreciation of the calibre of play offered. "Ike" Sutton of Queen's, was the outstanding player on the floor, scoring no less than twenty-two points, ten less than his team's total, and was the backbone of the Queen's attack. "Mo" Mitchell, the Blue captain, also turned in a whole of a game.

Rose of Queen's showed up well but the rest of the Red, Yellow and Blue were completely overshadowed by Sutton's display. The whole Varsity team turned in neat efforts and combined most effectively.

EVENING DRESS OPTIONAL

A business meeting centering its attention about two coming events, Elections and a Musical Evening, was held by the Literary Society of Wycliffe College last Friday evening.

Bringing in a report from the General Committee, Mr. H. R. Deering stated that the expenses involved in making the Musical Evening the outstanding social event of the year would be adequately covered, with the possibility of a surplus through the sale of advertisement space on the programs. The report was adopted with enthusiasm.

Following the transaction of further business, Mr. A. J. Jackson, M.A., President of the Society, gave an outline of the success of the policy which he, as leader of the Students' Party, had followed during the past year, pointing, among other things, to the new items on the college course which were a practical result of his efforts.

A stormy scene followed on the question of formal attire for the Musical Evening, in which Messrs. Jackson, Perkins, Marshall, King and Davis were the principal debaters, but it was finally decided that the wearing of evening dress remain optional. Nominations for the incoming Executive were then held. Mr. H. R. Perkins, Mr. A. G. Chaanen, B.A., Mr. R. R. Bonis, B.A., and Mr. J. J. Hurley were nominated for the office of President.

Mr. Bonis, in giving the Critic's report, censured the house for the unusual laxity of procedure, excusing it only on the grounds of the proximity of elections.

The illness which has confined Sir Robert Falconer to his home since last Wednesday is a mild case of influenza, and although the patient is under the doctor's care and has a slight temperature, it is not of a serious nature. REVOLUTIONARY IDEA PRESENTED ON LIGHT

Experiments During Lecture
By Prof. MacLennan
Interesting

MATTER IS RAYS OF LIGHT

The revolutionary idea that light exists in corpuscular form, created by the gradual demolition of electrons and protons, was one of the most outstanding revelations made by Professor MacLennan in the course of his lecture given to a large gathering in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening.

Professor MacLennan, who was introduced by the President of the Institute, Professor Parks, traced man's quest after the true in the conception of light and matter. Newton's assertion after his experiments with prisms, that light exists in wave motion, marked the beginning of modern scientific investigation of the problem of light, asserted Professor MacLennan. With this as a basis the lecturer built up the modern theory of light.

Professor MacLennan conducted experiments during the lecture. The most outstanding of these experiments, was one involving the use of liquid hydrogen and nitrogen to obtain the obscure phenomenon known as "Northern Lights".

A fact, new to many, was that experiments have been carried on within the University by Professor MacLennan and Professor Burton, in the realm of cosmic rays and the subsequent corpuscular theory of light. The work of these two professors has placed the University of Toronto in the van of physical research and has thereby added materially to mankind's knowledge of light.

Interviewed at the close of the lecture, Professor MacLennan asserted that the trend of scientific research opens the door to a new philosophy that matter is merely rays of light under certain fixed conditions.

Physical, Psychological Make-Up

The future of the Jewish race in America was rescued from an untimely end by the representatives of Northwestern University Menorah Society at the annual Intercollegiate Debate between the latter and the University of Toronto Menorah Society which took place last Saturday evening.

The affirmative of the resolution, "Resolved that, in America, modern tendencies will lead to the absorption of the Jew", was upheld by Messrs. N. S. Goldhar and Harold Seigal, representing Toronto. Messrs. Herzl Friedlander and Lee Srole of Northwestern University, successfully begged to differ.

"The Jew is neither in his social, physical nor psychological make-up, any different from the rest of the world", was the contention of Mr. N. S. Goldhar, in presenting the case for the affirmative. There is no distinct "Jewishness". Consequently, he is as susceptible, as any other people, to absorption into his environment. He showed how absorption had occurred in Italy, and claimed that "what has happened once can conceivably happen again". The existence of the Yiddish language is no obstacle. Neither nationalism nor anti-semitism, from their respective angles, would prove (Continued on page 4)

Dr. Cyako Traces Evolution

In Lecture

EMPHASIZES EDUCATION

Dr. Stephen Cyako, Under Secretary of State of Hungary, addressed the members of the Newman Club at the general meeting on Sunday the 24th. His learned and informative discourse treated of the unrest existent at the present time in Central Europe due to the situation arising out of the formation of the many Central European states following the World War. In particular he cited the case of his native Hungary, giving his hearers a most complete story of the evolution of the modern state of Hungary. Accompanying this historical narrative with a consideration of the legislative and judicial aspects of the Hungarian Constitution, he stressed the modern educational programme which has been undertaken by the present-day ministry. His words expressed the hope that in the near future, the chaotic conditions of these states of Europe would be peaceful instrumentality of the Great Powers of the World.

A visitor to the Club on this occasion was Paul J. Martin, a past President of Newman, at present pursuing further legal studies at Harvard. After the address, President Al Kennedy allowed the candidates for Executive Offices for the coming year to speak briefly, and a most delightful tea was served by the Alumni of the Club.

Breakfast in bed on Sunday morning will be a reality for women of Bryn Mawr when new arrangements announced in a recent issue of the Bryn Mawr campus publication go into effect. According to the announcement, the Bryn Mawr League will serve Sunday morning breakfast in bed between 10 and 12 to those who are willing to pay its representatives a small sum for the luxury. The breakfast will be small in size, consisting of fruit, coffee, toast and jam. For those who desire and can afford it, such added delicacies as caviar and pie are promised. The new plan is designed to eliminate the discomfort of waiting until the belated luncheon hour to breakfast.

The Varsity women's Intercollegiate hockey sextet defeated the Queen's entry in Kingston on Friday night by a score of 3-0. The tie game in Toronto resulted in a tie, 1-1, so the Varsity girls are now Intercollegiate champions.

The blue and white soon demonstrated their superiority and piled up a three goal lead by the end of the second period. Helen Hilliard, Fran Crooks, and Norma Bateman each got a goal. Most of the shots were from outside the defence as neither forward line seemed able to make much headway against its opponent's strong defensive game.

DAUNTLESS IN COURAGE

Years of suppressed nationalism under alien domination, was the story of "Hungary in the Austro-Hungarian Empire", as related by Dr. Stephen Cyako, of Budapest, in Baldwin House on Saturday morning to an interested group of students.

Beginning with an outline of the ancient history of the Magyar race, he traced its struggles down to modern times and conditions. The revolution under Kossuth, its subsequent failure, the iron clamps again imposed by Austria, the mockery of the so-called dual kingdom, all the ignominy and injustice heaped upon a lesser power by the greater, and the undaunted courage of the Magyars withal, were given a new meaning by an ardent nationalist.

DO THEY WISH IT?

"The Varsity" is nearly back to normal. Once again we are prepared to "look hang-dog" when the K on the front page should be an X, or when six typographical errors appear in one story. Soon we shall have no excuses to advance for our mistakes. For the past few weeks disorganization, a make-shift staff, too much work for too few and too inexperienced men have all served to mitigate our faults. But now a steady men's staff is on deck which must stand or fall on the merits of the paper.

News from all faculties, all colleges, all organizations must be covered. But lately the life of nearly one half of the whole University has had to continue its course without our certain knowledge of its tenor. We refer to the activities of the two thousand women who attend lectures, hold meetings, and do all sorts of weird things which the mere male can only conjecture. And all this varied co-ed news must be reported if we are to be "The Undergraduate Newspaper".

But here's our problem. How is mere man to report the life of the modern college girl? It just isn't done—at least it can't be done properly. And we have as yet no organized women's staff. In the last hectic weeks during which our predecessors reigned, the leaders of the old staff worked tooth and nail to get their work done—worked so hard that some of them jeopardized their chances of passing next May. Former editors of the men staff, are now studying. Most of them have hopes of obtaining at least a third-class standing, by devoting the remainder of the term to academic work. Others have been found to take their places on "The Varsity". The former women's Editors have the right to expect relief from their task. But can other women with the necessary inclination and experience be found to replace them as successfully as possible? And are there in the University a few women willing to devote two or three hours a week for two more weeks this term to report the activities of their sisters? The answer will be evident on Tuesday afternoon at a meeting to be held in the Women's Varsity Office to reorganize the Women's staff. We trust that some will be found to take up the torch. Several of the former staff have volunteered to act as reporters for the balance of the term, but more are needed to help them.

Do the women wish their activities to be reported by our men's staff? It would if it could, but it can't.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Hart House Library is certainly one of the buildings greatest attractions. But this attraction lies mainly for the reader, who wishes to spend a quiet hour or two reading. For the casual visitor, making a tour of the house, the room is not of much more interest than any other.

Yesterday was visitors' day in Hart House. During two hours in the afternoon, no less than one hundred and forty three visitors were ushered into the room, (the counting was done by one who, despairing of reading, sought other means of whiling away the time). At one time thirty-five visitors were in the room, the majority of whom were of the more curious sex. Books were taken off the shelves, looked through, and left on the table. Our informant stood it until one dear old lady in a burst of curiosity, leaned over his shoulder, to see what "the dear boy was reading". It was "The Bad Girl".

Two remedies suggest themselves. First, that on Visitors' Day the Library should be closed to visitors, or secondly, that it should be closed to readers. In either case, the result would be an improvement on the present arrangement.

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

At the Friday recital, last Friday evening, we heard Miss Glienstein, pianist, and we feel that Miss Glienstein is to be highly commended for her programme, which was given upon only a few hours' notice. Mr. Horace Lapp, who was to have played, was unfortunately taken ill and was unable to fulfil his engagement.

Miss Glienstein opened her programme with a Mendelssohn Prelude and Fugue, a work that clearly indicates the composers emulation of Bach while it discloses his inability to equal the magnificent style of the great master. The prelude was played admirably but we might have wished that the subject of the fugue had been treated with a little more freedom of rhythm, the final statements with a deal more deliberation and power. Although the passages were played quite accurately, and although one felt that the artist had the proper conception of the musical form, the lack of deliberation led one to suppose that technical difficulties were still troublesome. Beethoven's Sonata in E minor followed. We enjoyed it very much, but would have liked to overcome the feeling that half closes in the slow movements were metronomically exact. A little more variation in style and careful attention to nuances in phrasing would have made Miss Glienstein very capable rendering a truly artistic performance. It would be a pleasure to hear Miss Glienstein when sufficient time was allowed her for adequate preparation.

German Play

Next Tuesday evening a play will be given at the Women's Union by members of the German Study Club. It is entitled "Ein Kleiner Irrtum", and will be well worth seeing, particularly for those people who are commonly known as psycho-analysts, and as such are professionally interested in all kinds of mistakes. Indeed, we recommend everyone to witness this presentation of a small but delightful error.

Sunday Evening Concert

We have been looking forward for some time to the appearance of Mr. Paul Bai at the Sunday concerts; the concert given by him in the Great Hall last night gave us a great deal of pleasure. The programme itself was extremely varied and the Scandinavian group was certainly most interesting to an audience who are seldom allowed the pleasure of hearing Scandinavian composers sung by a compatriot.

If we were to choose the most delightful moments of the evening, we should select the Abends of Franz, which opened the programme and Erkki Melartin's spiritual O Herre. All the emotional beauty of Mr. Bai's voice was given to the close of this lovely song. The Danish Folk Song, Rosellie was charmingly sung, though the pantomime was perhaps a little broad for the rather simple folk idiom. Vaughn Williams' The Vagabond and Willan's Drake's Drum, were given with fitting abandon, but lost a little musically perhaps in the dramatic and forceful interpretation given them last night. But this dramatic power was admirably suited to the Auf dem Meer, and the Vikingsongens Sang, a true Seaking's Song, sung in a vigorous manner that could not fail to please.

Miss Muriel Gidley was an admirable accompanist. Her playing throughout the evening was unfailingly sympathetic, her tone beautifully resonant. Her accompaniment in the Borodine aria was singularly pleasing, harmonically.

Co-eds at the University of North Dakota are governed by a curfew which rings every night at 11.30. The reason for the practice, the dean of women maintains, is that there is nothing to do in Grand Forks after that hour, so the curfew rings when the movies end.

PANTAGES: VINCENT LOPEZ

Good music and good dancing are combined with a movie which, while no masterpiece of drama, is certainly not lacking in action to make up quite an entertaining performance.

Vincent Lopez and his band were a treat and his singing numbers quite good. His act was long but not long enough for the enthusiastic audience, who could have stood a lot more. "The revels of 1929" provided some very good dancing and the girls were quite easy on the eyes. The other two acts supplied the humour and quite a good brand of humour it was; the two sailors in "Fields, Harriet and Hamilton" were most refreshing.

The feature picture, The Midnight Taxi, was about a repentant boot-legal trying to be good—lots of guns, stolen money, detectives and train wrecks provided the usual thrills with the usual happy fade out.

Taking it all together, a good show for a wearied intellect.

UPTOWN

This week's offering is decidedly third rate. The picture is one of those which have no merits and yet no serious defects other than the time spent in seeing it could most certainly be spent more profitably elsewhere. In literature it would correspond with hack writing and it is about as enthralling as a rousing game of hopscotch.

The plot is concerned with the travail of a stainless young man whose only weakness is robbing safes. Upon migrating to a small town he meets the inevitable country maiden with flaxen hair and after a church service, a heavy dinner and a ride in a swing with her, suddenly realizes that he is smitten and will henceforth tread the straight and narrow. He is set to work by her poppa who conveniently is president of a bank and all is well until the little sister of the country wench is accidentally looked in the safe of the bank. Will our hero let the little che-ild smother or reveal his lurid past by exhibiting his gift of opening safes without knowing the combination? There is only one answer.

Varsity Juniors Claim Victory
By Default From
Y. M. H. A.

GAME MAY BE REPLAYED

The Varsity junior basketball five made a fruitless journey to Brunswick Avenue to play the Y.M.H.A. team. Varsity was notified that they were to play at 5.30 p.m. while the "Y" sound insisted that the game was called for 6.30. The blue team was on time and, after waiting an hour, the president of the league told them they could leave at 6.15 if the game had not commenced at that hour. The Y.M.H.A. basketballers appeared on the scene at 6.10 but the gymnasium was locked and it was proven impossible to start the match by the appointed 6.15.

Varsity claim to have won the game by default but the "Y" team argue that they were told to play at 6.30. They went on the floor, shot a basket. They claim a default also.

If the executive declares that the game must be played, it will take place on Monday. The winners of this league engage Elizabeth in home and home games Wednesday and Friday, points to count on the round. League standing:

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Preston will play the Blue and White senior sextet at the Varsity Arena here to-night in a game which will be do-or-die for the Health Town outfit. If the Prestonites win to-night they have a chance to tie Queen's for second place with an opportunity for the play-off but a loss will eliminate them from the competition.

On the "dope" the Blue should "take" Preston but the latter will be fighting with their backs to the wall and will give everything they have to down "Red" Porter's men. Varsity have had a good rest and should be in the pink of condition for to-night's game. The Blue already have first place clinched but will have a lot to do in deciding who will be their opponents in the play-off between the first and second placers.

George McTier, the McGill defenceman and middle wing on the Intercollegiate football championship team, has been elected to captain the Red hockey squad next season. McTier is a hard-working player but he will need plenty of luck if he and his men hope to take the Intercollegiate Hockey Title away from the Blue and White.

The Varsity basketballers are sitting pretty. On their display against Queen's on Saturday night they should easily put the blanket over Western here this coming Saturday.

The Blue Gym squad made a great showing against the strong McGill team here in the Intercollegiate Gym Meet. Although the Red and White took the Cup they only secured it by a narrow margin.

IN SPITE OF RALLY BLUE FIVE BEATS QUEEN'S

about a minute of play. Then Varsity snapped into it and opened up an attack that threatened to make the game a walk-away for the Blue. After fifteen minutes of play the Blue had piled up a lead of 20-4. In the last five minutes of the half Queen's came to life with a bang and by the end of the period had reduced the score to 20-12.

In the last half "Ike" Sutton going in earnest and inspired by his efforts, the Trocadero waged a stubborn battle. With seven minutes to go the Blue took time out with the score 29-28 for McCutcheon's men. On play resuming Rose shot a basket from a long way out and Queen's went into the lead for the first time. With the score 30-30, Mitchell scored on a foul throw and in spite of the efforts made by Queen's to regain the lead the Blue were able to retain a margin and emerged victors, 35-32.

SCHOOL MARKSMEN WIN MITCHELL CUP

Sixty-Seven Men Participate
In Greatest Meet
In Years

MATCH WEEK NOW ON

Over the weekend, School won the Mitchell Cup in the greatest shooting competition for some years. Sixty-seven men participated. The five best scores from each faculty made up the teams.

First, S.P.S.—C. R. Boehm 99; G. W. Jacobi 96; D. H. Cooney 94; A. C. MacNab 94; R. E. Irvin 94; 477.

Second, Meds.—A. Cutler 97; C. H. Haugh 95; C. B. Soltur 95; R. J. Nodwell 92; H. T. Whitehead 92; 471.

Third, Dents.—G. D. Leggett 94; A. Somerville 93; D. M. Stockwell 93; R. A. Wylie 90; T. E. Hayhurst 89; 459.

Fourth, combined team of Grads, Vic, and St. Mike's—Lucas 96; Foley 94; Milliken 91; English 86; Freeman 86; 453.

Fifth, Trinity—Mitchell 96; Sherwood 89; Mervynne 88; Brown 87; Bowden 87; 447.

Sixth, U.C.—Meredit 91; Keith 90; Jacobsen 86; Gow 84; Taylor 81; 432.

Competition was so keen that one man was called to the range by his faculty members from a sick-bed and justified himself with a very high score.

The Annual Banquet of the Rifle Association will be held in Hart House at 6.30 on Friday, the eighth of March. Prizes will be awarded and elections for next year's executive will be held. This is "Match Week". Spoons will be awarded for the best scores in Groups A, B, and C. A team will be chosen to shoot a friendly match with the "Signalers" Friday evening in the Spadina Crescent Armouries.

MCGILL TUMBLERS VANQUISH VARSITY

Intercollegiate Title Goes To McGill By Very Small Margin

BUT WILLIAMSON FIRST

By a score of 3,005 to 2,853, the McGill gymnasts nosed out the Varsity tumbler in the Annual Intercollegiate Gymnastic Competition at Hart House on Saturday night. The Montrealers brought down their best team in years and succeeded in retaining the Caron cup which they have now held for two years.

In the four events—High Bar, Parallel Bars, Pommel Horse and Mats, the visitors took three. Varsity only winning the Parallels. McGill were especially good on the High Bar and showed a more decided superiority there than anywhere else. Their daring swings and drops were a treat to watch while their form was almost perfect. Varsity showed up best on the Parallel Bars and won this by a small margin.

Although the blue did not win the title, strange to say they nabbed first and third places in the individual championships. Williamson, Varsity's captain, is the champion with 635 points, McKay of Montreal, second with 625, and Gunn of Toronto third, with 616.

Williamson is a very accomplished gymnast and was at his best on Saturday. Faced with strong opposition, he came through with as smart a performance as has been seen here in a long time. He won the Parallel Bars, came second on the Horse and second on the Mats.

The teams—McGill—Pacaud (capt.); McKay, Consiglio, Caron, Holland, Davis (spare).

Varsity—Williamson (capt.); Gunn, Heslop, Campbell, Warshaw, Wilkinson (spare).

JENNINGS CUP PLAY-OFFS BEGIN ON TUESDAY

Standing Announced In All Five Groups of The League

The schedule of the Jennings Cup Series is now almost finished. Four teams have definitely won their group. In the U.C. Emmanuel and Victoria. In the fifth group there is still one game to be played between Pharmacy and Forestry, on Feb. 22nd. If Pharmacy win this game, they will win the group, if they lose it, St. Mike's will win the group and if they tie it, St. Mike's and Pharmacy will be tied for the leadership.

The following is the standing in the different groups.

Group A	P	W	L	T	P.
Dents	5	4	0	1	9
Sr. Meds	6	3	2	1	7
Sr. U.C.	5	1	3	1	3

Group E	P	W	L	T	P.
Victoria	4	3	0	1	7
Trinity	4	1	2	1	3
O.A.C.	4	1	3	0	2

The play-offs will be in the Varsity Arena at four o'clock. The following are the dates:

Tuesday, Feb. 26th—Jr. U.C. vs. Emmanuel.
Wednesday, Feb. 27th—Dents vs. Pharmacy.

Friday, March 1st—Victoria vs. the winners on Feb. 26th.
Monday, March 4th—The Finals.

Meet Tuesday Night

Keen interest in the U.C. Women's Swimming Meet on Tuesday night is evident on the campus. Although some outstanding swimmers have graduated, Margot McDonald, individual champion of last year's interfaculty meet, and Ioleen Taylor, diving champion, are still here. Mary Wyndow and Ethel Hambly will also be out to fight for honours along with others.

There are some fine swimmers in first year, who are going to give the more experienced ones a real struggle. There will be some novelty races, and Ioleen Taylor and Mary Wyndow have a surprise in the form of a stunt.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE GIVEN ON BRITTANY

Rev. Father Murray Describes Recent Visit To French Province

The students of St. Joseph's College, at the last meeting of the Cercle Francais, were addressed by Rev. Fr. Murray, who favoured them with an illustrated lecture on his travels in France.

Of particular interest to the audience was his vivid description of the picturesque province of Brittany, and its manners and customs, which he had ample opportunity of observing during his sojourn at the little village of Trégastel.

The lecture was followed by the usual social half-hour and refreshments, while a vote of thanks to the lecturer brought the evening to a close.

VARSIORS SENIORS LOSE T O MCGILL QUINTET

Blue and White Basketballers
Much Below Form
Friday

In a somewhat ragged exhibition of basketball the Varsity senior quintet lost a 31-27 decision to McGill at Montreal on Friday night. The Blue and White were obviously considerably below their true form and their play seemed to be somewhat affected by the great width of the floor at the Montreal High, where the game was played.

The game was to a considerable extent marred by the over-strict refereeing, the official blowing his whistle on the slightest excuse. The Blue were way off in their shooting and a little more accuracy in this respect might have given them a win as the Red five did not show any astounding defence work.

Barbers were the dentists of the middle ages, while in a still earlier period the clergy practiced dentistry as a religious rite, says Dr. Campbell Morris of the McGill Dental Faculty.

Lisle Hummel, the Austrian silhouette artist, held an exhibition in the Sketch Room of Hart House recently.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 19th—Education and leisure will be the topics discussed at the fourth triennial conference of the National Council of Education to be held at Victoria and Vancouver between April 5-13 next, according to word received here yesterday from Major Fred J. Ney, executive secretary of the Council.
Subjects to be debated under above topics will be Literature, Cinema, Organized Play, Recreation, Hobbies and Handicrafts, Music and the Drama, Radio, and Health in Relation to Leisure.

Among the representation present at the conference there will be delegates from the younger nations, Australia and New Zealand; from the oldest civilizations, India and Egypt or Japan; and from post-war Europe, Italy and Czechoslovakia. Both Great Britain and France, as the mother countries of Canada, will be represented and from Great Britain there will be delegates from the Board of Education, the British Broadcasting Corporation, the National Playing Fields Association, the English Folk Dance Society, the Carnegie (United Kingdom) Trust, the British Federation of Industries, the Empire Marketing Board, the British Institute of Industrial Art; and the British Empire Film Institute. Leading educationalists from all over the dominion will also be present at the conference.

"The conference will endeavor to demonstrate that what is generally termed adult education is education rightly conceived; all else is but a prelude; that no scheme of education can serve its time and generation which omits any factor or stage of either life or knowledge."

It will endeavor to show that "No system of education, concerned only with school and college years, can achieve its purpose in the face of the devastating influences which the forces of modern science and so-called progress have produced for our present day enlightenment and pleasure."

Among those figuring on the executive committee of the National Council of Education are E. W. Bennett, Senator Belcourt, Hon. R. B. Bennett, Hon. Randolph Bruce, Hon. Vincent Massey, W. J. Bulman, Colonel The Hon. Henry Cockburn, General V. W. Odlum, James A. Richardson and Fred Southam.

When Weary Walking Won't Work Fiendish Fancy Finds Freshman Fortune

(By G. G. Brooks)

Once upon a time there was an industrious student who decided to work his way through college. Accordingly, near the end of the first year he set out to find a job. In the greatness of his heart he thought that this would be easy for such a one as he, but alas he did not know what was in store for him. The first opening he saw was for a place in a barber shop. He applied. The proprietor looked him over with keen tonsorial eye and asked: "What have you to recommend you?"

"I am a college man," said he with prideful heart.

"What faculty?"

"Arts."

"I'm very sorry, but we only take on Forestry men, good-bye!"

Still undaunted he set forth again in search of someone who would appreciate his abilities. His next attempt was at a department store. He went to Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown was very kind and sent him to Mr. Jones. Mr. Jones sent him to Mr. Robinson. Mr. Robinson sent him to Mr. Perkins. Mr. Perkins sent him to Mr. Shea. Mr. Shea sent him to Mr. Duncan. Mr. Duncan was extremely considerate and after talking to him for a long time, said: "Well, you know if you want employment you ought to see Mr. Brown."

"But I have already seen Mr. Brown."

"Oh! Well in that case I can do nothing for you, good-bye."

By this time our poor hero was getting a little weary, and in a humble mood he investigated a number of commission-selling schemes recommended by the job hunting guide. Fortunately or otherwise, an intense curiosity led him to read all the contract forms before he signed them, and so he decided he did not want to sell "Foxe's Christian Martyrs" or the "Family Herald".

All this had consumed much time, and not a little energy. April was not far off, and still there was no job. Weary and careworn, the unhappy student approached the circulation manager of a daily paper. "Do you belong to the Newsboys' Union?" was the question this time.

"No, I am a college student."

"Sorry, you can't sell papers unless you join the Union."

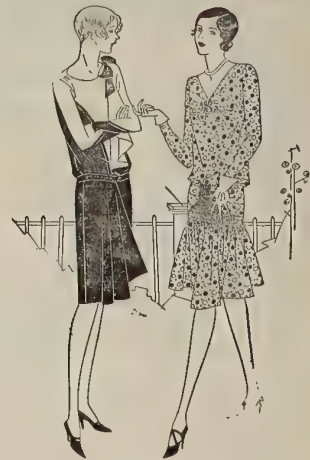

In utter weariness the unhappy fellow betook himself to the restful comfort of the Library. There, in deep solitude, he penned a letter which was to be his last resort. It read like this:

Dear Sir,
My Aunt's brother-in-law's sister's husband said he was a second cousin of John Jones, a friend of yours, and said you might have a job for me. You owe Jones a thousand.
Yours truly,

The next week he received an official envelope, and on tearing it open, read:

Dear Sir,
In view of your exceptional references and abilities, and your most interesting letter, I have decided to employ you. Kindly call at your earliest convenience.
Sincerely,

And the student laughed deeply and maliciously. For you see, he hadn't any Aunt.

MUMMIES AND CHEESE GIVE SCOPE TO X-RAY USER

McGill Don Finds Many Uses For Owner Of X-Ray

"Looking for the holes in Swiss cheese, examining Egyptian mummies, the interior of golf balls, the materials in patent leather shoes, and testing trees and timber, are a few of the uses to which X-rays are put to-day," states Dr. H. E. Reiley of McGill.

The X-ray is employed in the field of practical medicine, in the field of physics, and in the field of commerce, according to Dr. Reiley. It was pioneered in the early stages of its existence by the medical profession, and it is used now to examine broken bones and the intestine, as a cure for cancer and a preventative for tumours. In physics it is used to examine the structure of the atom. Commerce uses the X-ray for the examination of materials as to their suitability for use in manufacture.

ABSORPTION OF JEW WILL NOT TAKE PLACE

effective barriers against absorption, he said.

"The Jew will always live," was the spirited retort of Mr. Lee Srole, for the negative. There then followed a searching analysis of the Jewish problem in its physical and spiritual aspects. "Anti-Semitism is a bar against intermarrying," he claimed, and he forthwith produced his learned authorities.

"The materialism of this age is engulfing the modern Jew," said Mr. H. Seigal. "America's modern tendencies are shattering most of the tenets of the Jew." The speaker then cited the overthrow of Yiddish and the increasing intimacy between Church and Synagogue.

"The present period is only one of transition," began a violent bombardment of facts and fancies from the tongue of Mr. H. Friedlander. He drew comparisons from history to show that other such periods had been experienced in ages past, and outlined strong indications that the transition period is almost over.

DR. CYAKO OUTLINES HISTORY OF MAGYARS

misery when the Soviets, "bacilli of Communism" seemed to dig Hungary's grave, were dealt with in turn. Then followed the period of settlement under the League of Nations when, Lord Bryce was quoted to have said, "millions of human beings were handed over like sheep and cattle." A map of Hungary showing how ruthlessly she had been dismembered was displayed. In the south the great wheat-producing area that still rivals Canada in supplying European markets, has been lost and no compensation given.

In a city in the north-east one must produce a passport to cross the main street because the boundary coincided with it. Other equally strange situations were referred to as a result of post-war settlements.

Hungary, the oldest constitutional monarchy in Europe remains as such, but at present has only an elected Regent to exercise the royal prerogatives. The majority of Hungarians are in favour of the present condition remaining until their country is freed from outside interference.

In a short interview following the lecture, Dr. Cyako expressed interest in "The Varsity," which he pronounced to be an excellent paper, comparing it with "The Crimson" of Harvard University. His second lecture this morning will stress the cultural aspects of the "New Hungary".

No name has as yet been chosen for the new building of the Faculty of Medicine which is being erected on College Street, and which was incorrectly referred to as the Pathological building recently.

The decision of the judges in favour of the negative was delivered by Mr. A. B. Bennett.

FINDS FAIR VISITOR IS FINE ANTIDOTE FOR DRY READING

Hart House Library Haunters
Willing to Tolerate Curious Visitors

FOR TWO HOURS A MONTH

Matter Considered By Many As Too Trivial for Any Serious Consideration

Student opinion as to whether or not Hart House Library should be closed on Visitors' Day to either visitors or readers, is to say the least, desultory. In answer to an editorial comment in yesterday's paper suggesting that the present arrangement was unsatisfactory and could be improved by closing the Library to either readers or visitors, the "Varsity" set out to find what student opinion on the subject was.

Only two members of the Library Committee could be reached and both of these declined to express any opinion on the subject. The matter they said would be taken up thoroughly at the next meeting of the committee and some decision reached. In the meantime they did not like to commit themselves.

"I think the editorial comment was entirely unjustified," said George Laughlin, I. C. & F. "It is Visitors' Day and let it be Visitors' Day. Sure."

TAKE DRUGS FOR 'PEP' AT EXAMINATIONS

Exams An Anomaly In Our Modern Age Of Efficiency

"COLD-BLOODED FACTS"

That in an age of efficiency, examinations are an anomaly, in that they are costly and are conducive of habits that result in vast economic waste, is the allegation of an ironical contributor to "The Florida Alligator", student daily of the University of Florida. "Here," he says, "are the cold-blooded facts: During the ten days set aside for the past semester 'exams' there were 123,000 hours of precious sleep lost; 79,563 cups of coffee and 46,782 'dopes' consumed; 7,568 miles of 'extra walking' (calling for physical energy) to the Black Cat and College Inn for these beverages; 289,617 hours of mental energy expended studying or 'cramming'; 5,365 Caffeine tablets consumed to stimulate mental activity during the 'ordeal'; we spent 83,000 hours of mental anguish, 150,000 hours hoping we would pass, 700,516 fearing we would not, 11,500 hours of faith in our professors, and 46,000 hours of doubt.

"And further," he declares, "there were 217,561 wats of extra 'juice' burned, a sudden increase in the infirmity 'sick' list, several thousand dates and shows missed, as well as volumes of paper used. During the time actually spent taking examinations we were forced to spend 3,117 hours ennobling facts, and 297,600 hours 'shooting bull', which requires deep thought to say nothing of the great strain it exacts of the mental faculties."

'GO AFTER BIG GAME' ADVISES MR. KNOWLES

Prominent Journalist Speaks
On "Interviewing" in Third Of Lecture Series

STRESSES PERSONALITY

"A worthwhile interview with a worthwhile man done by a good interviewer is the best part of journalism," said Rev. R. E. Knowles, in speaking on "Interviewing" in the Mining Building yesterday. The lecture was sponsored by the Department of University Extension and Sigma Delta Chi and was the third of the series.

"There is nothing so welcome to an editor as a good interview," went on the speaker. Interviewing is most fiction; it includes biography and history and there is nothing, Mr. Knowles asserted, that people read with such avidity. "When getting after an interview, go after big game, and lose your inferiority complex," was his advice. The contact that interviewing gave with personality was what imparted to it a good deal of its charm. Incidentally, Mr. Knowles defined talk.

CLAIMS ENGINEERING MERELY APPLICATION OF 'HORSE SENSE'

Engineering Society Addressed
By Mr. J. W. Davidson Of General Motors

GET JOB YOU LIKE

Losing Sight of Fundamentals Is Fault of Great Many Inventors

"One of the biggest problems before large industries to-day is that of securing competent personnel." This was the statement made to the Engineering Society of the University of Toronto yesterday by Mr. W. J. Davidson, who, as Secretary of the General Technical Committee of General Motors Corporation, Detroit, is in direct contact with its President, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr. Mr. Davidson is a Canadian and a graduate of McGill University. His committee is responsible for almost all the experimental work of General Motors.

"Engineering," said Mr. Davidson, "is nothing but applied horse sense, and the more horse sense you have the less engineering you need." Mr. Davidson, speaking of the engineer as a business and exhorted his hearers to "think in fundamentals." Many felings started off, he explained, but got lost in the fog. The important thing was never to lose sight of your base, the fundamental of what you were trying to do. Twenty-two thousand inventions from all parts of the world, Mr. Davidson stated, had passed through the Corporation during the past four years. Of these a very small percentage were of any value. Their inventors had lost sight of the fundamentals.

Drawing from the experience of the executives of the General Motors Corporation, Mr. Davidson strongly advised the engineering students to try, if possible, to get some job that they liked, even loved. The man who did not like his job was certainly in the wrong place.

Mr. Davidson explained to his hearers some of the principles of his corporation which last year did a business of over a billion dollars, employed directly in all parts of the world, 225,000 people, probably as many more, indirectly, and had five or six times that many dependent on it for their livelihood. The principles of General Motors, and they applied to every other business as well, according to Mr. Davidson, are: Get the facts, Recognize the equities of all concerned, Realize the necessity of doing a better job every day, An open mind, and hard work, intelligently applied. For hard work, gentlemen," he said, "there is no short cut."

A $150,000 fire in the oldest dormitory of the Baylor College for Women at Belton, Texas, drove 250 women students out into the freezing night, clad in pyjamas and little else.

Meeting Cancelled

Last Thursday's special meeting of the Board of Governors, called to discuss student government at the University, was cancelled owing to the illness of Sir Robert Falconer, and the absence of several members of the Board. It is not likely that another special meeting will be convened for the purpose of discussing the matter.

QUEER IMPRESSION OF LIFE AT COLLEGE

Absent-Minded Professors Are Believed to Shave the Cat
In The Morning

OTHER POPULAR MYTHS

The following are just a few of the general impressions prevalent among the masses who are parked just outside college doors.

- Read them and weep:
- 1 That 90 per cent. of all college students spend all their time in drinking, hazing, gambling, missing lectures, and making "whoopie" at fraternity houses.
 - 2 That all professors are old white-bearded men who are so absent-minded that they start the morning by shaving the cat and kicking themselves in the face.
 - 3 That co-eds are very beautiful and very dumb and only go to college for the purpose of vamping the rugby team.
 - 4 That all fraternity house are dens of snobbery and vice and that the inmates spend their time by giving wild parties, half killing each other and stealing policemen's helmets.
 - 5 That students who study are social outcasts who speak around corners in shabby clothes wearing glasses to the hoots and jeers of the elite of the college.
 - 6 That all students upon graduation get jobs licking stamps and running errands in offices from hard-hearted business men who do not seem to appreciate them.
 - 7 That the four years at college are an absolute waste.

Sketch Room Exhibition

The following exhibitions in the Sketch Room have been arranged for the remainder of the academic year.

DEGREE EQUIVALENT OF THREE CHILDREN

Dr. Cyako, Hungarian Minister,
Discusses Problems Of His Country

DONS IN UPPER HOUSE

That the right of universal suffrage is given to all women in Hungary over the age of 24, and to those over 22 who possess either three children or a University degree, was one of the statements made by Dr. Stephen Cyako, Under Secretary of State of Hungary, in his address to a group of students in Baldwin House Monday morning.

Dr. Cyako, who surveyed the problems facing the "New Hungary", dealt with the creation of the national constitutional basis in a house of representatives, with elementary and higher education, and with the economic reorganization of the country.

The creation of a constitutional basis was the first step after the war. Nationally a constitutional monarchy, the country elected a national assembly to appoint a regent, who would exercise the rights of a king. The Upper House, organized in 1920, was placed on a much more democratic basis, and a large number of members were elected by the municipalities, of whom sixteen were University professors.

The elementary and secondary schools are modelled a good deal on the English system; and eighty-four per cent. of the students choose English as their extra language. The mother language of Hungary was, the speaker pointed out, related to the German. Dr. Cyako also sketched the cultural life of modern Hungary, in its museums, Universities, in Hungarian literature and in the Hungarian press.

"Economically a disaster," was the speaker's description of post-war conditions in his country. The League of Nations, however, in 1923, gave an international loan of $50,000,000, that by the introduction of a new currency, and the creation of a national bank, helped right economic conditions.

Dr. Cyako criticized the idea of a United States of Europe as being "very nice, but theoretical", and emphasized the fact that whereas America had but three nations and three languages, Europe had thirty nations and fifty languages.

Is Maintained by Parliament
Only by Quite Narrow

ATTACKED BY OPPOSITION

Installation of Common Rooms
Like Those of U.C. Also Discussed

That tradition as a factor in University life is not all-powerful, was shown in a striking manner by the Victoria College Students' Parliament, held in Alumni Hall last night. Although the unusually large and interested meeting had been called for the express purpose of drawing up a Vice slate, opposition to the whole idea of such a discrimination was early put forward. When motion was made to bring to the attention of the members the election of such a slate, Mr. J. R. Wilson of the Opposition, immediately arose and attacked the system, although it is almost traditional in Victoria. In the speaker's opinion, such a system was contrary to the ideals of Hart House and of the University, and in the view he was supported by his colleague, Mr. W. De Roche, who added that the Hart House officials themselves were opposed to it.

Such statements came as a surprise to the House, and were vigorously repudiated by Mr. J. Robinson, leader of the Government. When put to a vote, the slate as an institution was maintained, but the margin was small enough to indicate that it is losing popularity. It is significant that both parties recognized that Victoria is no longer a small college, and need not fear for her representation on the committees. After this flurry had subsided, the voting took place and the following representatives were elected.

House—H. H. Berry, G. K. Mac-Millan.

"A COLLEGE SHOULD BE . . ."

Indulging in Utopian speculations has ever been a dangerous but pleasant pastime. Probably no institution lends itself to greater speculation along these lines than do our institutions of higher education. Every man has his opinions on this subject, from the self-termed "free thinker" who would let youth wander ad lib through the elysian fields of knowledge, "unhampered by guidance", to the backwoods farmer, who would abolish the "whole dang thing".

Of late years this speculation has taken the form in United States of a wave of criticism, mostly adverse, which is breaking over American colleges, and which is bound to leave in its wake, if not a perfect system of education, at least one purged of the clap-trap which now litters these halls of learning. It is almost impossible to pick up an American periodical of ideas without finding at least one article on the subject, and some of them are rather scathing, as for example the one by Dean Max McCann in "The American Mercury", in which the writer claims that only one half of one percent of the men now attending American colleges are capable of being educated, in the real sense of the word; and this real sense is defined by the Dean as the creating in the student a real appetite for assimilating knowledge. He would not deprive the other ninety-nine and one half percent, the scholastic grasshoppers, of the social benefits derived from four years college attendance, but would found special Universities for them, glorified kindergartens, where social and athletic activities would admittedly be the main object on the rather attractive (we must admit) curriculum. Academic study would be classed as extra-curricular activities. Whatever might be the obvious advantages of a system of this sort, its drawbacks are no less obvious. A large percentage of undergraduates are men who certainly could not afford to spend four years in acquiring muscular and social prowess, and yet whose mental potentialities do not place them in the one-half of one percent class. Must these do without any form of higher education? In addition the mutual benefit derived by these two types from personal contact, such as we have in our present system, would be lost. We would soon have two distinct types. First, a vast crowd of social and physical giants, with little grey matter, and secondly, a smaller group of intellectuals who would be totally unfitted for the bumps and contacts of modern existence.

Professor Bernard Iddings Bell, in his book "Common Sense in Education", discusses, from a new angle the much-compared European and American educative systems, with rather unfavourable results to the latter. Of it, he claims that while the student picks up a smattering of useful information, he is taught to think not at all. This strikes us as being a little too sweeping a statement. However, it is interesting to note that he classes the University of Toronto among the few Universities on this continent who are breaking away from the narrow "Course" conception and absorbing the broader European system.

Indicative of the interest taken in this subject in America is the fact that "The New Republic" is offering a prize for the most intelligent handling of the problem by undergraduates or recent graduates.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Once upon a time, in the days of long ago

There lived a youthful freshman who was always on the go.

From football games to hockey games he never took a rest;

Went to so many parties, couldn't tell which one was best.

—C—
Now this same misled freshe had a liking strong for beers,

And the way he missed his lectures drove his profs well-nigh to tears.

I ask you gentle readers, was he not an awful sap?

For when it came to term marks, he didn't care a rap.

—C—
Now spring came round, and with it came examination time.

And that is why I'm nearly done with this, my little rhyme;

For when the roll was called that fall, when the next year was begun,

It was seen that poor, wee freshe his scholastic course had run.

—C—
But now my story's ended, and I'm sure you're all with me;

While sports and parties are so nice, you'll certainly agree

That classes are important, and really we must go,

Or be like that poor freshe of many years ago.

—C—
"Gee whiz," said the Duchess in high dudgeon.

Whereupon the General be-poke him loud and long on the elements of court etiquette.

For in those days it was considered no mean social fox pass to say "gee whiz".

And now, if the linotype man doesn't fall into the press and get all dirty so that he gums up the works, we'll cling a bit more ink later on.

AUSTRALIAN COLLEGE BOYS TO VISIT THIS COUNTRY

Dinner May Be Arranged For Them in Great Hall, Hart House

About the middle of April 160 Australian College boys are expected to visit Toronto under the auspices of the Young Australia League.

These boys are making a tour of Canada and the United States and are paying their own expenses. It is hoped, however, that a certain amount of hospitality may be arranged and various Clubs downtown hope to welcome them. It is possible a dinner may be arranged for them in the Great Hall, Hart House.

The Jennings Cup Interfaculty Hockey Series has this year seventeen competing teams.

A committee of 75 men is supervising the organization of non-fraternity men at Northwestern university. All non-fraternity men on the campus have received invitations to join the club, with the hope that fraternity politics may be partially eliminated.

Student Verse

FUTILITY

My eyes are blinded, and I cannot see—
I wallow in a murky, shallow stream
I do not see afar a guiding gleam—
I grope around in voided vacancy
Of nothingness . . . O Fate! . . . Of Destiny

I have not even the remotest dream
I have not even strength enough to scream.
I cannot tell my futile agony . . .

What though I keep my constant search?
I find still empty blackness . . . and the while I grope

All, all is space . . . my fevered, maddened mind
Makes the quest vain. There is no breath of hope.

I cannot ope my eyes . . . I'm going blind. . . .
I'm in the bath-tub, hunting for the soap.

—Storg.

A FAREWELL

I held you close all day, my dear—
How can I bid you farewell now?
You brushed away my every tear—
You smoothed each furrow on my brow.

But now our love is at an end
For you must go . . . Adieu, my friend.

You will come back again, I pray,
All pure and snowy white again;
You will return another day:
Ah! how my heart will gladden then.

In you I poured all day my grief—
Farewell to you, soiled handkerchief.

—Storg.

THE HARD GUY'S LAMENT

Who woulda 'tought dat a young frail like dat,

Coulda hoodwinked a hard guy like me?

Yet dat dame t'rew me down like a riot tear bomb,

And left me right dere for de hull gang t'see!

She tossed me down hard, and she said she was t'rough;

Did she act like she meant it—and how!

She blacked me left eye as she heaved a huge sigh—

And I wonder what poor boob is neckin' 'er now?

For I pity de guy, and believe me, he needs it!

She'll play 'im a sucker for fair.

She'll cry down his neck as she grabs his pay check,

She'll kiss 'im, and love 'im, den knock 'im down stairs!

But now she has left me, a guy just too dumb

Fur a dame dat can step such a pace;

She said she was jokin', but my heart is broken.

It don't pay fur hard guys to fall fur a face!

EMPIRE

This week's presentation "Crashing Through" is but another of the stereotyped stock company plays. To appraise it is difficult for it is a typical piece of hack writing revealing no imagination or finesse but it makes no pretension of being otherwise. As a treatment of the hoary theme of the struggles of a rich young woman who is determined to marry below her class, it faithfully follows the formulae of its predecessors. Its technique is fairly capable, the first act running true to form; the second is insipid but the last reveals flashes of intelligent writing. The acting falls into the same category. Deirdre Doyle as the grandmother of the heroine, gives a capable, if shallow, characterization. Wat Burns as her butler, does his part well, marred only by a tendency to overact. The only other performance of merit is that of Frank E. Camp, as the son.

The production on the whole is fairly well done, but can only be recommended as a means to kill an otherwise dull evening.

VICTORIA

Be sure to attend the brilliant three act dramatic comedy which the Victoria Players, with Miss Edith Taliaferro as the star actress, are presenting this current week.

The theme of the play is a romantic love-tale, with a picturesque country-home setting, in which Miss Taliaferro who first appears in the guise of a charming maid, later assumes the role of a French actress, with a notorious past. She pretends to be madly in love with a young man in order to arouse the jealousy of the girl he loves.

The comedy abounds in wholesome fun and keen-witted humour, while the ludicrous situations convulse the audience in laughter and helped to heighten the interest. Opportunity knocks but once; don't miss it.

F. M.

SHEA'S

Five vaudeville acts of varied quality and a fair movie are combined in a very acceptable programme at Shea's this week.

Collins and Peterson draw the laughter and applause of the audience with a peppy collection of gags, and a couple of smart songs. A youthful quartet of dancers, "The Four Flashes", demonstrate some novel and exceedingly difficult steps. Special mention should be made of the "Five Jansleys", a group of experts who perform some very dangerous feats.

The screen feature is saved from failure by the excellent love-making of Charles Rogers and Mary Brian. The former, a clerk in a music store, falls in love with the daughter of a millionaire. Through an unfortunate circumstance the girl's father is led to believe that the youth is merely seeking marriage as an excuse for obtaining his fortune. Our hero, however, proves otherwise, and despite a motor crash in which the father and the two lovers are somewhat injured, the picture comes to a happy ending.

On the whole, the show is worth seeing for one who likes light comedy.

PRESTON DEFEATS VARSITY SENIORS IN LAST MINUTE RALLY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity were certainly off their game last night. Their attack lacked its usual pep and dash and their back checking was not as good as usual. Preston, with their backs against the wall, gave everything they had and came through in the dying moments of the final period to tie the score and win the game. They gave a plucky exhibition and deserved their victory.

"Dad" Ashley was not as spectacular as usual last night, but the veteran hasn't lost his cunning by any means. When he goes down the ice, the puck seems to be glued to his stick and it seldom gets away until it starts for the goal. If "Dad" had his old time shot and speed he would certainly be one of the leading scorers in the league.

Preston have a really good chance to get into the play-offs. If Varsity and St. Michael's both beat Queen's, the Riversides will be tied with Kingston for second place. As St. Michael's have beaten them twice and only lost once, they ought to have a good chance of doing the trick and the Blue and White should experience little difficulty in coming out on the long end of the score.

VARSIY SECONDS LOSE TO LONDONERS

Western Shows Improvement And Deserved Its Victory

SCORE WAS 3 TO 2

The Western University Intermediate Intercollegiate hockey sextet defeated the Varsity seconds in a closely contested game here yesterday by a score of 3-2. Western have improved considerably since the first of the season and deserved their victory. They piled up a 3-1 margin by the end of the second period and played a close defensive game, holding the blue to a single counter in the last stanza.

Red Statham, the former London player and Varsity centre, turned in a smart performance. He made many spectacular rushes and his close back-checking was the feature of the match. Herbie Little gave his usual stellar game in goal and but for him the score would probably have been larger.

Varsity have now dropped into second place with 3 wins and 2 losses, and O.A.C. are leading the group. There are several games yet to be played and Jimmie Douglas' men have still got a good chance.

On a recent trip the Ohio State university band got off at the wrong station and had to march four miles to their destination.

Members of the senior class at the University of Oregon have appointed "cops" to see that the freshmen are not treated too brutally.

DEFEAT AT HOCKEY OF VARSITY FIRSTS BY PRESTON SEXTET

Riversides Retain Chance To Qualify For The Play-Offs

LAST MINUTE RALLY

Arnott For Preston Is Best Man On Ice—Marshall Stars For Varsity

In a last minute rally the Preston senior O.H.A. sextet defeated the Varsity firsts last night by a score of 6-5 and retained a chance to qualify for the play-offs. Until the last period the game was a listless encounter with many chances being missed but in the final stanza both teams picked up greatly and staged a thrilling twenty minutes of play.

Varsity soon took the lead when Marshall stickhandled his way through the whole opposing team to score and Brant and Murray combined shortly after to net another counter. From then on the Riversides fought gamely to get a margin, but though they tied the score on several occasions, it was only in the last couple of minutes that they got out in front when Arnott scored two.

Varsity were minus the services of Harley, so Brant, a former junior player, was subbing. McMullen and Stewart were resting for most of the time and Brant, Marshall and Murray combined for some pretty rushes. Marshall was very effective and succeeded in netting two goals.

Arnott was easily the best man on the ice. He was responsible for four of his team's six goals, and assisted in a fifth. He has a good shot and develops a rare turn of speed if necessary. The veteran "Dad" Ashley was not quite up to his usual form but he succeeded in getting one too.

Marshall was the best for Varsity, though Bruce Paul's rushes were a constant threat.

U. OF WESTERN ONTARIO HAS DEFICIT OF $80,000

Need of Increased Facilities For Research Makes Financing Hard

An $80,000 deficit is revealed in the financial statement of the University of Western Ontario, the year's income amounting to $420,000 and the expenditure to $500,000. The drive for a $2,000,000 endowment fund, however, during the past year has produced $739,000 in subscriptions. The report states that the necessity of providing increased facilities for research makes university financing a difficult matter.

By virtue of their win last night, Preston has a chance to qualify for the play-offs. St. Michael's were defeated by Queen's, thus definitely eliminating them from the race but should they nose out Kingston in their last game here Wednesday night and should Queen's be defeated by Varsity on Saturday, the Riversides and Tricolour will be deadlocked.

Combien il a raison aussi de voir la persécution de l'âme canadienne-française dans cette Maria Chapdelaine qui préfère la tradition austère du travail de sa race au mirage et au luxe de la civilisation américaine. Et combien il voit juste en comparant l'héroïne de Hémon à celle de Barres-Colette Baudouin.

ent and go after, but he said, was what man had in his own power; genius was what possessed man in his power.

A striking introduction and an inspiring of confidence in the interviewer formed Mr. Knowles' advice to the prospective journalist. He advised the use of some device to get the prospect into a sympathetic frame of mind. People are interested primarily in the human side of a great man, not in the side that is most apparent in his business dealings. "After all," said Mr. Knowles, "there is no literary instinct like that of the heart." The man who would write well must think deeply and to think deeply he must feel profoundly.

In concluding, Mr. Knowles advised the interviewer to use his own initiative. "You must be a non-conformist to succeed," he said.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 25.—The terse official wording of a wireless report by Captain Griffiths, Commander of The Duchess of Athol, now crossing the long wastes of the South Atlantic ocean, to the Canadian Pacific received here today: Quote Duchess of Athol via Tuckerton 2.20 p.m. Sunday February 24th. Left Tristan da Cunha after successful landing exchanged missionaries Reverend Pooley returning Capetown stop All well Griffiths. Unquote tells of a second day of unalloyed happiness to the 150 lonely souls who eke out their days in the isolation of Tristan da Cunha.

With what joy the arrival of a huge Atlantic liner travelling mile but of its course to reach them is hailed by the inhabitants of "The Lonely Island" can be imagined when it is stated that since the Canadian Pacific cruise called there a year ago they had only seen one ship. Add to this the receipt of tons of carefully chosen gifts from the C.M.A. and I.O.D.E. of Montreal, the King and Queen and many well-wishers in England, the annual visit of the ship's doctor and the event becomes one of greater magnitude to Tristan than any that can be conceived in the outside world.

For the last two years the spiritual needs of this little parish half way between South America and Africa have been ministered to by the Rev. R. A. C. Pooley and his assistant, Philip Lindsay.

Yesterday the Duchess of Athol embarked Mr. Pooley as a passenger and handed the Rev. Augustus George Partridge, his successor, who left England last month and joined the Duchess of Athol at Buenos Aires.

Last year was the first occasion on which supplies were successfully landed by a cruising ship under the Empress of France, also under the command of Captain "Yankee" Griffiths, made the visit.

The skillful navigation entailed in reaching the island can be understood better when it is stated that Tristan is only seven miles long—in proportion it is about five times as hard as finding the proverbial needle in a haystack.

Snoring Noiselessly During Waking Hours Freak Welcomes Latin With Open Mouth

(By E. R. Toll)

A most remarkable individual has recently been discovered a few miles west of the equator in the tropical everglades of torrid Iceland.

Although of ordinary size he measures nine feet from head to heels and weighs seven hundred pounds. His nose although very elongated is short and stubby while his flashing eyes are pale as moonlight. Although an orphan he persists in beating his parents.

During his waking hours this peculiar gent sleeps most of the time, snoring noiselessly all the while. And throughout the night his presence may readily be detected by series after series of inaudible roarings which awaken silent echoes among the hills.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" this long famous, but hitherto unknown species of homo sapiens, refused to say a single word, and remained absolutely silent throughout the entire interview. He remarked however, that although a 4th year student at Trinity he had never been to college. Nor for that matter, could he read or write, speak English, or even think.

"Then you're just the man," we cried with that childlike glee typical of "The Varsity" reporter, "just the man to help me with Psychology."

"And what is Psychology?" he replied with innate stubbornness.

"Page 127 in the Calendar, or look up Webster," we admitted quite frankly.

Our interviewee then explained that in his opinion, "the psychological relegation of 'Instincts' to the realm of the ludicrous was but a defence mechanism, and wholly inadequate to the modality of the content of cognition, being in fact a pure fault of psychological complex."

"But," we parried shrewdly, "do you imply that Latin too should go by the boards?"

"And what is Latin?" he came back with startling facility.

"The sins of the fathers . . .," we began.

"Then I welcome it with open mouth," he cut in wistfully, "for as the Polynesians used to say of the Doukaboors: Timco Danaos et dona ferentes."

"But," we challenged with all due respect, "are you really a Presbyterian?"

"No, I'm a Pragmatist."

"How?"

"Because," he cried—savagely seizing us by the collar and coat-tails, and thereby causing our immediate exit—"because," he repeated, "I work."

He is indeed a most remarkable man.

COLLEGE MAGAZINE GAGGED FOR OPINION ON WOMAN'S POSITION

Debaters From Northwestern
Reveal Interesting Facts About That University

"FRATS" CONTROL POLITICS

Are Supervised By Faculty In Respect of Academic Rating
Athletics and Moral Tone

In a special interview with Herzl Friedlander and Lee Srole, who debated for Northwestern University Menorah Society (Chicago), against a picked team from the same society of the University of Toronto at the U.T.S. Auditorium Saturday night, the "Varsity" was able to glean some interesting facts about that college.

Mr. Friedlander is a fourth year Arts man at Northwestern, and is first vice-president of the Menorah Society.

Of more immediate interest, perhaps, because of the recent "Varsity" vs. "Adversity" embroilment, is the fact that this year, something very similar, but having a more fatal result, occurred at Northwestern.

The monthly college publication called "The Scrawl" which was edited by a co-ed, and previously had a reputation for being a really fine magazine, ran an article which claimed that inasmuch as woman was not sufficiently gifted by nature to compete with man in any field, she should spend her youth wholly in preparation for matrimony, and the remainder of her days in the proper execution thereof. The Board of Publications of the University in which the members of the Faculty have a majority vote, claimed the article to be obscene and not only fined the entire staff, but after a subsequent argument, completely abolished the magazine.

As compared with the University of Toronto, things are done on a grand scale at Northwestern. The University is divided into two sections, one located in Evanston, a suburb 16 miles from Chicago, and the other campus lies in the heart of the city.

On the Evanston campus there are fourteen buildings ranging all the way up to 21 stories high.

Mr. Srole said that on the Evanston campus, the girls outnumber the boys 3 to 1 in the school of Liberal Arts.

Both men were amazed when they were shown through Hart House, and complained bitterly that Northwestern had no "Union" where students of various faculties could get acquainted, nor even large dormitories, like Toronto. Instead they had but an ordinary gymnasium and a swimming pool and had to be satisfied with only two dormitories housing 200 men each. There are 30 fraternities on the Evanston campus, all owning immense houses, and giving shelter to hundreds of men. These "frats" are supervised by the faculty of the University with regard to their respective academic rating, their athletic prowess, and gen-ly we can put up with it since it is only for two hours a month. No one is such a literary fiend that he cannot stand disturbance for that short period."

Another undergraduate who is a constant user of the library said, "For two hours once a month I don't think it's a nuisance at all. Furthermore the library is without doubt the finest place in the House to show visitors. As to excluding the readers there would be no purpose in that, since they are not bothering the visitors. Moreover they give the library an atmosphere which it would otherwise lack."

"The library is far too good to close to our visitors," said another student. "If I was bringing a friend to see the House the first place I would want to show him would be the library. The architecture, the woodwork, and the visitors' book are all most interesting to the visitors. Besides when one is reading a rather dry book it isn't at all unpleasant to look up and behold a good-looking member of the fair sex. In fact I find it rather relaxing. Furthermore, some of the visitors are so queer that it is rather an amusement for the readers to see them."

On the whole, however, most of those questioned evinced no interest in the matter. Nearly everyone seemed to consider the matter too trivial to be worth serious consideration.

As the result of a $30,000 gift, Harvard may establish an inner college similar to those at Oxford and Cambridge. About 200 students selected from the athletes, honor students, and extra-curricula leaders, will be instructed by a staff of special tutors and will live separate from the remainder of the college.

eral moral tone. In case they fall below the standard, they are promptly disciplined. In some rare cases, they have been compelled to break up completely.

There are inter-fraternal sports, debates, and stunt competitions continually being carried on by the fraternity houses, also supervised by the University, and when the time for student elections rolls around, they clique together for the mutual benefit of getting in certain of their men for office. Thus do the fraternities control the politics of the University.

CANADIAN INDUSTRY SPEEDS PRODUCTION SAYS COMMISSIONER

Better Class of Goods Result As Canadian Manufacturers Co-Operate

COMMERCE CLUB ADDRESS

African Trade Commissioner States Dominion's Handicaps And Hopes

"Production in Canada has speeded up tremendously," said Mr. Stevens, the Canadian Trade Commissioner to South Africa, who addressed a large audience on "Canadian Export Trade," in the Music Room of Hart House yesterday. "At the present day manufacturers can live only by specialization. The trend of Canada towards better class goods is a great and very promising feature: we are making ever so much better stuff than we were five years ago." He added that there is a great degree of co-operation among manufacturers, and that surprisingly little cut-throat exists in Canada.

Mr. Stevens called attention to certain handicaps which hinder Canada from being a great overseas trading nation, especially a lack of constant mass production and of men to carry on the export business abroad. "Besides these causes," went on the speaker, "both trading and financial facilities are poor. But it cannot be doubted that we will in time develop these specialized factors. We must go abroad. With a surplus of commercial men, the Canadian will eventually go abroad where he is well liked because he is regarded as British—and the British trader is a paramount commercial success owing to his fair dealing and his steadfastness in business."

Mr. Stevens emphasized the fact that there is a future on the seas, and that Canada sooner or later is bound to play a larger part in overseas affairs.

In conclusion, the speaker asserted that in his opinion there was just as great profit and as wide an opportunity in export fields as in the domestic field at home.

MISS RUTH M. HOME LECTURES IN MUSEUM

Elizabethan Period Furniture Subject Of Public Talk

"Elizabethan Furniture" was the subject of the first of a series of lectures to be given by Miss Ruth M. Home in the Royal Ontario Museum on Tuesday afternoons.

Miss Home introduced the subject by describing the pre-Tudor home in England as a glorified one-room hut. The English people were fifty or sixty years behind their continental neighbors, Miss Home stated, due to the long period of civil warfare in England which concluded with the beginning of the Tudor regime. The Tudor architecture and furniture, then, was in direct contrast to that of the previous period. The people for the first time made the dwelling place a home, and took life in a buoyant and robust manner, much the same as a school-boy just out of school.

The Elizabethan houses were furnished rather meagerly, and the furniture was much more ornately carved than contemporary furniture in other countries. This latter fact Miss Home attributed to the fact that the English people were trying to catch up to their neighbors, who were half a century ahead of them.

Women Star When History Dons Down Economists' Sextet By 7-1 Score

It was cold. Real hockey weather. The Dons of Baldwin House forsook Adam Smith and Preserved Smith and, picking up skates and hockey sticks, made their dignified way to the skating rink at Upper Canada College. The battle ground reached, the men (and women) of the Economics Department gathered in one corner; the men of the History Department in the other. After the usual delays a bitter contest commenced. Hockey has its stars and heroes who are never heard of, but the big leagues will perhaps soon be on the trail of Professor Brown, who led the historians to their 7-1 victory. The Economists were said to have been lucky to score even one goal. But masterly stick work on the part of Professor Fay prevented a white wash score.

A feature of the game was the clever work of the two ladies who took part. The wife of an associate professor of law began as the referee but later was promoted to the playing ranks, where she starred. While a well known lecturer in the department of economics appeared in the losers' goal, where she saved many well intended shots.

It could not be ascertained last night whether this game which took place last Thursday evening was to be repeated, but the suggestion that the affair was only the first of many such contests and that eventually a league would be established which might in time achieve intercollegiate proportions, is discounted.

SURGERY POSITION TO REMAIN VACANT

Has Neither Been Offered Nor Has It Been Refused To Date

'MAIL' STORY DENIED

That the Mail and Empire made an erroneous statement in yesterday's issue with regard to the appointment of a Professor of Surgery to take the place of the late Dr. C. L. Starr, was the statement of Mr. J. W. Dunlop, Director of University Extension, when interviewed by "The Varsity." Mr. Dunlop in refuting the morning paper, gave the following statement for publication:

"There is no basis whatever for the report which appeared in the Mail and Empire to the effect that the position of Professor of Surgery, left vacant by the death of the late Dr. C. L. Starr, had been offered to each of three Toronto surgeons, and that they had each refused it because it does not carry with it either sufficient kudos or sufficient salary. The post has not been offered to anyone at all, nor is it likely to be for some time. The Department of Surgery is carrying on as organized by the late Dr. Starr before he was given leave of absence last December on account of illness. Dr. N. S. Shenstone is acting as head of the department and it is not likely that any permanent appointment will be made until the end of the academic year."

WOMEN'S UNION SCENE OF LECTURE ON YEATS

Miss Violet Maw Gives Paper At Meeting of U.C. Women's Lit.

In 1899 appeared a volume of lyrics, "The Wind Among the Reeds," the most outstanding of Yeats' poetic works. They are the complete expression and most characteristic of Yeats. But in this small collection were found twenty-three allusions to woman's hair. This was thought to show lack of originality.

W. B. Yeats was the subject of a paper given by Miss Violet Maw at the U.C. Literary Society meeting, on Tuesday evening at the Women's Union.

The poetic aspect of Yeats is superior to the drama or prose," said the speaker. His development in drama is parallel to that of the Irish Theatre. "The Pot of Broth," and "The Hourglass," are his most important plays. In his prose he is concerned with the attitude of people towards the supernatural. In it he has glimpses of humour. The whole impression left by his prose is beauty.

His earlier poems are on legends and fairy lore. Yeats learned what could be done in Irish poetry when the political note was silenced. His later works show a growing sense of nationality and the influence of direct contact with country folk. The mysticism of Yeats, is distinguished from that of other poets in that his people are attached to the earth rather than the eternal. He was a true mystic in that he possessed the qualities of introspection, subjectivity, and intense consciousness of something spiritual.

CIVIL CLUB DINNER YEAR'S FINAL EVENT

Professor Young Emphasizes Need of Executive Capacity In Engineer

LARGE TURNOUT

The annual dinner of the Civil Club, which is a branch of the Engineering Society, was held last night in the Middle Common Room, Hart House, and a large percentage of the members turned out for this final event of the year.

Professor C. R. Young addressed the gathering on "The Engineer," and stressed the executive as well as the technical side. Work in the first few years, he pointed out, was mostly technical, until the engineer was fitted for an executive position.

Advice to young engineers was the feature of his reference to the executive side. Describing conditions as the engineers would find them when they left the University, he gave instances of how prominent engineers had adjusted themselves to those conditions.

The King, the School of Science, the Staff, and the Profession comprised the toast list. Professor T. R. Loudon and Professor W. M. Treadgold were present.

PRINCETON EVANGELICAL STUDENTS ENCOURAGE

I.C.U. Declared Organization Of Great Possibilities By Secretary

The weekly prayer meeting of the Intercollegiate Christian Union was held yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Room 22 of University College. T. F. Jones, III Wycliffe, opened the meeting with a scriptural passage from the Gospel of St. John, after which J. D. Duncan, B.A., president of the union, said a few words concerning the manner of their prayers, asking those present to pray in terms of life, not forgetting their movement in other universities of the world.

Several members contributed to the half-hour of prayer that followed, praying in terms of thankfulness for the founding of this union and asking that their beings might be filled with the spiritual values of life that cannot be taken from them, so that they might be strengthened and go into the world radiating the atmosphere of this meeting with the Saviour. The success of this movement in other lands was stressed by all those who (Continued on page 3)

HAZY IDEAS EXTANT ON SOCIAL SERVICE

To-day's Workers Must Have Genuine Interest in Human Beings

FAMILY FIELD HEAD

"Most people have a hazy idea that Social Service is a modern way of looking after charity," said Miss Barbara Finlayson, speaking yesterday at Mrs. Kirkwood's weekly tea, on "Opportunities for Women Graduates in the Field of Social Service." Miss Finlayson, a graduate of University College, is the head of the Family Field of the Neighbourhood Workers, in Toronto.

"Not so long ago," continued Miss Finlayson, "charitably minded women drove along in a carriage, left a bag of potatoes at the home of a needy family, and considered their duty done. To-day, workers realize that they must have a genuine interest in human beings."

The speaker went on to outline the various openings for women in this work. Although the Family Organization offered the largest general field, there were fascinating openings in the fields of Mental Hygiene and Settlements, as well as organizations in churches, schools, factories and hospitals.

Miss Finlayson emphasized the growing need for writers in the work. "We are developing a Canadian spirit in Social Service entirely different from the English and the American spirit, and our literature must keep pace with our advancement."

The Biological Board of Canada has been marketing fish from the Atlantic coast to Toronto and it is expected that to extend this work, it will be necessary to appoint inspectors for the process of producing the fish. Such appointments will probably be made in the very near future and there is a possible opening for men with scientific training. Experiments have been particularly successful and plans are under way for early production on a large scale by commercial firms. Any interested please apply to the Biological Department.

HART HOUSE MOTION SEEKS TO CONDEMN RISING GENERATION

Dr. Slater And Col. McFarland Speak to Resolution To-night

G. L. DUNN INTRODUCES

Balloting For Committeemen On Debates Follows At Nine O'Clock

At the final Hart House debate of the year Mr. G. L. Dunn of Victoria College will move the resolution that "This House has no confidence in the rising generation."

Among the hon. visitors who will speak from the floor of the House will be Dr. J. R. P. Slater and Colonel Frank McFarland. Dr. Slater is one of the most brilliant speakers in Toronto and during his undergraduate days at Cambridge was president of the Union Debating Society. Colonel McFarland is well known as a prominent Conservative and interested in politics. He is also a very amusing speaker.

The elections to the 1929-1930 Debates Committee will take place at the last Hart House debate of the year which is to be held to-night in the Lecture Room in Hart House at 8.00 o'clock.

At the debate, members entering the House will be given ballot papers. Members cast their ballots when voting on the motion. Those who leave the House before the division may vote on the resolution and for the committee by ballot, but not voting whatever may be done before 9 p.m. Those who stay to the end hand their ballot to the tellers as they pass through the division doors. Eight members are to be elected.

Any member of Hart House may vote. In addition to the eight members elected by members of Hart House, the Board of Stewards nominates two faculty, two graduate and two other members.

The following have been nominated for this committee:

L. L. Golden, III U.C.; J. H. Gringorten, III U.C.; A. G. Reynolds, II Victoria; L. M. Gelber, III U.C.; E. H. Carson, II Victoria; T. V. Kennedy, III St. Michael's; V. C. Webb, II Meds; J. C. Clough, III Trinity; J. C. Dunlop, III U.C.; H. B. Bell, III U.C.; W. J. Palmer, II U.C.; C. L. M. Douglas, I Forestry; A. R. Saunders, II S.P.S.; A. J. Jackson, III Wycliffe.

YOUR COUNTRY, RIGHT OR WRONG

The Victoria College Student's Parliament is indicative of the trend of modern thought, although perhaps not aware of the fact. We refer to their recent discussion regarding slate voting at Hart House Elections. Vote by faculty slate is a minor form of nationalism, and nationalism, in the "My Country, Right or Wrong" sense is out of date. True, the ultimate decision of the house was in favor of the slate system, but at least the bill had unprecedented opposition.

Sir Herbert Ames recently referred to nationalism as a sublimated form of selfishness, and the truth of this statement is clearly seen if we apply it to the faculty slate. The fact that this system is only in use among the smaller colleges is evidence of this. Smaller colleges fear that they will not be represented on the Hart House Committees, and therefore must band together to get their man in, even if he is of inferior calibre.

It is commonly argued that recourse to the slate is necessary, in order to prevent splitting in the ranks, and a consequent weakened vote. Therefore a candidate is appointed at college meetings, for whom everyone is adjured to vote. This encourages the faculty feeling, a feeling which is not in the best interests of Hart House, since it precludes the election of the most fitting man, and encourages the very thing which the system is supposed to defeat, namely dominance of the polls by the larger faculties.

Instead of fostering this "stand by your faculty" attitude, faculties, large or small would do well to allow their members free scope to vote for the man whom they consider is most fitted for the particular committee. It is certain that this broader attitude is growing, as Victoria College is not the only college which has its opponents of what is, after all, only a form of party politics. At a University, if at no other place, one would expect a more modern and cosmopolitan view of elections.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

McGill is much incensed over the fact that someone, presumably the City Council, has placed the numbers "805" over their gates. Not only this, but, of all the myriad colours possible, they have picked on Blue and White, as a suitable hue for these numbers. Much as we sympathize with the McGilliens in their great trouble, we must admit that those responsible showed very good artistic taste. But why not carry a good thing further? Possibly the gates themselves could stand a coat of Blue and White. In fact—well, we won't carry the thought any further. But it would be nice to know if this means that McGill has our number. Anyway, "The McGill Daily" need not worry over it too much, for certainly any McGill undergraduate, on seeing the colours, will turn first white, and then see red.

From Ohio State University come reports of the workings of their student court, and it appears to be no mere figurehead. One weekly docket results in the suspension of a co-ed from the university for one week. Her offence was that, after due warning, she broke the campus parking regulations. Several parking permits were revoked for similar offences. This Court, which meets once a week, appears to be an ideal way of maintaining student discipline.

Art, Music and Drama

Vic. Dramatics

This week's presentation of A. A. Milne's "The Man in the Bowler Hat" was a fine, capable piece of work. The play itself is a deft, airy comedy everywhere exhibiting the same touch of Milne and is an extremely fine piece of writing of its class.

The acting naturally suffered from lack of experience on the part of the players but Miss Barbara Armstrong handled her role with a surety that is promising. The direction, which was done by Miss Helen Price and Mr. Charles Birge, was of a far higher order than that usually associated with amateur productions.

The lighting and scenery could have been improved but the production as a whole is commendable and deserved a far larger audience than it had.

German Play

The German Study Club presented in the Auditorium of the Women's Union on the evening of February 26, the comedy "Ein Kleiner Irrtum", by Louis Angely.

The scene took place in a room of Herr von Helmback's home.

"Ein Kleiner Irrtum" occurred when Herr von Lichtenau mistook Herr von Helmback's beautiful wife for his elderly sister, who in turn was loved by Major von Derbing.

The actors played their parts with so much enthusiasm that the comedy was slightly overacted at times. This, however, didn't detract from the smoothness with which the play was acted, but rather increased the comedy.

The costumes were typical of the German militaristic period.

To anyone interested in things German, the play was worth seeing and those with only a little knowledge of German could certainly appreciate the play owing to the clear enunciation of each individual actor. The play certainly warranted a larger audience.

Much credit is due Prof. R. D. E. Finch, who directed the play. The cast included: Miss C. Walker as Frau von Helmback; Mrs. H. Boeschstein as Fraulein von Helmback; B. Davidovitch as A. Servant; L. Weinberg as Herr von Helmback; H. Boeschstein as Herr von Lichtenau; D. Steinhauer as Major von Derbing.

JIMMY DOUGLAS IS CHOSEN HEAD COACH OF BLUE RUGBY SQUAD

DOUGLAS CHOSEN TO SUCCEED BLACKWELL AS FOOTBALL COACH

'Miracle Man' Has Brilliant Record As Player And Coach

ADVISORY BOARD MEETS

Appointment, Rumoured For Some Time, Confirmed Yesterday Evening

Jimmy Douglas, "miracle man" of Orphan fame, will guide the destinies of the Varsity Senior Intercollegiate football team in the coming campaign to bring back the Intercollegiate Championship to the University of Toronto.

At a meeting of the Advisory Board held yesterday evening, Douglas was chosen to succeed "Les" Blackwell as head coach of the Blue and White rugby squad. Blackwell will remain on the Advisory Board, where his experience will doubtless be of no little assistance.

Douglas has a brilliant record both as player and coach. He starred for several years with the Varsity Intercollegiate team and later with Argonauts. In 1926 Douglas became coach of the Varsity junior football team and with them won the junior Intercollegiate Championship, repeating in 1927. Last fall he took over the O.R.F.U. outfit and moulded the motley collection of comparatively green and inexperienced youngsters into a fighting team that played to gether to a man.

For some time it was rumoured that he was to be the next head coach but this was not confirmed until yesterday evening. Douglas will be facing a difficult task but there is every reason to believe that he will "come through".

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The appointment of Jimmy Douglas as head coach of the University of Toronto football teams will settle a matter which has been of considerable importance to those who are interested in football at Varsity. At various times during the past rugby season dissatisfaction was expressed on the showing of the Intercollegiate team and the coach received his share of the criticism. "Les" Blackwell had a tough job and made a valiant attempt to get a winning team, but was unable to make the grade. Whether this was due to the material he had to work with or was a result of tutorial shortcomings is a question that has no solution. It would be well to remember that Blackwell took over a team somewhat weakened by graduations and failures in examinations and many expected him to produce a winning combination in one season. Douglas, who succeeds him, is facing a tough task. He has a fine reputation behind him, and if he can bring the championship back to Varsity this year he will be acclaimed as a "wonder" coach. Blackwell molded together the best line in Intercollegiate football but did not get results on the rear-guard. If Douglas can turn out a capable backfield behind that line, and he likely will if Jack Sinclair plays Intercollegiate next fall, then the championship mug ought to be reposing in Hart House this time next year.

While congratulating Jimmy Douglas, we should not omit to state that we know he'll have "Les" Blackwell's best wishes and whole-hearted support. "Les" gave his best for Varsity and is recognized far and wide as a true sportsman and gentleman.

If St. Michael's defeat Queen's in their O.H.A. senior game at the Arena to-night the Tricolour must knock down a win over Varsity on Friday to snaffle second place. A double loss would mean a tie with Preston for the second rung. Varsity are "in" and it is just a case of waiting for the play-offs.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

The following girls are requested to turn out for Intermediate team practice in the U.T.S. Gym on Wednesday, February 27, from 7-8 o'clock. JR. U.C. SCORES 5-1 WIN OVER EMMANUEL

First Game of Play-Offs To Decide Jennings Cup Holders For 1929

Jr. U.C. defeated Emmanuel College yesterday afternoon 5 to 1 in the first of the play-off games to decide this year's holders of the Jennings Cup. The brand of hockey displayed was not of the best. U.C. were much better skaters but the hard and close checking tactics of the Emmanuel team prevented the Arts men from developing a good passing game.

The first period saw U.C. score their first goal when Evans registered on a neat shot from the right boards after receiving a pass from Shortly. U.C. added another counter in the second stanza, Little being the marksman on a long range effort. There were four goals scored in the final session, U.C. getting three of them. Pugsley opened the scoring for the period when he beat Walkinshaw on a pass-out from Shortly. The latter scored a little later on a shot from left wing. With just a few minutes to go Emmanuel came to life and on a nice combination attack Houston took a pass from Breece to score Emmanuel's first and last goal. Walkinshaw allowed Pugsley's long shot to trick in to close the scoring for the game.

Shortly and Pugsley were most prominent for Jr. U.C. while Houston and Rogers looked best for the losers. Richardson, in the U.C. net, turned in a nice game.

Emmanuel—Goal, Walkinshaw; defence, Cox, Rogers; centre, Breece; wings, Houston, Fennell; alternates, Lockhart, Kendall and Berry.

Jr. U.C.—Goal, Richardson; defence, Little and Drury; centre, Pugsley; wings, Shortly and Evans; alternates, Saunders, Thomson and Greer.

It was Ladies' Night at the Faculty Union yesterday evening, when an informal banquet and musicale was arranged for their benefit.

MARGOT MACDONALD BEST U.C. SWIMMER

Wins Meet at U.T.S. With Five Firsts—Runner-up Betty Holton

CLEVER DIVING

U.C. girls put on a fine program last night at U.T.S., and everything looks promising for the interfaculty meet. Margot McDonald headed the list with the total number of points, and 5 firsts. Iolene Taylor gave a beautiful exhibition of diving, and also joined with Mary Wyndow in a performance of some very clever stunts.

Results:—
Plunge—1, Margot McDonald; 2, Betty Holton; 3, Mary McLean.
Breast Stroke—1, Margot McDonald; 2, Betty Holton; 3, Betty Lang.
Free Style—1, Margot McDonald; 2, Mary Wyndow; 3, Betty Holton.

SR. DENTS VICTORIOUS IN INTERFACULTY BASEBALL

Outplay Senior School by 12-2 In Heavy Hitting, Well Played Game

Sr. Dents defeated Senior School yesterday in an Interfaculty baseball game by 12 runs to 2. Dents started their heavy hitting in the first inning when they scored four runs. Another rally in the fourth netted five runs and practically clinched the game as the speedy delivery of Sommerville kept the School men off the bases.

The whole Dents team backed up their pitcher in fine style with clever fielding and heavy hitting. O'Brien, the Dent backstop, handled Sommerville's hooks very well and didn't leave the School men any chances to steal home. Marshall, at shortstop, played cleverly, knocking down many hard drives.

Shields pitched a good game for School, his tricky slant striking out quite a few. Kearns, at third, starred for School, who only had seven men out.

Senior Dents—O'Brien, Sommerville, Marshall, Hind, Butler, Brown, Zackheim, Mahaffey, Hudson, Quirk.
Senior S.P.S.—Edwards, Graham, Edmonds, Ferguson, Shields, Brower, Kearns.

VARSITY JUNIORS TO PLAY "LIZZIES" IN HART HOUSE

Semi-Finals of T. and D. Basketball To-Morrow Night at 7 P.M.

To-night at 7 p.m. Varsity Juniors will play Elizabeths at Hart House in the first of the semi-finals of the Toronto and District Association. The Blue and White juniors have just won their group and will meet a real strong team in the "Lizzies". Last year these two teams met in the play-offs and Elizabeths won after two hard games.

Last year the Blue were handicapped by lack of competition, having a bye in their grouping. Consequently they were unable to reach the form that a few league games would have given them. But this season it is a different story and the boys are right on the toes. There will be no charge for admission to to-night's game.

HART HOUSE ELECTIONS

As a candidate for a position on one of the Hart House Committees you will increase the number of votes for yourself by advertising in the "Varsity." The cost is very small. Apply S.A.C. Office, Hart House.

took part. At the conclusion of the prayer, President Duncan called the attention of the meeting to the fact that a letter of encouragement had been received from the League of the Evangelical Students of Princeton University. The students of this league expressed their pleasure upon learning about the formation of this Union and offered to help in any way they could.

When questioned about the Union, Secretary A. H. Hart-Davies said that in his opinion the organization was a success with great possibilities. He further stated that while the enrollment was not entirely fixed, they hoped to have a list of all members printed before very long. There are as many men as women, although at this meeting the proportion was thirteen men to six women. The usual attendance is from twenty to thirty.

"The Gulf of Years"

Novel by Distinguished Toronto Writer

Recently there came into our hands a novel which we cannot help regarding as an important contribution to Canadian letters.—"The Gulf of Years"—by Mr. Watson Griffin of Toronto, and we feel that it is a work which has not as yet received adequate recognition in the city of its birth. The "Surveys of Canadian Literature" which appear from time to time in current periodicals seldom do it justice, and the novel-reading public which we have encountered seem curiously unaware that there is, living in Toronto, a man who has written a story worthy of a place among the works of fiction of any country.

The "Gulf of Years" is not a first novel, but so many years have intervened since Mr. Griffin's last one, and he has had such a distinguished career as a journalist and an economist, in the meantime, that it is in these fields that he is perhaps best known. It was under his direction as managing editor that "The Montreal Weekly Star" rose from meagre beginnings to a circulation of a quarter of a million. Later he became city editor of "The Montreal Daily Star". He forsook journalism to conduct the "Made in Canada" campaign of 1902-1906. His subsequent official appointments included Industrial Commissioner for the city of Brandon, Special Canadian Commissioner to the West Indies, and Assistant Commissioner of Trade and Commerce for Canada. After holding the latter position for ten years he retired and has since devoted his time to the writing of his novel and of numerous pamphlets dealing largely with problems of tariff and Imperial relations. Incidentally, some years ago, Mr. Griffin prepared a plan for the extension of University Avenue, which may be located in any number of places as there are towns, by those familiar with the province. The characters are those who would find normally in such a setting, and the plot consists of the ordinary, every-day run of their experiences, their work, their recreations, their love-affairs, their tragedies, their intellectual pursuits and so on. Perhaps this does not sound like particularly interesting reading to those who are compelled to live out their lives in just such a situation and to undergo just such experiences every day. Our answer is to read the book, and if your reaction is anything similar to ours, you will not have gone very far before you will feel that the people about whom you are reading are your friends (or enemies), and their experiences interest you as much as do those of your acquaintances in life. That, in a word, is the secret of the peculiar charm of the book. The characters do live.

The central figure is Dr. Jackson Rutherford, master of his profession and a man of uncommon insight and ability, who prefers the general practice of medicine in Downtown, where he is a friend and adviser to the entire community, to the more glamorous position of a specialist in a larger center. He is represented as an honour graduate of the University of Toronto. The plot is intricate and provides the necessary amount of mystery and excitement to grip the reader to the closing pages.

So much for the story. There is another side of the book, however, which demands attention. In his wide experience Mr. Griffin has acquired views on a great variety of subjects, with which he diversifies the narrative. Chief among these is the question of the supernatural as applied to the healing of physical ailments. There may be much on this subject with which you cannot agree. The author does not insist that you agree. He does not even insist that you read what he has to say about it if you do not want to, because the two chapters in which the question of faith healing is, in the main, developed, are placed in a separate section, which, he tells us, may be entirely skipped without losing the thread of the story. The reader is urged, however, to come back after finishing the story, in order to have a real understanding of the characters of the central figures.

The doctor's theories on faith healing and his experiments in mental therapeutics are presented with such force and rationality that they are bound to impress thinking men and women. There are frequent quotations from the works of Sir William Osler to support the argument, and unintelligent skepticism is discouraged by the warning on the title page that, "There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy."

The book as a whole commends itself as an antidote for much of our modern fiction. The lurid and sordid details of life are conspicuously absent. The author evidently feels there are more important things to talk about than the more important things to talk about. His theory of the writing of fiction is well expressed in a dialogue between two of his characters.

"You thanked me in one of your letters for the novel I sent you, but you have never told me how you liked it."

"It was kind of you to send it, but I didn't like the book and did not care to write about it."

"It has been highly praised by some of the reviewers for its realism, but I suppose you prefer idealism to realism."

"A rank weed is real, but no more real than a violet or a rose, and when I am decorating my room I prefer to fill my vases with lovely flowers rather than with noxious weeds. Why should a novelist hand me a bouquet of rank smelling weeds when he could find lovely flowers if he looked for them. I am not denying that there are such people as that book describes, but I don't want to know them any more intimately than necessary. I don't want to know about their domestic infelicity, their illicit loves or their psychoanalysis. When a novelist invites the public to read his books he is in effect saying to them. 'I know some people that I should like you to know. Let me make you acquainted with them.' I have a right to reply, 'Why do you want me to know these people? Are they really worth knowing? After spending an evening with them shall I go to bed feeling happier and with aspirations to be a better woman than I am? Shall I get up next morning feeling more contented with life, more ready to believe that life is worth living?'

This, then, gives the mood in which "The Gulf of Years" was written. If your tastes in fiction correspond to those of the above speaker we recommend the book. If they do not, don't touch it. There are myriads of other writers who will suit you better. However, the author's proposition is worth consideration.

Forty-three writers contribute to the first volume of the four-volume Tercentennial History of Harvard University, the copy of which is now in the hands of the Harvard University Press.

Some Recent Books

"TWO ESSAYS ON ANALYTICAL PSYCHOLOGY"—By C. G. Jung, translated by H. G. and C. F. Baynes (Baillière, Tindal and Cox).

"CONTRIBUTIONS TO ANALYTICAL PSYCHOLOGY"—By C. G. Jung, translated by H. G. and C. F. Baynes (Baillière, Tindal and Cox). Those interested in Therapeutic Psychology will welcome these two volumes from one of the subject's most brilliant investigators. The first book is a revision of two earlier papers, with much new material added. It serves as a good general introduction to Jung and gives one an appreciation of his position in the psychological movement, a position which he himself claims to be mid-way between that of Freud and Adler. While there is much to be said for his claim of being the most reasonable of the analytical psychologists, we feel that he does not always do justice to the other schools.

The most important essay in the second volume is on "The Theory of the Libido", while there are other papers dealing with problems of modern life.

"VOLTAIRE, GENIUS OF MODERNITY"—By Victor Thaddeus (Brentanos). A new biography by the author of "Julius Caesar, and the Grandeur that was Rome". A forcefully executed portrait of a man who dominated his age. After reading it one wishes Voltaire were once more with us to hurl the full force of his ridicule on some of the abuses of to-day.

"LITERARY ETHICS"—By H. M. Paul (Thornton Butterworth). One of the most interesting pieces of miscellaneous reading we have encountered for some time. It might almost be placed in one of the numerous "How it is Done" series so popular to-day, because it does give a tremendous insight into the methods by which books are written, and the 'tricks' employed by authors to maintain their out-put. There are three main divisions—Literary Crimes, Literary Misdemeanors, (one is not quite sure of the distinction even yet), and Literary Ethics. One of the most interesting of the crimes—or was it misdemeanors?—dealt with is that of plagiarism. Mr. Paul has evidently read widely and deeply, in order to prepare himself for the work.

"NAPOLEON, A STUDY"—By Dmitri Merejkowski. (Dent).

The greatest Russian novelist of his day, once more gives us a profound and interesting study of one of the great figures of history and the age to which he belonged. The interpretation of the central character is so startlingly unique, that a general acceptance of it is improbable, but that does not detract from the interest or value of the book. The Napoleon of Merejkowski is in every way worthy of a place in the interesting group containing Leonardo, Julian, Peter the Great, Akhnaton, and the other characters of his historical romances. We note that in this last book the publishers have adopted a phonetic spelling of the author's name.

"MR. BLETTSWORTHY ON RAMPOLE ISLAND"—By H. G. Wells. (Doubleday, Doran and Gundy).

We agree with a famous contemporary, that in view of what Mr. Wells can write, he should be forcibly restrained from sending this sort of thing to a publisher.

"PENELOPE'S MAN"—By John Erskine. (McLelland and Stewart).

Professor Erskine returns to the scene of his first success. Ulysses is burlesqued in characteristic Erskine style, and shown up with all his human foibles. He recounts his adventures, duly revised, and never gives the same version twice. The book will please those who liked "Helen" and have been somewhat disappointed in the intervening stories.

Varsity Intermediates Easily Win From Osgoode Hall Sextette 5-1

Blues Dominate Last Two Periods and Pile up Score To Repulse "Lawyers"

HEATHERINGTON STARS

Scores Four Goals on Individual Rushes and Passes to Graham For Fifth

The Varsity intermediate hockey team defeated the Osgoode Hall sextet in a fast game by a score of 5-1. Varsity had it all their own way after the first period and had little difficulty in piling up a score once more on the goal.

Early in the second period Heatherington scored on an individual effort, but Hugh Plaxton netted the equalizer soon after on another solo rush. The blue regained the lead once more on the combination of Heatherington to Graham.

In the final stanza Heatherington scored three on individual rushes. His shots were dead on the goal and on two of them at least the goalie had no chance to clear.

Plaxton and Taylor turned in good performances for the lawyers while Heatherington was the pick of the winners.

Osgoode—Goal, Mackie; defence, Ciglen, Taylor; centre, Plaxton; wings, Earle, Masters; subs, Smith, MacCletchie.

Varsity—Goal, Moran; defence, Graham, McMillan; centre, Statham; wings, Evans, Carrick; subs, Leake, Clute, Heatherington.

CHRISTIANITY IS A LIFE OF UNSELFISH SERVICE

Dr. Pidgeon Tells of Work Done in Korea By Doctor Allison

That Christianity implies a life of unselfish service was the thought stressed by Dr. Pidgeon in his lecture to women students at the Union yesterday.

Like Socrates, Christ taught his disciples by drawing out their own ideas of the Messiahship. The pivot of the first three gospels is the question of the Christ: "Whom do men say that I am?"

From the suggestions hazarded, (Elijah, one of the prophets, etc.) he gleaned their idea of the Messiahship and strengthened their conviction that He was the Messiah.

Not until this did they depart on their work of teaching and healing.

Dr. Pidgeon referred to Dr. Allison's work in Korea. He was impressed first by the intense physical suffering of the trained natives. Catching something of the spirit of Christ he trained his first class for fifteen years.

Even after elaborate graduation ceremonies they remained with him to help in his work instead of seeking fame or money.

There is now a large class of trained natives composed of one hundred men and fifty women working with him in Korea.

A small but interested audience was gathered at the Union to hear the lecture.

EVERY STUDENT BILLIARD PLAYER IS HIS AMBITION

Mr. Tothill Gives Series Of Practical Demonstrations At Hart House

"If I could make a billiard player out of each and every man at the University, my ambition would be then only partially realized," stated Mr. Tothill during the course of an interview at the close of the Billiard Demonstration held in Hart House Billiard Room last evening at 5 o'clock.

Mr. Tothill, who is the Dominion Champion and the world's greatest professional demonstrator, had a "capacity" audience during his lecture last evening. This was one of a series of practical demonstrations being given by Mr. Tothill, each evening of this week.

The mathematical precision involved in the game was brilliantly exemplified by the professional. Many, among the interested onlookers, learned for the first time a practical use for higher mathematics.

Mr. Tothill has been instructor in the Lyceum and Forum Club of London, England, and in that capacity has coached many of England's foremost and most titled ladies.

"The game of billiards is recognized as one of the greatest aids for nervous disorders," stated Mr. Tothill, "and as such it is being employed for the jazz-jarred nerves of London's society matrons."

AMERICAN PROFESSOR LECTURES ON CANADA

Evolution of Canadian Nationality Interesting Modern Phenomena

ROLE IN BRITISH EMPIRE

"In the development of that twentieth century anomaly known as the British Empire, no other dependent has played so important a part as Canada, our northern neighbor," stated Professor Carl F. Witke, of Ohio State University, speaking recently before the honorary history fraternity of that University.

"The evolution of Canadian nationality," he continued, "is one of the most interesting phenomena of modern times." In discussing the internal and external problems encountered in the building of a new and greater Canada, Professor Witke recounted much of the history of that nation from early Colonial days. Many of the forces, influences, motives, and foreign relations which have entered into the process of molding Canada into an independent power were presented.

"It is a paradoxical yet undisputable fact that every addition to the freedom enjoyed by the people of the dominions seems to have drawn tighter their sentimental attachment and allegiance to the British crown, the symbol of unity. Despite this fact, numerous American customs, habits, and psychological influences have greatly affected Canada."

"The World War was the last great stimulus to Canadian nationality," he said. "Unity does not depend on institutions, laws, or rules, or structural technique, or written constitutions, or even upon self-interest, but rather upon that state of mind which cannot be defined, but which makes people believe they are free."

WOMAN JOURNALIST MUST KEEP WORKING TO BECOME SUCCESS

Miss Byrne H. Sanders In Sigma Delta Chi Lecture Advises Aspirants

GREAT OPENING FOR WOMEN

Enthusiasm, Courage, Some of Virtues Necessary For The "Game"

To make contacts with those already in the journalistic "game"; to have enthusiasm, human interest, courage, and to keep everlastingly at it—these, stated Miss Byrne Hope Sanders in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon, are the golden keys that unlock the mystic realms of Journalism.

This lecture, "What the Woman Journalist May Expect" was the fourth in the series sponsored by Sigma Delta Chi, professional Journalistic Fraternity.

As to the value of a college education to the journalist, Miss Sanders admitted that many regard it as time wasted. "But," she maintained, "your Varsity experience is a wonderful asset, only remember that when you leave college you must start where everyone else starts—at the beginning."

"But what has the 'game' to offer to the woman journalist?" Miss Sanders inquired. "There is a great opening for women in this field," she stated. "A new era is opening in Canada, and in it woman has her share. Statistics show," Miss Sanders continued, "that women spend 95 per cent of all the money spent on this continent. Women therefore have a larger place in the advertising field. And advertising is a splendid stepping-stone to other fields of journalistic activity," she said.

"If you do not know whether you can write or not, 'plug away,' advised Miss Sanders. "And if you have no success," she continued, "and if no one seems to appreciate you, if no one seems to realize how good you really are, simply decide that the world has lost another great writer, and go into something else."

In conclusion, Miss Sanders advised the future authoress not to take herself too seriously. A sense of humor she regarded as a fine sense of value and of balance.

EVEN MODERN GIRLS ARE DEFENDED IN LETHARGIC DEBATE ON YOUTH

(G. M.-W.)

Only the return of a galaxy of star rhetoricians from the ranks of the older generation to the spirit of the youth whose loss they regretted saved last night's debate on the merits of to-day's children from petering out apathetically.

The usual line-up of Hart House politicians spouted away at intervals during a rather shoddy talk-fest but no one displayed any enthusiastic interest in what went on unless indeed the older men present may have done so. The house evidently took its cue from the officials who brought in an honourable visitor known to be an antagonist to the motion. Has any Hart House assembly ever voted against the wishes of an honourable visitor?

But to last night's guest, Dr. Slater, and to Professor Fay, must go the credit for giving the aspect of a debate to the otherwise mediocre dispute staged by the undergraduates. During two and one half hours, eight students spoke, some of them man-

VC. PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS RESULTS FOR YEAR 1929-30

Nominations For Other Offices Open To-Morrow And Voting on March 8th

NOMINATIONS FOR STICKS

Results of Elections and Winners of Sticks Will Be Announced at Senior Reception

The result of the Women's Presidential Elections for the year 1929-30, Victoria College:

W.U.A.—Lois Girvan
Athletics—Eleanor Taylor
S.C.M.—Helen Hilliard
L.A.—Mary Lewis
A.G.A.—Helen Day
Music Club—Jean Evans

Keen interest was shown in the voting during the day. Many people were seen scratching their heads in an effort to decide which candidate to vote for. Nominations for other offices open to-morrow and voting takes place on March 8. The results are announced at the Senior Reception.

The election of a woman to hold the senior stick and one to hold the athletic stick is an annual affair at Victoria. The athletic stick is awarded to the woman who has done the most in the year for athletics whether it be intercollegiate, interfaculty or inter-year. The senior stick is given to the best all-around woman in the year and that one who is to be held up as an example of all that a senior should be. The sticks are passed on by their present holders at the Senior Reception on March 8th in the College.

Those who have been nominated for the women's stick at Victoria College are:

For Senior Stick—Evelyn Craw, Heleg Day, Lois Girvan, Helen Hilliard and Jean Pinchin.
For Athletic Stick—Norma Bateman, Helen Hilliard, Myra Jarrett, Lois Reynolds and Eleanor Taylor.
Voting on these will take place at a class meeting on Monday, March 4th in Room 18 of the College at 5 o'clock.

Dalhousie students decided in debate last week that lectures benefit the mind.

Modern Youth Voices Confidence In Itself as Rising Generation

HART HOUSE COMMITTEES ELECTIONS NEXT WEEK

Details of Polling For The Various Committees Are To Be Announced

Polling for the Standing Committees of Hart House takes place on Wednesday, 6th March, between 11.45 a.m. and 2.15 p.m. and between 4.30 and 6 p.m. Eight men are to be elected to each of these committees. The allotment of rooms for polling to the various faculties and colleges will be announced at a later date. A meeting of the presidents of all years of all faculties and colleges will be held in the Warden's office at 12 noon on Saturday next, at which the detailed arrangements will be discussed and explained.

The Camera Committee will be elected by all active members of the Camera Club in the Lecture Ante Room from 5 to 6 p.m. on 7th March. Four members are to be elected.

The Squash Raquets Committee will be elected by the regular Squash players of Hart House (i.e. players who have had their names on the reservation list at least five times during the year 1928-1929) on Thursday, 7th March, between 12 mid-day and 2 p.m. in the Sketch Room. Two members are to be elected to this committee.

Those elected for the Debates Committee for 1929-30 were:

C. L. M. Douglas, I. Forestry, T. V. Kennedy, III St. Michael's; J. C. Clough, III Trinity; A. R. Saunders, II S.P.S.; L. M. Gelber, III U.C.; V. C. Webb, II Meds; W. J. Palmer, II U.C.; L. L. Golden, III U.C.

DONALD D. GUNN IS TRINITY CANDIDATE

Ranked Ninth in Ontario Tennis In Addition to Numerous Campus Activities

FOR MOSS SCHOLARSHIP

Mr. Donald D. Gunn, fourth year student at Trinity College, has been elected as the Moss Scholarship candidate for that college. Mr. Gunn graduates this year in the course of Modern History.

In practically every phase of College activity, Mr. Gunn has made his mark. Originally coming from the Royal Military College on the Moss Scholarship of the value of $180.00, he immediately secured a place on the University of Toronto tennis team. In 1925 he was runner-up for the Dominion Junior Tennis title, losing to Gilbert Nunn. Last year he was ranked the ninth best tennis player in the province. For three years he has represented the University of Toronto in intercollegiate tennis tournaments. He played interfaculty soccer for Trinity during the years of 1927 and 1928, and was last year's Hart House Squash Champion.

Mr. Gunn has been connected with many organizations on the Campus. He is the present president of the Historical Club, president of the Canadian Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Union, secretary of the Hart House Debates Committee, having taken part in three important debates of the House. He is past vice-president of the MacDonald-Carter Club; was for two years a member of the Hart House Squash Committee; and as a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity, is the secretary of the Inter-Fraternity Council of the University of Toronto.

"Because it is said a lot of pretty girls come to Ohio State University, and Ohio State men are nice to co-eds," is the major reason given by Ohio State students who asked why they had determined to attend the institution.

Youth Vindicated Itself When Motion is Defeated by Vote Of 120-38

ELECTIONS OF COMMITTEE

Hart House Debates Committee Elected Last Night For 1929-30

Modern youth was vindicated in the Hart House Debate last night when the motion, "That this House has no confidence in the rising generation", was defeated by a majority of 82 votes. Thirty-eight votes were cast for the affirmative and 120 for the negative. The motion was moved by Mr. G. L. Dunn, Victoria College. Dr. J. R. P. Slater, past president of the Cambridge Union Society, who was Hon. Visitor opposed the motion.

The Speaker was Professor N. A. Mackenzie and the Clerk, D. D. Gunn. Speakers from the floor who supported the Ayes were: Mr. R. L. Fredenberg, Professor C. R. Fay, Col. J. F. MacFarlane, Rev. F. S. Moore, and Mr. G. Murrell-Wright. Those who opposed the motion: Messrs. L. M. Gelber, Justice Masterston, J. R. Caldwell, H. B. Bell, A. R. Saunders, T. V. Kennedy, and D. G. McRae.

The tellers for the Ayes were: H. R. Ziegler and C. H. Bastock; for the Noes: R. L. Fredenberg and D. G. W. McRae. Election for the Debates Committee took place.

Those elected for the Debates Committee for 1929-30 were:

C. L. M. Douglas, I. Forestry, T. V. Kennedy, III St. Michael's; J. C. Clough, III Trinity; A. R. Saunders, II S.P.S.; L. M. Gelber, III U.C.; V. C. Webb, II Meds; W. J. Palmer, II U.C.; L. L. Golden, III U.C.

"Schools," said Bernard Shaw, "act as prisons in which the immature are kept from worrying the mature." Mr. Shaw is wrong, according to a contributor to the Daily Californian. Schools act as prisons in which selected members of the mature are kept to worry the immature.

UNE FAMILLE D'ARBRES
C'est après avoir traversé une plaine brulée de soleil que je les rencontre. Ils ne demeurent pas au bord de la route, à cause du bruit. Ils habitent les champs incultes, sur une source connue des oiseaux seuls.

De loin, ils semblent impénétrables. Dès que j'approche, leurs troncs se desserrent. Ils m'accueillent avec prudence. Je peux me reposer, me rafraîchir, mais je devine qu'ils m'observent et se défient.

Ils vivent en famille, les plus âgés au milieu et les petits, ceux dont les premières feuilles viennent de naître, un peu partout, sans jamais s'écartier. Ils mettent longtemps à mourir, et ils gardent les morts debout jusqu'à la chute en poussière.

Ils se flattent de leurs longues branches, pour s'assurer qu'ils sont tous là, comme les aveugles. Ils gesticulent de colère si le vent s'essouffle à les déraciner. Mais entre eux aucune dispute. Ils ne murmurent que d'accord.

Je sens qu'ils doivent être ma vraie famille. J'oubliais vite l'autre. Ces arbres m'adoptèrent peu à peu, et pour le mériter j'apprends ce qu'il faut savoir.

Je sais déjà regarder les nusges qui percent et se défient.
Je sais aussi rester en place.
Et je sais presque me taire.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28th, 1929

We firmly believe that when Satan tried to stir up strife in Heaven, and was promptly deported as an undesirable, he gave out to his friends, as an excuse for his failure, the suggestion that the residents of that place were too apathetic to care whether they were freed from their "bonds" or not. It is an excuse as old as error itself. Whenever the wild-cat schemes of a wild-cat man are rejected by a sober community, this same man tries to stave off his inevitable dive into oblivion with accusations of indifference, hurled at all those who didn't see eye to eye with him.

The excuse is still in vogue. It was used as recently as last night at the Hart House Debate. But even the fact that it was used as an argument at one of these august deliberations does not convince us of its soundness.

Because a set of people see fit to reject certain proposals made by one of their number does not prove that they are indifferent. It is possible, if not probable, that after giving the proposition due consideration, they consider it unworthy of their support.

Students of this University, who, we may take it, are representative of the much mooted "Modern Generation", are anything but apathetic. If one doubts this statement, let him stand outside the School of Science Building and shout some epithet uncomplimentary to the profession of engineering. If, after leaving the hospital, he is still unconvinced, let him attend some intercollegiate fixture, such as a rugby or hockey match. Apathetic? Not very.

It naturally follows that a group so easily aroused over things which are, after all, not vital, should not appear as indifferent to things of greater importance.

Present the student body with some proposition which means something, and we are convinced that they would see it through. There are, of course, certain individuals who are so indifferent to student affairs that given their fees—worth in lecturing, they rest content. But in matters that affect the majority, the majority would act. Let's have no more of this rot about apathy.

Editor, "The Varsity".
Dear Sir—

On your yesterday's writing, I am assuming your "convalescence" is past and that your "helpful" efforts are again ready for the "wallpapers" of criticism.

This, my first writing to "Varsity", might still have been only imagined, had it not been for my strong revulsion at anything resembling "hokey", or masked pedantry.

I am among the many here who have passed the spasm of youth when music is the one glorious reason for existence and yet the old drag has still a strong fascination. It has been the habit, with me, to try to find expression in fairly dignified language, for my appreciation of the occasional musical fiestas I attend. For a really intelligent analysis however, I look to practised reviewers and am always elated whenever the Critic's reactions and mine have agreed, though the manner of expression matched as Shakespeare to the present Champion Cat. But anyway, when I read over a criticism of music in your "Art, Music and Drama" section, I want to tear hair, bite table-legs, growl on all fours and do those things forbidden to sanity.

My Good Hat, what on earth does a common-place person make out of "nuances in phrasing" and "variations in style"? Nuances in phrasing, off-hand means to me shadings of groups, and as this conveys nothing, why write

Players Guild

Miss Jean Dow's presentation of scenes from Hassan by James Elroy Flecker, was one of the best reproductions put on by the Players' Guild this year. It is a beautiful play consisting of pure poetry and yet containing sufficient action to give it dramatic interest. The plot is simple but stirring and concerns the tragic history of two Persian lovers cruelly persecuted by the Caliph of the land. One setting by means of a variety of lighting effects and a few minor served excellently for the three scenes and epilogue, which presented a series of tableau effects. Mr. Cameron Cross, a newcomer to the Guild, caught the spirit of his role and succeeded in bringing out the poetic value of his lines. Mr. Raymond Card, Miss Eleanor Barton and Miss Isabel Godfrey gave their usual capable performances and the minor parts were taken by Mr. Pat Usher, Mr. Gordon MacNamara and Mr. Alex. Fee. Due to inadequate preparation the first scene did not seem to run as smoothly as the remaining three, but in most respects it was a very good production.

Sketch Room

The most significant feature of this year's exhibit by the members of Hart House is how greatly most of the landscape prices have been influenced by the Group of Seven. This is especially evident in the work of Prof. Banting and A. A. Macdonald, but all of the Canadian landscape pictures reveal this influence to some degree.

One of the outstanding pieces in the collection is that of Prof. Funnell, a cool, dignified still life in oils with a fine unity and solidity of composition. Fro. Walker is represented by a collection of landscapes in oils of Bohemia and Czechoslovakia. There is a sureness captured in them and they reveal thoughtful composition. Of the life studies the work of J. F. Swayze is outstanding and reveals a fine feeling for line and two heads by F. B. Plowes in charcoal are very well done.

In the small sketch room are hung reproductions of masterpieces of the XV and XVI century Italian school. The whole exhibition is extremely interesting and is well worth seeing.

A MURDERER MEDITATES

(A Morbid Monologue)

The prisoner waited in his cell—
Waited for the fatal knell,
Saying, "When the clock strikes one
Then my days on earth are done.
I shall feel the hangman's noose,
And the spirit shall be loose
From this wretched body of mine.
Only seven minutes more—
Then shall come the hangman's line:
And for ever—evermore
Shall this mad heart cease to beat—
How time drags! Six minutes yet!
Still, I fear not. What to fear?
Nothing, now that Death is near.
Satan laughs with fiendish glee:
I do not fear—I make no plea—
I'll receive what's due to me.
And 'tis cheaply that I sell
Life. Yet what is life? A jest;
Death the jester. At its best
Life's a struggle up a path—
Futile; for the victor's Death . . .

Only ninety seconds more
And my soul to Heaven's hall soar . . .
Heaven—Heaven? Said I?
Nay! My evil soul shall sink
In a horrid slimy pit—
Bottomless—as black as ink . . .
Sixty seconds still to wait
For my rich-deserving fate.
Murderer am I—and thief—
Life to me was dear,—yet brief—
Thirty years I own to-day:
Thirty years just thrown away . . .

Half a minute left to me
Till the time I pay my fee . . .
Half a minute! Irony
Mocking at a murderer's fate.
Half a minute still to wait.
Come, my murderers, any time
Suits me. Why do you delay? . . .
Is there respite granted? . . . Nay!
Foolish hope, for I must pay
Till the fulness of my crime.

Hasten—hasten! Draw the noose!
Let this restless spirit loose!
God in Heaven! Bring me death!
Take away this petty breath!

One o'clock! 'tis one o'clock!
Lead me to the bloody dock!
Do I fear—Nay! Do I cower
At the anticipated hour?
Quickly—quickly! Come to me
Quickly . . . what is this I see!
Thirty seconds after one
And my life is not yet done!
Is there chance? Is there a hope
That this neck escape the rope?
Have I gained respite at last? . . .
Has a late reprieve been won?"

—O—O—O—O—O—O—O—O—

And so our little poem ends;
The joke was on the prisoner, friends,
For tho' his time of doom had passed,
The clock was seven minutes fast.

SPRING SONG OF THE UNDER-GRAD
Frosh
Why the deuce did I ever come here?
I'm hanged if I can tell.
Was it because I wanted to cheer
And give a Varsity yell?

I've often wondered how nix it would be
To go to oodles of shines;
Well, they are nice, but now I can see
I spent far too many times.

And now by gosh, it's nothing but work
'Till the end of May, I see.
Those darned exams! Oh, why did I shirk?

Alas! Alack is me!
—C—C—Soph
(Time—The day is Past and Over)
The year is nearly over,
And exams I've got to write,
I thought I was in clover,
But I know I was not right.
I wonder why the sam hill
I drank so darn much beer,
And I admit my gin bill
Was something mighty dear.

I've had my fun and now, boys,
The end is drawing near;
I hate to think of those joys
I hope will come next year.
But oh, my hat, those papers!
I'll hate my marks to see.
The Old Man will cut capers!
Alas! Alack is me!

—C—C—
Junior
For two years did I fiddle my time,
And the third's all but gone by,
So now I'll sing a little rhyme,
For an awful ass am I.

Of debates and sports I've seen a lot,
And dances not a few,
But now it will be mighty hot
If some work I do not do.

I'd hate to be an "also ran",
And leave "sans" my degree,
But oh, good night! By the great God Pan!

Alas! Alack is me!
—C—C—
Senior
(Time—Now the Day is Over)
Now the year is over,
Exams are drawing nigh;
Shadows of forboding
Steal before my eye.

Yes, I've had some good times—
Some of them were bad—
Now the fun I'm leaving,
Gee, it makes me sad!

And now I've got to go, 'cause
Whichever way it be,
Pass, or fail, what matter?
Alas! Alack is me!

A WANDERER

Far in the gloomy depths of this grim vale,
Amid the hovering mists of Doubt and Fear,
I wander—
And ponder
On many problems that beset me here.

Dim, shadowy imperfections wall me round,
And unreach'd aspirations tower high.
And o'er me,
Before me,
The pathless wastes of lost ambitions lie.

But yonder on the mountain-tops I see
The gleam of rare perfection—hopes come true—
The sun beams
On these dreams
That flourish to fulfillment, ever new.

God grant, before the sands of life are run,
That, as I wander, I may find the way

To yon height
Where Truth's light
Illumines Earth's poor strife in endless day!

MARQUETTE UNIVERSITY DEBATES WITH VARSITY

Marquette University will debate with the University of Toronto on Monday, March 11, at eight o'clock.
The subject to be discussed is, "That this House is in favour of full government control of water-power." The University of Toronto will uphold the affirmative of the question.

The Literary and Debates Committee would be glad to have the names of any undergraduates desirous of making application for membership on the University of Toronto team, which will consist of two. Applications may be handed in to the Students' Administrative Council office, or to Allan H.
Ferry, the chairman of the Debates Committee, Emmanuel College.

QUEEN'S BEAT ST. MICHAEL'S 3-2 AND QUALIFY FOR FINALS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Last night Queen's earned the right to meet Varsity in the play-offs for the championship of the senior O.H.A. by defeating St. Michael's 3-2. The Tricolour have collected a smart aggregation and until Monday night were the first team to down the Blue and White. However, Toronto has beaten them twice since the beginning of the season and will probably get the call to come out on the long end of the score in the finals Monday and Wednesday.

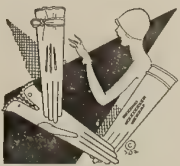

"Mel" Harley, who has been absent from the senior squad for some time with an attack of "flu", is expected back for the deciding game next week. In all probability he will not turn out for the game on Friday which practically amounts to an exhibition affair but his return will certainly be welcome for the play-downs. With a regular forward line of McMullen, Stewart and Harley, "Red" Porter's wards won't have to bow to anybody.

The appointment of "Jimmie" Douglas as official mentor of the Intercollegiate rugby squad has been rumoured for some time and evinced no great surprise when it was officially announced on Tuesday night. Douglas was chosen as the coach for several all-star teams last fall and the leadership of the Big Blue Team could be in no better hands. Congratulations, Jimmie—all kinds of luck for the coming season.

On Saturday night the water polo team plays its return game with McGill. Carrying with them a six-goal lead, they should have little difficulty in winning the cup. Goss and Latchford are two of the smartest players in the game and with the rest of the team working behind them they may take the Red's number right in their own tank.

BLUE JUNIORS LOSE TO ELIZABETH FIVE

Varsity Basketball Team Is Off-Colour in First Game Of Play-offs

BURNS AND WOOD STAR

Elizabeth junior basketball five defeated Varsity 36-29 in the first of home-and-home championship games at Hart House gym last night.

The "Lizies" gained a seven point lead for the return game next Saturday night at Central 'Y'. The Blue and White team was decidedly off-color last night, and if they expect to stay in the running for the provincial honors they will have to play the kind of game they are capable of playing.

With the exception of 'Jumbo' Burns, who collected 12 points for his team, the whole team was below form. Don Wood played a steady game on the defence but he lacked his customary scoring punch. Notwithstanding he dropped three pretty long shots which came at critical moments. Sullivan didn't hit his stride until the dying moments of the game, when he sank two baskets in quick succession. The Blue and White lads, cheered by these counters, carried the play into the enemy's territory, but failed to score.

The Lizies are a fast breaking team who are dangerous around the basket. Pearson and Eisen turned in stellar games for the winners, getting 13 and 11 points respectively. Both are extremely tricky with their deceptive pivoting and smart ball-handling. Starr, at centre for the Lizies, turned in his usual brilliant performance, while Sniderman and Mincovitch intercepted Varsity passes regularly and checked hard and closely.

'Jumbo' Burns opened the scoring for Varsity. Two baskets by Eisen and one by Pearson and Varsity called a two minute rest. The Lizies were working the ball in and were deadly in their shots. As play commenced again, Varsity's defence was wide open, allowing one man to break through for single baskets. Meanwhile, Burns was keeping the Blue team in the hunt with his accurate shooting. Varsity drew within three field goals of the Lizies, who made use of the rest period. At half time the score was 21-16 in favour of the visitors.

In the last period Lizies obtained a ten point lead before Varsity commenced to uncork the brand of basketball they can. Humphries, Wood and Sullivan scored but Pearson and Eisen responded and the final score was 36-29 for Elizabeth.

Elizabeth—Forwards, Eisen (11), Pearson (13); centre, Starr (7); guards, Sniderman (3), Mincovitch; spares, Abrams (2), Heller, Goldstein, Kaplan.

Varsity—Forwards, Sullivan (4), Burns (12); centre, Humphrey (4); guards, Wood (6); Dawson; spares, Vaughan, MacDonnell, Smith, Perkins (3).

DENTS BEAT PHARMACY 3-2 IN JENNINGS CUP PLAY-OFF

Game Was Close, Featured By Hard Checking and Attempted Free-for-all

Dents defeated Pharmacy in a Jennings Cup play-off yesterday afternoon by a score of 3 to 2.

The game was featured throughout by close checking on the part of both teams. On the play the losers appeared to have an edge. Only the good work of McCartney in the Dental nets preventing them getting a goal or two more.

Play was open in the first period. Dents netted the puck with about ten minutes to go, on a three-man rush.

The second period saw some stiff checking and both teams attempted some rather wild combination. Pharmacy gave McCartney several close calls. Several of his saves were spectacular. A little excitement developed when it seemed that a free-for-all was starting, but the referee bonched a man from each team and the rest settled down again.

In the last frame the game became strenuous with Pharmacy forcing the play into Dental territory. With fifteen minutes to go, Dents increased their lead when the puck was shoved between Cuthbert's feet from a scramble in front of the nets. In their attempts to score Pharmacy became a bit rough and another little melee occurred, with both teams taking part, but peace was when restored. Pharmacy scored a well earned goal soon after when Donaldson put one past McCartney on a combination play. They worked hard for the equalizer and finally scored when Dents were a man short. With 5 minutes to go both teams put on a spurt and gave the goal-keepers a busy time. Three minutes later Dents flipped the puck past Cuthbert and the game ended with them still in possession of their one-goal lead.

For the winners McCartney's fine goal-keeping featured Mahaffey, Conn and Dewar also played well. Donaldson and Williams showed well for Pharmacy.

Line-ups—

Dents—Goal, McCartney; defence, Whittaker and Waldon; centre, Mahaffey; wings, Conn and Dewar; alternates, Herron, Mutchmore and Adams.

Pharmacy—Goal, Cuthbert; defence, Srice and Beckett; centre, Donaldson; wings, Williams and Huffman; alternates, McCall, Quinlan and Thorburn.

MINNESOTA CLUB GIVES 'TOO DARING' DRAMA

Although condemned as "too daring" by faculty members, "La Dame aux Camelias", was presented last week by Le Cercle Francais, University of Minnesota French Society.

Members of the club selected the play despite protests from dons who thought the choice unsuitable. Declared the president of the club: "We do not believe that such charges can be intelligently sustained, and are going ahead with the production just the same."

Difficulty was experienced in securing extras not too naive in appearance, who would not seem out of place in the fourth-act gaming-table scene.

The Official Varsity Crest— Is made in various ways

Pin (only); Pin with year guard; Bar Pin; Split Shank Ring; Signet Ring, sapphire set; Seal Ring, raised crest, no stones; Seal Ring, sunken crest for sealing, no stones; Waldemar Drop (a tiny gold medallion for Waldemar watch chain).

The rings may be made in 14 kt. or 18 kt. White and Green Gold at slight additional cost if desired.

JR. S.P.S. DEFEAT U.C. IN FAST BASEBALL GAME

College Man Is In Great Demand For Certain Types Of Positions

In one of the best games of the intercollegiate indoor baseball schedule this year, Junior S.P.S. finally emerged victorious over Junior U.C. by 6-0.

The feature of the game was a real pitcher's battle between Davies of School and Sobel, Arts. In the five innings played, the former hung up 11 strikeouts while the latter fanned 8 men. In the first three innings each pitcher was nicked for only 2 hits. Both have a ball with plenty of speed and mowed the opposing batsmen down in quick order.

Arts came to life in the last inning and almost broke into the scoring column. When Sobel weakened School notched a few hits, and helped by errors in the U.C. infield, shovelled 6 runs to win the game.

Special Interview to 'The Varsity' On Free Speech by O. G. Bumflap

(By A. E. F. Allan)

Mr. O. G. Bumflap tapped his gold inlay with the butt of his nickel-plated pencil significantly while he smiled quizzically from behind his rimless spectacles across his glaming desk. "Mr. Bumflap," ventured the special interviewer of "The Varsity" timidly, "what is your opinion of free speech at the University?"

A trim, and doubtless efficient, secretary melted effectively behind the plate-glass doors.

The smile of the Director of the Department of Super-Official Propaganda became a shade more quizzical. "Hush! hush!" responded the Great Man suavely.

He inserted his justly-famed nickel-plated pencil in the north-east pocket of his vest with the air of a man who knows his rut and means to stick to it.

"Have you heard of our new course in Plain and Market Gardening?" he demanded. "It is designed completely to supersede the now obsolete course in Stone Rolling and Moss Gathering. At present . . ."

His eye lit on the special interviewer suspiciously.

"Take this down!" he ordered. Down it went.

Smoothly, eyeing a rare print of the door of University College, which adorned the off-wall. "At present there are only six student enrolled in this course, but we fully expect to see it increase to nine or ten in the next decade."

Awed, the special interviewer swallowed his north-west bridge. The Great Man twisted his impeccable watch-chain about a faultlessly manicured finger.

"The annual lectures on Insinuation and Issue-Laying," he breathed, "will be delivered this year by Professor Zachariah Zah of Zanzibar. This course is sponsored by the Sisterhood of Sainted Sinners. Admission is by fifty cents or pull."

The special interviewer coughed inoffensively. "You are the treasurer of this organization, are you not, Mr. Bumflap?" he suggested.

The Great Man glanced at his watch—an excellent, wafer-thin, fifteen-jewel, green gold creation. "At one o'clock we are giving a luncheon to the Chief of Police and the City Librarian," he murmured. "We are going to discuss the proposed extended course in Yiddish and Old High Lithuanian for Toronto policemen, as well as the suggestion that the book of Genesis be expurgated so as to be suitable for use by the W.C.T.U. and students in Commerce and Finance."

The special interviewer arose doubtfully. "This matter of free speech . . ."

"Hush! hush!" smiled the Great Man genially. "As a matter of fact, it is one of my pet theories."

He waved an airy signet-ring in the direction of the door.

Getting up, and seriously: "One must, of course, be very careful to whom one grants the right."

STUDENT GOV'TMENT LAWS QUEEN'S DEBATE SUBJECT

Much Mooted Topic Erupts Afresh On Kingston Campus

Student government has been so much in the limelight at Queen's university lately that a debate will shortly be held to discuss the question as to whether it is a success of failure. Laws of student government have it is charged, been broken time and again, especially by the freshmen. Supporters of student government claim that there is no such thing as student government but officers of the Alma Mater Society claim that discipline around the campus is much better for student government.

MODERN GIRLS DEFENDED IN DEBATE ON YOUTH

outlooks" but don't know just what to do about it. Mr. Dunn was familiar with John Milton and T. R. Loundes. Lionel Gelber was quite ready to speak. He tried hard to pun on Mr. Dunn's name, and finally succeeded in proving from the Carnegie Foundation report that in only three universities were undergraduates working seriously. He was on the negative.

When no one could be found to support the motion a learned justice of the class of '79 made masterly use of Cicero and the Bible to support the case of the rising generation. Ron Fredenberg had his lines in shape by this time and did his best to show that since youth was following the example of age, it was bound to be a failure too. Was life too easy for young men, he wondered?

But now came the treat of the evening. Dr. Slater was delightful. He admitted that this was a rotten time to be anything, especially a youth. As a boy he had had a good time and at the age of twenty-one knew what petting was. He rejoiced that he still remembered it. The Reverend Doctor was very Scotch and very proud of it.

After considering it "indecent for a man in his position to be so trite and ancient as to condemn a rising generation," he examined the question of women. "Your women of to-day are cautions. They shock their grandmothers into blue fits. Still they are very beautiful and very wonderful, but . . ." The doctor was perplexed. Still he did not think special public prayers necessary for her salvation, even though the modern girl was going to create a problem for the husbands of the future.

Professor Fay was on his feet as soon as the honourable guest retired. The house appreciated a brilliant effort to show that it was impossible to have confidence in a generation where, except for agriculture, in which there was no money, men must live as slaves of financial giants.

Roy Cadwell here defended us all. A large part of the house then departed.

And now it was Colonel MacFarlane's turn to entertain the audience. He did it well by contradicting Dr. Slater. The colonel also knew what hip-stick smelled like.

Mr. Bell, Mr. Saunders and Mr. Kennedy now rendered electrifying speeches. Two of them were elected. F. J. Moore, well known pastor of Hart House, did his best to be bitterly in favour of the motion. Somehow he seemed quite obviously insincere. Still his claim that Dr. Slater's remarks constituted "an oblique sermon like a Presbyterian prayer" was interesting.

No one else wanted to speak so the debate closed early.

FIRST OF LECTURE SERIES BY DR. SCLATER AT CHAPEL

"We don't imagine that wrong-doing matters in an ultimate sense as our fathers did and the old splendid gravity of thought and experience has come from us," said Dr. J. R. P. Sclater in Hart House Chapel yesterday in the first of a series of addresses which will continue through the Lenten season.

"We are slightly inclined to neglect the patent facts of experience because they interfere with the ease and joyousness of thinking. We are going to be judged and everyone must give an account of himself. Those who meditated on what Christ did and was, felt it natural to emphasize that moral estimation was sure to come; God would not be a God of love in a true sense, if He did not definitely judge and separate the good from the evil. We are being judged by our opportunities and daily experiences throughout our University life, in marriage, in parentage and finally in death. But we can come back to God for pardon and comfort."

A popular brand of U.S. "blind-fold" cigarettes came off only second best at Harvard, "breaking its string of victories," according to its ad. man.

WRITTEN EXAMINATIONS ARE INCENTIVE TO WORK

Ideas of Dons on Cramping And Examinations Favour Present Plan

"Cramping will have to be done throughout life," said Principal Wallace of University College, when interviewed by "The Varsity" as to the fairness of examinations as tests of the student's ability. "There are many occasions in life when we have to face a problem and all the knowledge gathered previously must be used in solving it. If the student came here for the sole purpose of gaining knowledge we would not need an examination, but he comes here to get credit for his work and expects the University to certify that he has learned something during the time that he has spent at college. To do this the university must set examinations."

Professor W. A. Irwin of the department of Oriental languages was of the same opinion. "Examinations are useful insofar as they are an incentive to the student to get up his work. To limit the chances of a student getting through by luck I would give a larger place to term work."

it down? All these semi-technical phrases give a common-place feeling a sense of inferiority, because of his neglected youth (as far as music is concerned). Why does the Critic of A. M. and D. shoot high-sounding phrases at us? Is there an upper dozen, a sort of "Top Twelve" whose musical erudition admits of their understanding the Critic's Hot Shots? "Varsity" wants to please the great number of Ordinary Guys here, doesn't it?

I feel an overwhelming desire to fire Slang at this pedantic Critic; but I might look sub-commonplace so I'll cry off now.

But can't something pretty simple be written about our concerts? Honestly, this is not the outburst of a moment's passion, but has been slowly forming since Fall. If the Critic would only truly express the Ordinary Person's opinion, I think I could pass over the high-falootin phrases, but frequently he fails to even say whether or not the performance has achieved its purpose, namely to cause oblivion. But I am afraid I'm laying myself open to argument here.

The musical critic is a big pain in the neck to the average undergrad,—that's what I mean.

Yours Sincerely,

Fluve, U.C., 371
(Perhaps the writer of this letter would prefer musical criticisms written in the excitable style of his last paragraph. If so, we are afraid he is in for a disappointment, as our critic is not usually reporting bag-pipe fests in Edinburgh.—Ed. Note.)

Dentistry held that there was nothing fundamentally wrong in principle with written examinations. "We believe the seminar plan should be further developed, in which case the final examination would have less significance than at present since a more intimate knowledge is gained of the individual student's progress under the seminar system."

Dr. T. R. Robinson of the department of Ethics, thought that examinations were a fair test. "With small tutorial classes examinations would be unnecessary as the ability of each student would be known by the teacher. As it is, with larger classes and the lecture system there is no substitute for examinations."

Emmanuel College Meets In Burwash Hall to Toast
Graduating Year

M. SELLERS CHAIRMAN

First Legitimate Child Of The Marriage of Victoria
And Knox

Emmanuel College had a gala time of feasting and speeches last night, when the professors and students met in Burwash Hall to bid a social adieu to 279. Morrison Sellers, President of 370, presided over the gathering of 62.

The toast to the King having been duly honoured, Walter Crow proposed the toast to the graduating year. Allan Ferry, President of 279, likened the graduating year to the bride-to-be, who when asked what hymn she would like sung at her wedding ceremony, replied, "No 64, please." That number happened to be, "I know not what awaits me, heaven kindly veils my eyes." Having suffered many things from many professors for seven years, the graduating year was now going out. (If the same good luck followed them through the coming exams) to suffer more at the hands of Settlement Committees, Ladies Aids, and Mothers' Meetings. He declared the present graduating year to be the first legitimate child of the marriage of Victoria and Knox.

Wm. Taylor, proposed the toast to the College. He declared that his mind was like Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, at the very thought of the toast. Emmanuel had a long history trailing toward us in divergent lines but now uniting. It may be some time before Emmanuel had a dress to put on, for of course it was at present naked, being without a building.

Professor Johnson very suitably replied to the toast. A college, he declared, was an elusive something, an ethereal spirit of which the students must be taken into account, and the professors also.

Charles Krug, 279, toasted the Faculty members, in a neat speech. To propose a toast to the staff with examinations just ahead is like singing one's own requiem mass. The staff of Emmanuel have ever been the intimate friends of the students.

Professor John Dow responded to this toast, and declared that he sometimes wondered why he was on the staff, because he felt so much like one of the students himself.

After the toasts, which were interspersed with a musical programme, Professor John Line, S.T.D., addressed the graduating year in a very learned address. Dr. Kilpatrick, Professor Emeritus, spoke also.

The Burskell University Extension Department is offering a course in sanitation and hygiene for barbers.

KNOX COLLEGE HAS NO USE FOR SLATES

Undergraduates Tear Up List
Of Trinity Nominees
For Hart House

Knox College proved it for once had no use for official college slates in the coming Hart House elections, when by common consent, the poster prepared by the official candidates of Trinity College, was torn into shreds less than two hours after it had been placed in the Knox College halls.

It is explained that it has long been the custom for some of the smaller faculties to prepare these posters with the names of their candidates on them and to distribute them around the halls of other small colleges in the hope of obtaining badly needed support.

By their action to-day it is thought that some at least of the Knox undergraduates intend to protest against this system of bartering votes.

IBSEN HAD LOVE AFFAIRS AT SIXTY

Ranks With Shakespeare And Sophocles as Regards
Dramatic Ability

DRAMATIC RADICAL

"At sixty-one he carried on love affairs and these are thought to have influenced his writing," said Professor Gilbert Norwood in his address on Henrik Ibsen, in University College yesterday afternoon.

Ibsen ranks equally with Shakespeare and Sophocles as regards his dramatic ability, said the speaker.

Brand was an idealist and sacrificed even his wife and children for his ideals. The sequel to Brand, Peer Gynt, is exactly the opposite—it is fantastic. In this play Ibsen's poetical powers are at their height.

Ibsen might be considered a dramatic radical. He refused to stick to the old codes, simply because they were codes, and instead adopted a technique of his own.

In his transcendental plays Ibsen makes his characters bubble over with life and shows an insight into life which surpasses most other dramatists.

Ibsen's most famous sentence is said to be "the younger generation is knocking at the door." To-day we see how true this saying is.

Henrik Ibsen was born on March 20, 1828, at Skien. He spent the first part of his life as a druggists' apprentice. Later he went to Christiana with a view to entering university, but was attracted to politics and literature. In 1850 he wrote his first play Catilina and in 1851 he became director of the theatre at Bergen.

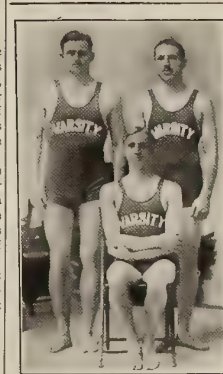

He married in 1856 and a year later was made director of the theatre at Christiania. It was here that a number of his successful plays were produced.

Up For The Game
Saturday Night

HAVE SIX-GOAL LEAD

When the Varsity Water Polo team takes to the water against McGill in Montreal Saturday night, they will carry with them a six-goal lead as a result of the defeat suffered by McGill at Hart House two weeks ago.

The team leaves Friday morning in order to hold a short practice in the Montreal tank which differs greatly from our Hart House Pool. The team this year is strong and the practice league in the Interfaculty and City League series is showing its worth in the team play. The personnel of the team is as follows:—

Eddie, Sinclair, Johnnie Goss, Leo Latchford, Harvey Graham, George "Silver" Spence, Ross Poyntz, "Army" Armstrong, Art Middleboro, "Lornie" Bullen, Fran Lorengren, (coach).

With a strong team like this, the chances for a McGill championship look rather slim, but the Toronto boys are out to average some scars, inflicted by defeat in former years.

FRENCH SOCIETY MEETS

Addressed on Points of Interest

In Paris

Notre meilleur ami à Paris, c'est le Métro." Such was the idea expressed by Mr. Freeman at the meeting of the U.C. French Society last evening. Mr. Freeman advised all Canadian students to travel on this very interesting railway. The charge is but four cents and takes one to any part of the city. At each station there is a map and a guide to direct the lost traveller. A recitation contest followed this address, the winners of which were Miss Elmule and Miss Pless. A piano solo by Mr. Connor was enjoyed by everyone present. A sing-song and refreshments followed by the singing of the "Marseillaise" brought the evening to a successful close.

Quarter of a Day Grilling Is Too Much For Tired Men

ONE MAN IS OVERCOME

Only One of Three Detailed Examining Officers
Present

Drilling for a quarter of a day last Saturday was too much of a good thing in the opinion of those who tried their C.O.T.C. Certificate "A" practical test at that time. Parade was called for 1.15 p.m. at the University Avenue Armouries. It started shortly after that time, and from then until after eight o'clock the men were on their feet continuously. At least, with the exception of two extremely short breaks, when there was not even time to smoke a cigarette, and once, near the end when one man was overcome with fatigue, the grilling was continuous.

By five o'clock, those who had not been dismissed were, to say the least, "fed up," and from then on things went from bad to worse. Some of the boys had had to rush down without lunch, and it may easily be conjectured what they felt like when dinner time came and went. The most unfortunate part was when one man became overcome, and had to be taken to the medical room, for attention.

The length of time it took may possibly be accounted for by the fact that only one of the three examining officers detailed was present for the majority of the time. It has since been learned, however, that the Major in charge, detailed from the R.C.R.'s, was "up on the mat" for his conduct of the test.

STUDENTS FACE CHARGES FOR SELLING LIQUOR

Campus Moguls Determined To Stamp Out Volstead
Infractions

Two University of Minnesota students were arraigned before a Minneapolis magistrate, facing charges of selling liquor. The students were named in indictments returned by the grand jury as a result of vice and gambling testimony given by the mogul of the local law enforcement association. The university authorities themselves instituted the investigation, following reports that liquor was being sold to students on the campus.

"We are going to put a stop to the sale of liquor on the campus," iterated E. E. Nicholson, dean of student affairs. "The University authorities are determined to stamp out this practice and, if necessary, we shall deal very hard with everyone we find selling or giving liquor at the University."

ROCKY FELLERS HEAR G. BATEMAN SPEAK

Sketches Development of Nickel Mining At Sudbury
From 1883

BILLION DOLLAR CONCERN

A history of the world's only billion dollar mining concern was the subject on which Mr. George Bateman spoke at the annual banquet of the Rocky Fellers Association held last evening in the Graduates' Dining Room of Hart House.

The speaker is secretary of the Ontario Mining Institute and has had a long connection with the mining industry in Canada. He sketched the development of nickel mining at Sudbury from the first discovery in 1856. He said that little had been done until the building of the C.P.R. in 1883. At this time rich copper ore was discovered and mining started on a considerable scale. Difficulty was experienced in refining the copper due to the high nickel content. A Scotch engineer, Col. Thompson, discovered a better process and further progress was made. Until this time though, there was very small demand for nickel and mining was carried on for the copper alone.

About 1890 the United States Navy discovered the value of nickel steel in armor plating. The demand for nickel at once increased and the International Nickel Company was founded. Many difficulties had to be overcome by the young Company, but by the time of the war it was well established.

After the war a heavy slump set in, but was overcome by successful research for new uses of the metal.

In 1928 a shaft abandoned 40 years previously was reopened and has proved of tremendous value. It is upon the prospects of this new shaft that the recent great boom has been founded.

Mr. Derry then moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Bateman for his address. A discussion followed during which several of the guests spoke. Among these were Dr. Coleman, Professor McLean, Dr. Burrows, Messrs. Rogers, Rickaby and Hopkins.

The president, Mr. Perry, then brought a very successful evening to its close.

VARSIY AND QUEEN'S CANCEL FRIDAY GAME IN SENIOR SCHEDULE

Both Teams Will Meet Later In Group Play-Off Games
For Cup

HARLEY IS RECOVERING

Home and Home Games To Be Played, Goals on Round
Will Count

Following a special meeting of the senior O.H.A. group executives, the game between Varsity and Queen's, scheduled for to-night at the Varsity Arena, has been cancelled. Varsity has the first place clinched and Queen's the second, so this game would mean nothing as far as the standing is concerned.

The senior O.H.A. schedule has been a long, hard grind, and both teams will have a welcome respite before the play-off games which will take place next week. Seeing that these two teams are in the play-offs, an encounter between the two just previous to the games deciding the group would doubtless take some edge off the latter. While the request for cancellation came from the Tricolour, the Blue and White were of the same opinion. Mel Harley, right winger, is recovering from the flu and the rest will do the whole team good.

The first game will be played in Kingston Tuesday night and the return game on Friday at the Varsity Arena, goals on the round to count.

Student and season's tickets will be honoured for this game although an O.H.A. play-off. Further particulars will follow in Monday's issue.

Le Coin Français

Louis XIII était jaloux du cardinal de Richelieu tout en ne pouvant se passer de ses services. Dans un bal qu'on donnait à la cour, le roi qui s'ennuyait voulut se retirer au moment même où le cardinal se retirait également.

Tout le monde se rangeait pour laisser passer ce ministre, et le roi put se rendre compte qu'on rendait beaucoup plus de respect à ce dernier qu'à lui-même. Richelieu ignorait que le roi le suivait, mais voyant s'avancer quelques pages, il le devina et se rangea de côté pour le laisser passer. Le roi de son côté s'arrêta et lui dit:—
—Pourquoi ne passez-vous pas, monseigneur le cardinal, n'êtes-vous pas le maître?

Le sens de cette réflexion n'échappa pas à Richelieu. Il prit un flambeau des mains d'un page et, marchant devant le roi, lui dit:

—Sire, je ne puis passer devant votre Majesté qu'en faisant les fonctions du plus humble de ses serviteurs.

Un de nos lecteurs nous a soumis ce poème.

Quand je suis
Dans la rue
On me dit,
"Qu'avez-vous?"
Parce que
Je ne peux
Jamais cesser sauter.
Toujours c'est comme ça
Je suis fatigué hélas!
Mais que fait-on si on a,
Une jambe qui ne saute plus.
Seulement quand vous Sautiez?

—S. Goode.

HUMOUR

(Contributed)

"A Canadian is a person who can see the humour in both 'Punch' and 'Life.'" This generalism may contain a certain amount of truth; for the true born Englishman promptly exclaims "Life! A vulgar comic strip. I don't consider that it's even funny." The American on the other hand, will remark, "The humour in Punch is ponderous and heavy. It never amuses me."

At any rate, there are two classes of jokes—the old ones we have heard, and the old ones that we haven't heard—all are old.

Be that as it may, the career of a humourist is the most uncertain of all walks of life. It is impossible to predict the type of humour which will tickle the risibility of the public. A sally or a bon mot which charms or amuses us in the wee sma' hours assumes triteness and banality in cold print next morning.

Nor can we depend upon any two opinions agreeing that a certain anecdote is humorous. It depends altogether too much upon experience, temperament, outlook or individual mood.

Of all Bernard Shaw's telling thrusts, a Shavian enthusiast states that, on first hearing, the line that amused him most was the one in St. Joan, "Scratch an Englishman deep enough and you will find a Protestant". It is a glorious anachronism. It may have fitted in with the current experience of the hearer and proved it. Most of us would have dismissed it with the shrug, "Not even funny".

Everyone has probably their own preconceived notions as to humour. It must be original; it must be subtle; it must be kindly.

Following are two excerpts, one from Punch and another from a contemporary issue of Life. Comparison of the two will indicate how differently the two publications treat their humour. "It is recalled that Wagner had a horror of noise. Yet he didn't seem to mind Wagner." (Punch). "I'm coming down with the flu," said the house-wrecker's assistant as he started descending from the roof." The one a thrust. The other a clever play on words. Both humorous.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

In a recent editorial we deplored the system of Slate voting. To-day we publish a letter, which, if founded on fact, shows another angle of the same malpractice. Group votings are tactics employed by small American towns, of the "Ward-Boss" variety. Such manoeuvres have no place in University elections. Suppress the Slate spirit.

CORRESPONDENCE

Crude Tactics

February 28th, 1929
Editor, "The Varsity",
Dear Sir:—

An incident occurred Wednesday evening in connection with the Debates Committee election which for sheer crudity surpasses anything in my experience in small-time politics.

After Dr. Slater had resumed his seat at 9.30, at least twenty-five men entered, of whom half were definitely recognized as belonging to one 'group'. At 9.35, when the next Demos-thenes was out at the bell, the whole twenty-five men left, having technically made themselves eligible to vote! The success of their effort was apparent when the three candidates whom they were sponsoring were declared elected.

Please understand, Sir, that I was in no way connected with any other candidates; so have no ulterior motive in voicing this criticism.

To preclude repetition of such incidents, I would suggest that the elections be conducted along stricter lines.—that the electors be required to be in attendance at a certain time (8.30 perhaps), and not allowed to vote until 9.30 or 10 o'clock. Rather than undergo the penalty of listening to such a debate (except for Dr. Slater and Professor Fay) I feel sure such people would eliminate themselves at an early hour.

Sincerely hoping that some change will be made for next year's election, I am,

Yours very truly,
Observer.

WESTERN QUINTET PLAY BLUE AND WHITE TO-MORROW NIGHT

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The coming O.H.A. senior play-offs between Varsity and Queen's should furnish some real hockey. In three games played this season, Varsity have defeated the Tricolour here and in Kingston and dropped their first game with the Queen's outfit down in the Limestone City. On the stuff already shown by the two squads, Varsity are called to take the Red, Yellow and Blue, but are sure to meet strenuous opposition. The Queen's sextet are a fast skating bunch, but have failed to combine on the forward line. The Kingston defence has showed up better on the attack than in blocking the opposition and Quinn in the nets, has had plenty of work. The Queen's net-man will need to be at the top of his form if he hopes to keep Harley, McMullen, Paul and Co. from running up a good average.

The Blue and White water polo team are taking a six-goal lead into Montreal where they will play McGill to-morrow night in the return game for the Intercollegiate Water Polo Championship. Coach Lorenzen's men should not only hold this lead but are expected to beat the Red and White right in the erstwhile American Mecca.

The fast-travelling Blue basketballers are favoured to defeat Western here to-morrow night and retain the Intercollegiate championship. Western recently beat the strong Assumption team, indicating that the Purple and White will be a dangerous team.

The good showing of the Blue and White quintet this season is greatly due to the smooth-working plays that McCutcheon's men have developed. In this connection the fine all-round work of Ray Beaton deserves mention. Beaton, while not a flashy player, is one of the most valuable men on the line-up and has played a considerable part in the Varsity victories.

The Varsity intermediate hockey team will take on O.A.C. in an important game at the Varsity Arena to-morrow afternoon at 2 p.m. If the Blue win this game they can tie up the group by defeating Western in London next week, provided the Londoners win their other game.

FORESTRY DEFEATS EMMAUEL DECISIVELY

Forestry Showed Improvement Over Their Previous Games

Forestry made a clean sweep of their group by winning their final game from Emmanuel on Thursday by the overwhelming score of 43-3. Forestry showed improvement over their previous exhibitions, and are in fine shape to enter the first round of the eliminations.

Forestry—Simpson, Leslie, Raeburn, Start, Grey, Mulloy.
Emmanuel—Wishart, Thompson, Snell, Beacon, Shepley, Homs.

GAMES WITH WESTERN IMPORTANT FIXTURES

Both Senior and Intermediate Quintets Play Londoners To-Morrow

DECIDE VARSITY'S CHANCE

Saturday night will be the last time basketball fans will have an opportunity of seeing Varsity senior and intermediate quintettes in action. Western University will provide the opposition in both games and a pair of wins is absolutely necessary for the Blue and White. Should Western seniors produce a win, Varsity will be tied with McGill for the intercollegiate honours. A Blue victory will give them the championship for two years in a row. On paper, Varsity should triumph, but Western have steadily improved their game and represent a real threat to the McCutcheon's championship aspirations.

The intermediates are tied with Western for first place and they will have to be up to their best form to down the team from London. Although Varsity defeated Western in the Forest City, the Londoners have won from every other team in the circuit.

To-morrow night's fixture will be the last time veteran U. of T. stars like Mitchell, Currie, Murray and Johnston will be playing for their Alma Mater. Currie and Mitchell have been on Varsity teams throughout their college careers, and their places will be hard to fill. Murray, though only here for one year, is conceded to be one of the best guards who ever donned a Blue uniform. Beaton, Newman, Sakler and Davey, the younger members of the squad, have been going great guns, but they will have to excel themselves to rob the veterans of their glory. George O'Leary has been kept out of the league games because of fractures in both arms which he incurred during the Christmas truce.

JR. DENTS WIN GROUP DEFEATING WYCLIFFE

Game Called in Fifth Inning With Score Standing 8 to 1

BASE STEALING A FEATURE

Junior Dents clinched their group yesterday afternoon when they easily defeated Wycliffe in an Interfaculty baseball game by 8 to 1. The real score was 16 to 3 but the game was called before the fifth inning was over because of an agreement to stop at 5 o'clock. In this inning Dents scored 8 runs with the side not yet retired.

Dents sewed up the game in the first inning when they scored four runs. They supported Mason, their pitcher, in fine style, and backed this up with heavy hitting in every inning. Hunt pitched a good game for Wycliffe, but his support was weak. Both pitchers retired many batters by the strike-out route, 3 Wycliffe men succumbing in the first inning.

A feature of the game was the large number of players who stole home, both teams taking many chances this way.

Campbell with four safeties, and Mitchell with 3, were the heavy hitters for Dents. Langhorn at second, stood out with his clever fielding.

Wycliffe—Draper, Newby, Langhorn, Morrissey, Cannon, Boone, Hunt, Wier.

Dents—Campbell, Golding, Armstrong, Mason, Mitchell, Conn, Backus, Bookman, Purdy.

INTERCOLLEGIATE BASKETBALL SERIES

Women of Varsity, Queen's, McGill and Western To Decide Title

The Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Championship series opens at Montreal to-night. Varsity, McGill, Queen's and Western are all competing in what promises to be an evenly contested series.

There will be two games on Friday and two on Saturday. On the latter day the two winners of Friday's games will play off for the championship, and the two losers will dispute a "consolation".

The Blue and White outfit is well-balanced and has shown good form in recent practices. The chances for the championship coming to Varsity are very good but Western will likely furnish the most serious opposition.

ANNUAL MUSICAL EVENING TREAT AT WYCLIFFE

The Annual Musical Evening of the Wycliffe College Literary Society was held last evening in the College Hall. A program of excellent merit was presented by the Gelsin Trio, Miss D. Walker, soprano, and Miss Grace Johns, contralto. The numbers were all enthusiastically received and included Listz's "Dreams of Love", Londonderry Air, Schubert's "Ave Maria", and a musical sketch "Humoresque", by Alford, which proved most effective.

The hostesses of the evening were Miss Shirley Denison, Mrs. W. E. Taylor, Mrs. B. W. Horan and Mrs. W. Mercer-Wilson. A large audience filled the Hall to capacity and showed great appreciation for the selections rendered. The thanks of the Society were tendered to Mr. C. F. McRitchie for his untiring devotion in making the evening one of the best in its history.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION ELECTS REPRESENTATIVES

Election Takes Place Thursday
 In Upstairs Lecture Room,
 Hart House

The Electoral Meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect Student representatives to the Directorate for 1929-30 will be held on Thursday, March 14th, 1929, at 4.15 p.m. in the Lecture Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article IX, Sec. 4) each College and Athletic Club is entitled to send representatives to that meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto or one of the affiliated colleges, who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures and who have paid the annual fee required (By-Law 1).

A Student to be elected to the Directorate must at the time of his nomination be in the second, or a higher year of his course at the University, but not in the final year. The nomination must be made in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association in good standing and filed with the Secretary of the Association at least five days prior to the election (i.e., not later than 1 p.m., SATURDAY, MARCH 9th). Forms can be obtained at the office of the Association.

STUDENTS' COUNCIL OF ST. MICHAEL'S CENSURES M'NAMARA

Students Unwilling To Use Alleged Statements Of Conversation

DO NOT DISCREDIT BURNS

Majority of the Original Petitioners Have Signed Letter

The Students' Council of St. Michael's College at a meeting held Saturday, March 2, 1929, unanimously agreed to a motion censuring Mr. F. J. McNamara, III, year St. Michael's on the following grounds:—

(1) That he obtained the signatures to a petition addressed to Mr. Russell Morin, by misrepresenting the facts of the case, viz: That the alleged statements of Mr. A. Gordon Burns, were made in an official capacity rather than in a conversation.

(2) That he abused the petition by causing it to be published in an evening paper before being presented to the Joint Executive.

(3) That he issued an unwarranted statement to a downtown newspaper in asserting that the usual consent of "Varsity" did not reach St. Michael's College on Friday, Feb. 15th, which statement is unfounded.

As evidence of the fact that St. Michael's students are unwilling to use statements alleged to have been made in a conversation the following letter to Mr. Russell Morin was signed by a majority of the signers of the original petition:

"The students of St. Michael's College, including the majority of those who are said to have signed a petition to discredit Mr. A. G. Burns for statements he is alleged to have made in a conversation."

Varsity Meets Queen's in First
O.H.A. Final Game

FIVE REGULARS WITH TEAM

To-morrow night at Kingston, Varsity's Senior hockey team engages Queen's in the first of the play-off games to decide the Senior O.H.A. title and the possession of the John Ross Robertson Challenge Cup. The Blue and White are favored to win the title but the Tricolour are a fast-skating aggregation who will give "Red" Porter's boys a real argument all the way. Varsity are not likely to enter the game over-confident, bearing in mind the way in which Kitchen-er, the second placers last year, came from behind to defeat them in the play-downs.

Of last year's group of six there are five regulars still with the team. Murray Snyder in goal, Captain Harry Whitehead on the defence, and the regular forward line of Harley, Stewart and McMullen. Of the newcomers, Bruce Paul has been a standout and has added a very considerable scoring punch to the team. "The long and the short of it" from Newmarket, Marshall and Murray, make very capable alternates.

Mr. A. G. Burns Denies Making Statement as Quoted by Press

Despite the fact that an affidavit is said to be in the hands of Toronto students to the effect that Mr. A. Gordon Burns, Secretary of the Joint Executive, referred to L. J. Ryan, erstwhile Editor of "The Varsity" as a — Irish Catholic, while at McGill University last fall, Mr. Burns is firm in denying the allegation. When interviewed by the press, Mr. Burns stated that while naturally not remembering word for word the conversation which lasted only about five minutes, he is certain that he used no such terms in referring to Mr. Ryan, whom at that time he hardly knew.

The matter was brought to public attention when sixty-one students, most of whom are undergraduates at St. Michael's College, forwarded a signed letter to R. H. Morin, St. Michael's representative on the joint executive, in which they protested being forced to pay part of the salary to a man who, "in his official capacity expressed sentiments derogatory to the Catholic students of the University, and has been governed by prejudice in the administration of the office which he holds."

F. J. MacNamara, St. Michael's representative on the Hall Committee, issued the following statement:

"A week ago I was feeling well stirred up by the coupling of a mass of gin bottles with the Catholic ceremony of High Mass, which appeared in a back page feature of the Varsity on Friday, February 15.

"It is significant that on the day that this appeared, the usual consent of the Varsity did not reach St. Michael's and that the supposed author was three days later appointed editor-in-chief of the new Varsity."

"The Synagogue and The Intellectual" Subject of Address by Rabbi Mishkin

Intellectual and Religious Alike

EVERYONE THINKS

The University of Toronto Menorah Society held a successful meeting at the Holy Blossom Chambers Sunday night. The guest of the Society was Rabbi Mishkin of Wilmington, Del., one of a group of speakers annually sent out by the Intercollegiate Menorah.

The Rabbi speaking on the topic, "The Synagogue and The Intellectual," emphasized the fact that an intellectual is not stigmatized by the fact that he thinks. Everyone thinks to a more or less degree but it is the channels of thought one uses that makes the intellectual.

The intellectual is the one who regards life and experience with the aspect of eternity, that there is a history to himself and every fact. He is the skeptic who is interested in all things human.

The Rabbi showed that the true religious individual is the one who, like the intellectual, looks upon life with the thought of eternity.

LATIN AND GREEK USELESS

"By all means teach your young people about Canada; its resources both economic and physical, instead of devoting one-fifth of their time to the gaining of a perfectly useless knowledge of Latin and Greek. Unless a young country bears this truth in mind it is in the way of having a very unhappy population," stated Dr. Griffith Taylor in the course of his lecture on "Australia," delivered before the Royal Canadian Institute in Convocation Hall on Saturday evening.

Professor Taylor is now Professor of Geography in the University of Chicago, and for his assistance in Antarctic Expeditions, he has been awarded the King's Medal for Polar Research.

Australia is a new land, asserted Professor Taylor, and as such needs the aid of geographers to bring into full development, his latest potentialities. (Continued on page 4)

WILL CONTINUE STUDIES

The University staff is about to be deprived of the services of Dr. James Brebner, who has occupied the position of registrar for thirty-six years. Dr. Brebner, who assumed the duties of his office in 1893, has ever since been the official guardian of the students, diligently enforcing the various laws and regulations of the University. In addition to his other numerous tasks, he has placed his signature upon all academic reports.

Mr. Brebner plans to devote his leisure time to his studies, in which he has always been deeply interested. It is expected that Mr. A. B. Fennell, who is at present assistant-registrar, will in the near future fill his position.

Members of the sixth year in Medicine held their final class function on Saturday evening, when the Graduation Banquet was held. The lady members of the year were well represented.

The Medical Athletic Stick was presented to R. M. (Mo) Mitchell. Dr. W. Eason Brown, the Honorary President of the Medical Athletic Society in making the presentation address, said that he knew of no worthier recipient. Professor W. B. Hendry, who made the presentation mentioned the fact that this year's winner of the Athletic Stick is a three letter man and has won his "T" no fewer than thirty-three times.

Vic Railton, the president of the class, was Toastmaster. The Toast to the Faculty was proposed by O. L. Stanton. He commented on the excellent spirit, good will and cordiality. (Continued on page 4)

ALLROUND GOOD PLAY HOLDS CHAMPIONSHIP FOR VARSITY TEAM

One of the Most Thrilling Contests of The Year

UNSELFISH PASSING WINS

Good Co-Operation From Whole
Blue And White
Team

Varsity retains the intercollegiate basketball title! With tremendous bursts of speed, sensational dribbling and pivoting, and superb marksmanship, the University of Toronto defeated Western at Hart House, Saturday night, 33-26, in one of the most thrilling contests of the year. Right from the start, both teams played at top speed, and the terrific pace was sustained throughout the entire forty minutes of play.

Varsity worked the ball into the corners and unselfishly passed to the man coming in fast at centre. This system was executed with machine-like regularity and netted the Blue five many baskets. Western appeared to have no difficulty in getting a shot away from the corners but they failed to work the ball out. Failing to alter Varsity's stone-wall defence, they resorted to long range shooting at which they had uncanny success.

The Blue regular forward line, composed of Mitchell, Beaton, and Newman at centre, combined smoothly. It would be unfair to say that one excelled the others for each played unselfishly and brilliantly. Newman, however, ranked first in the scoring column, collecting nine points. It was Johnny Murray, the big boy on the Varsity defence, playing his last game for the Blue and White, who turned in a stellar exhibition. His ball-handling was a treat to watch as he controlled the spheroid above the reach of the others and gathered in the rebounds. Revealing a speed that one would hardly expect from a player of his stature, Murray dashed in for two pretty baskets, proving that he was not only one of the finest defencemen who ever wore the Blue and White but also a dangerous shot.

U.C. GRADUATE OF '03

The death occurred on Thursday of Frank P. Megan, a member of the Senate. Mr. Megan graduated with honours in Classics from U.C. in 1903. Mr. Megan was the most recent appointee to the Senate.

Mr. W. J. Dunlap, director of the Department of University Extension, speaking of Mr. Megan said, "Mr. Megan was an example of the University graduate who makes a great success of business. Yet he was never so absorbed in business that he had not time for University interests."

"He was always a great friend of his Alma Mater, ready to assist on committees, ready to give advice or to render service—and always cheerful, genial, and cordial. In his passing the University of Toronto has lost a staunch friend."

MUSIC OF GYPSIES INTERESTING TOPIC

Dr. Walter Starkie Gave Interesting Lecture in Trinity College Library

TRACES GYPSY HISTORY

The library of Trinity College was the scene last Saturday afternoon at 3.30 p.m. of an intensely fascinating and unusual lecture on "Gypsies and their music", given by Dr. Walter Starkie. He opened his talk by laying considerable stress upon the inextinguishable and exotic rhythm possessed by gypsy music.

"There are many theories," he continued, "upon the origin and development of gypsies. The most likely one is that maintained by a well-known German scholar who believes that they go back to a sect in Phrygia which ultimately came into the Byzantine empire. One tribe became dislocated and began to migrate, becoming nomadic; of this tribe one lot came into Europe and the other through Armenia into Persia. In Macedonia the gypsies are settled down and are a very interesting type as far as folk lore is concerned. Hungary, too, is a great home for these people because the Magyar nobles were kind to them and employed them as court musicians. The gypsies of Spain, however, are perhaps of the greatest interest of all. At this juncture the speaker played two traditional Irish airs on the violin—one a touching selection with a slow melancholy rhythm, and the second a sprightly little folk dance.

Dr. Starkie dwelt at considerable length on the type of gypsy-music common in Spain, interspersing his remarks with exemplary selections on the violin, an instrument over which he has complete control. His execution was admirable, and it would be difficult indeed to imagine a person in the large audience of four hundred who was not appreciably moved by the inspiring lecture.

"Drama and the University", is the subject of a lecture delivered at McGill by Dr. George Pierce Baker, professor of History and Technique of the Drama, at Yale.

After Hard Game Varsity Takes Bronze Baby From Western

EXCELLENT TEAM-WORK

Close Game in First Half, But
A Walkover in Second

Staging a brilliant attack in the last half of Saturday's game at Montreal, the Varsity Women's Senior Intercollegiate basketball sextette won the intercollegiate title by defeating Western 52-19.

As a result of their 48-25 victory over Queen's Friday night, the Blue had qualified to meet Western, conquerors of McGill, and possessors of the famous "Bronze Baby", emblematic of the cage championship.

The title game was by far the best of the series and left no doubt as to the Blue's superiority over the three other teams.

It is extremely difficult to name any outstanding player in a game in which individuality yielded so much to team interest. Eleanor Sedgewick with 22 points and Louise Crouch with 16, led the scorers, but a large number of these tallies were due to the good work of Wilma Hazlett, the Blue captain. The latter turned in an exceedingly fine game, her pivoting and passing being of the highest order.

In the first half of the contest, both teams seemed evenly matched and when the whistle blew to close the period, Varsity was leading by only a small margin. In the second half the Blue solved their opponents style of play and opened up a fast passing attack, occasional long passes being directly converted into baskets. Western were unable to successfully break up the Blue combination and the game soon turned into a walkover. Before a halt was called Varsity had chalked up 52 points to Western's 19.

The teams:—
Varsity—Wilma Hazlett (8), Eleanor Sedgewick (22), Louise Crouch (16), Betty Bethons, Dorothy Kerr, Honour Tett, Beatrice Symons (6).
Western—Jessie Walker (5), Helen McCormick, Grace Rath (7), Arleen Hallett (7), Helen O'Neil, Doris Padon, Margaret Turner.

EXIT JOHANNES INEPTUS

On Friday and Saturday of last week, the downtown press carried the story of certain accusations which had been made by sixty one students of a college in this University. While in the main these charges do not concern this paper as such, a certain incident, which involves very seriously our present policy, was given to the public in a form which calls loudly for explanation. Feeling, therefore, that a statement is due the undergraduates of this University, we publish, against our general policy, the following explanation:

Over a week ago there appeared in this paper a spasm in the form of a feature story from the pen of Johannes Ineptus, (the first opus of this imaginary person to be released on the not very unsuspecting world). Mr. Ineptus, who is not very bright, was sent to interview an authority on the then new theory of Einstein. The result was an article in which, as a correspondent so aptly put it, nonsense was "carried to the point of genius". In this "article" something sacred to at least two great religious bodies was mentioned in the same sentence with something which is far from sacred to anybody. Apologies for this bit of thoughtlessness were made, both verbally and through the columns of the press. Assurance was given us that these apologies were accepted. Evidently, however, the acceptance was only temporary.

Further capital has been made of the fact that on the day the above story appeared, the usual quota of "Varsities" were not delivered to the college concerned.—The net of circumstantial evidence tightens about us). On investigating, however, it was found that while passing the residence connected with this college, our delivery boy was accosted by a group of students, and asked to leave the papers at the residence, therefore saving the latter from walking over to the college to get their papers. Anxious to oblige, the boy left his burden at the place asked, and has continued to do so until last Friday. These are facts which may be substantiated by enquiry.

The circumstances which force us to the above explanation are to be deeply regretted. They furnish a wonderful example of how, when viewed in an unfavourable light, the least little incidents may assume significant proportions. No one more regrets the affair than Johannes Ineptus, who, since the publication of his first world rocking article, has been given a one-way ticket to Northern Siberia, where he will make a practical investigation of the rumour that one may sojourn for months in these wildernesses without returning or communicating with civilization.

C.O.T.C. EXAMS

With regard to the article concerning the C.O.T.C. examinations which appeared in Friday's issue, a few words may be in order. Articles appeared in The Mail and Empire, and in the Telegram, relative to this matter. The Telegram evidently takes the stand that the argument of those who took the examination is not based on fact. Last year approximately 125 men went through the examination in two hours and fifteen minutes. This year it took over five hours. Part of this time might have been caused by the depletion of the number of examining officers, but certainly it should not have taken as long as it did. At any rate, provision should have been made for Lieut. Hartley, who was incapable of attending.

In all fairness it must be admitted that the examination was as fair as it could well have been. Major Grant-Suttie gave the candidates every possible chance. But it must be remembered that the men were green. They were not trained soldiers. Their work consists of poring over books, and their drill does not take up more than two or three hours a week. It is hardly conceivable that men labouring under these conditions could compete in endurance with men who are drilling regularly two to four hours every day. And yet General Bell admits that even trained soldiers succumb to the strain of a prolonged parade!

If difference of marking accounts to a lack of help, the necessity of a regular form of test and marking is apparent. The written tests are set at a definite time limit. Why should each man not be given a definite time limit for his practical work, instead of holding up the whole squad because one or two men cannot think fast enough? This measure would eliminate one great cause of irregular marking, and would also tend to promote greater proficiency among the candidates.

Gen. Bell's statement that the man who was overcome was not left alone is true. As far as we have been able to find out, there was someone in attendance all the time until he was taken home in the taxi. This does not, however, get over the fact that he was overcome, and that the rest were reduced to a state of mental and physical exhaustion, which in a cadet examination should never have occurred.

The situation is extraordinary. The examination, as an examination, was fair in as much as it was thoroughly and impartially executed, and each candidate was given every chance. It was too prolonged because of the inadequate staff, because as compared with previous examinations, it was, if anything, too thorough. It was too severe because of lack of foresight in taking into account the physical condition of the men as compared with that of trained soldiers and on account of the lack of adequate intermissions. It must be borne in mind that no one can in any way be attached to the Headquarters of the local contingent of the C.O.T.C., as they have nothing whatever to do with the examinations. It is only to be hoped that proper steps will be taken to insure that a repetition of this unfortunate circumstance will not occur again.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—
I feel I must protest against the misrepresentation of Professor Norwood's lecture on Ibsen which appears on your front page to-day. I use the word misrepresentation advisedly, for I do not think that any amount of ignorance or inexperience could account for it.

Your title, "Ibsen had love affairs at sixty", does indeed catch the eye, as no doubt it was intended to do; that it is untrue is perhaps of little account. But the first sentence: "At sixty-one he carried on love affairs and these are thought to have influenced his writings", is printed as a quotation. This is a grave offence, for the lecturer said nothing of the kind. What he did was to explain how, at that age, Ibsen was profoundly influenced by a very deep friendship with a young girl. Further, there (Continued on page 4)

BLUE AND WHITE TAKE THREE INTERCOLLEGIATE CHAMPIONSHIPS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White teams had a very successful week-end. On looking over the list this morning we find that the University of Toronto has added the Senior Basketball, the Senior Women's Basketball and the Water Polo titles to their already formidable list of Intercollegiate championships.

The Water Polo team got a bad scare. Taking a six-goal lead to Montreal, they saw it cut down to one by the end of the first quarter. From then on they had a tough battle, but two goals in the last quarter made it safe for the Blue.

Varsity certainly rules the roost in Intercollegiate Basketball. McCutcheon's men made it two in a row and the women took the title from Western.

We have commenced industrious research on the pedigree of the "Bronze Baby", and hope to be able to produce it in an early issue.

The Jenning's Cup final between Jr. U.C. and Dents will take place at the Varsity Arena at 4 p.m. this afternoon. Don't miss this. On advance dope it's going to be real good. Don't forget the student tickets.

"Red" Porter's men have a tough battle ahead of them to-morrow night when they take on the Tricolour in Kingston. This is the first game of a home and home series for the O.H.A. Senior title. The return game will be at the Varsity Arena Friday night, and a capacity house should see the battle.

intact for to-morrow night's clash. Mel Harley has completely recovered from the "flu" and will be seen again at his regular right wing berth. The forward line should combine in their old-time form again with Harley back in uniform. The Whitehead-Paul defence combination has not been getting its usual quota of goals of late, and Quinn in the Queen's nets, is likely to experience many anxious moments if these two sharp-shooters hit their real stride. Murray Snyder is still the ever-reliable stonewall and the Queen's team will earn all the counters they get.

As goals on the road are to count both teams are going to treat the fans to the kind of hockey they like—the goal-getting, offensive type.

WATER POLO DECISION GOES TO MONTREAL

But Toronto Takes The Round And Championship By 8 to 5 Score

GAME FOUGHT BITTERLY

The Blue and White Water Polo team lost a 5-2 decision to the McGill team at Montreal Saturday night but by virtue of their 6-0 defeat of the Red in Toronto took the round and championship by a score of 8-5.

The game was bitterly fought with McGill making a desperate up-hill fight and the Blue striving to hold their lead. McGill gave the Blue a terrific shock by running in five goals in the first quarter and coming within one point of tying up the round. There was no score in the second or third periods but in the last quarter Varsity managed to sink two shots, putting the championship in the ice-box.

Varsity started out to play a defensive game and it nearly cost them dearly. The Red pressed the attack, generally managing to secure the ball on the face-off and get it over to an uncovered man who proceeded to do the damage. In this quarter the Blue were defending the deep end of the pool. In the second quarter after the switch the Blue had the shallow end and there was no scoring.

At the start of the third period Varsity shifted their tactics and much better results followed. Although McGill pressed, they were unable to score, and when the two teams changed ends for the last quarter, it looked fairly safe for Varsity. In this period Sinclair and Latchford got counters, while McGill were only able to threaten occasionally.

For Varsity, Latchford and Sinclair showed up well, but all of the team turned in a nice game. For McGill, Shackell with three goals, and Bourne and Gibbons with one each were good. Bourne displayed some exceptionally fast swimming. The teams:

Varsity—Goal, Bullen; defence, Sinclair (Capt.) and Spence; centre, Goss; forwards, Latchford and Graham; subs, Middleboro and Poyntz. McGill—Goal, Gardner; defence, Gibbons and Payton; centre, Bourne; forwards, Charlhorn (Capt.) and Shackell; subs, Astwood and Merser-cuo.

ELIZABETH DEFEATS VARSITY JUNIORS

Varsity Team Eliminated From O.A.B.A. Series On Saturday

COMPLETELY OUTCLASSED

Varsity junior basketball team was eliminated from the O.A.B.A. series as a result of their 47 to 20 drubbing at the hands of the Elizabeth Playground five at Central 'Y', Saturday night. The Blue team was clearly outclassed, being defeated 83-49 on the road. The Lizies should go far in the provincial play-downs. They have a well drilled squad which plays clever basketball.

Pearson with 14 points, Starr with 10 and Goldstein with 10, proved too much for the Varsity team who were unable to hold these tricky forwards in check. Don Wood with 8 tallies was quite the best for the losers. Burns was watched closely and didn't have a chance to equal his stellar performance of last Wednesday when he notched 12 points. The Lizies were taking no chances.

Varsity—Forwards Burns (2), Sullivan (4); centre, Perkins (3); guards, Wood (8), Dawson (1); subs, Vaughan, Smith, Macdonnell (2).

Elizabeth—Pearson (14), Bison (4), centre, Starr (10); guards, Sniderman (2), Mincovitch; subs, Heller (3), Levinsky (4), Goldstein (10), Abrams (2), Caplan.

WESTERNS GO DOWN TO BLUE AND WHITE

Varsity Floor Good All-Around Intermediate Basketball Team

UNINTERESTING GAME

Varsity intermediate basketball quintet defeated Western in the preliminary engagement to the senior fixture 33 to 21, in a slow and totally uninteresting game. It was about as exciting as a game of tidily-winked-for matches, and when it was all over the fans were ready for a snooze, only to be aroused by the senior clash which rescued what promised to be a dull evening.

Western was woefully weak in their shooting and most of their counters came from outside the Varsity defence. Quinn with 8 points was the most successful of the visitors. The Blue and White floored an air-tight defence composed of Cook and Devitt. Brady found the basket with great regularity and turned in his best game of the season. Brady is a smooth-ity which throughout the course has been manifested between the teachers and students.

It was most appropriate that Prof. Andrew Hunter, class adviser of 279, should respond to the toast.

H. R. Ziegler, President of the Medical Society and one of the 1929 Rhodes Scholars, proposed the toast to the University. Though regretting the fact that this was probably the last time that he class would meet together in a social way as undergraduates, Mr. Ziegler expressed the hope that many would return periodically to the University.

Dr. E. Stanley Ryerson responded to the Toast. He pointed out that during his college course a man makes some of his most intimate and binding friendships in class and in fraternity life. He also advised his class, many of whom will shortly be writing council examinations, that at a recent meeting in Chicago of representatives of Licensing Bodies and Teaching Universities, it was felt that in the near future, Council Examinations might be done away with and that all graduates from recognized Medical Schools would be allowed to practice without further examinations. He stated that in Canada similar efforts were being made and the outlook was quite favorable.

Dr. W. E. Gallie deprecated the exodus of Canadian Medical graduates to American centres. He believes that the practice is on the wane and that greater opportunities than ever are available in Canada.

Between courses University and Medical songs were sung energetically. A Toronto and Epistaxis brought the banquet to a close.

Publication of Posthumous Papers Policeman Prods Poor Professor

(By G. G. Brooks)

We regret to announce that the Chaparrone Emeritus passed away a day or two ago from heart failure. The following story was one of several found among her papers.

Once upon a time there was a professor, as there always has been and always will be. Now this Professor had three little goldfish in a bowl which he watched most closely, for he was making a study of goldfish. One day he was informed by the powers that be that his headquarters were to be moved to another building. Accordingly, he got ready to move his goldfish. But alas, he dropped the bowl which was to carry them upon the floor. What was he to do?

After some thought, he decided to wrap the fish in a wet handkerchief and so carry them to their new home. And it was so. But it happened, as he was walking along the sidewalk, a particularly slippery bit of ice passed unnoticed. Down went the professor, and away went the goldfish to a comfortable resting place in a snowbank. Not stopping to rub his bruises, the poor fellow began prodding frantically in the snow. Just at this moment there appeared a good fairy in the form of a tall gentleman with a fur cap and silver buttons. "What are you looking for?" he asked.

"Goldfish!" briefly replied the professor, still prodding frantically in the snow.

"Goldfish!" echoed the dumbfounded policeman, (for that was what he was) then, "Come, Sir, that will be all right, just come along with me and we'll get them."

Just at that moment however, a bit of flashing colour appeared in the professor's hand. The policeman's eyes opened wide; he mumbled something about making a mistake, and then, down he went on his knees beside the professor. Many proddings were rewarded at length by the recovery of three squirming bits of golden fish, which were wrapped with due care in their protecting handkerchief. And then the two sat down on the curbstone to recover their breath. A moment or two later they parted, the one with his precious fish carried carefully before him as he picked his way slowly across the campus, the other with much brushing and shaking, and a vain attempt to look dignified. And just two words broke the strained silence:

"Sorry!"

"Thanks!"

The good fairy is still wondering what got into his thermos bottle that night.

WYCLIFFE CAUCUS IN COLLEGE KITCHEN

Candidates' Speeches, Eskimo Pies, Hot Dogs, Coffee, Feature

INTERESTING MEETING

With the pungent odour of hot dogs and coffee permeating the atmosphere the Wycliffe Literary Society last week held a caucus in the spacious college kitchen.

A. J. Jackson, M.A., president of the Society, was official host. Dispensers of the hot dogs and coffee were Mr. C. C. Watkins and Mr. J. J. Hurley. Mr. Watkins also acted in the capacity of bell-ringer. The patrons were Rev. Dean Horan, and Rev. Professor Isherwood.

The candidates for the presidency, Messrs. H. R. Perkins, R. R. Bonis, B.A., J. J. Hurley, A. G. Channen, B.A., and A. J. Jackson, M.A. They were allowed five minutes each, and all received a rousing reception. All other candidates for office were allowed two minutes each, except for the redoubtable A. H. Marshall, who took a little overtime.

Professor Horan gave a truly fresh speech on "Approaching Examinations and Their Relation to Study," after which eskimo pies were given some attention.

Ernest Rhys, editor of Everywoman's Library, last week delivered a lecture at Cornell on "The Modern English Novelists," under the Goldwin Smith Lectureship Foundation. The McGill Players' Club last week gave four successful performances of the "Insect Play".

is a very bad confusion between Ibsen the radical in Ethics and Ibsen the dramatic technician.

In short, no attempt was made to put before your readers the main lines of Professor Norwood's lecture, and the vulgar tone of the whole account would be a disgrace to the worst type of newspaper. Its occurrence in a University production is truly appalling.

ties. Professor Taylor traced the settlement and development of Australia from the astronomical expedition to Tahiti, which marked the real discovery of Australia, until the present time.

Although many of his opinions on Australian development were pessimistic in the extreme, Professor Taylor held bright hopes for Australia as an agricultural land. He deplored the fact that the railways catered to the mining industry exclusively, and in his remarks in this regard, voiced a warning to Canada.

The achievement of assimilating various races and peoples without developing "racial indigestion" is truly an Australian triumph. "Racial trouble is due to economic friction and not to a dissimilarity of ideals," stated Professor Taylor.

At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was moved by Professor Moore and seconded by Professor Fay. In an interview after the meeting, Professor Taylor stated that Australia or any other young country, had no real need for so-called "white-collar professions," but for men with practical training to assist in the country's development.

PRESS FREEDOM SURE BY M'GILL MEASURE IN EFFECT THIS WEEK

Students' Council Will Amend Constitution to Break
Editorial Shackles

PARTISAN VIEWS SOLE BAN

Day of Ryan's Dismissal Saw Pending Change Proposed
By Editors

Freedom of expression in the columns of "The McGill Daily" will be an established fact next Friday, as soon as Students' Administrative Council committee on the matter has ironed out a technical difficulty, says a press dispatch from Montreal. Victory finally perches on the banners of the editorial staff of the Red and White undergraduate publication after months of agitation. The amendment which will insure this freedom was passed on the day of the dismissal of L. J. Ryan from the editorship of "The Varsity". The amended constitution will provide for the complete freedom of the editorial, news, and sport columns of "The Daily"—exceptions being made only in the case of partisan opinions on religious and political questions. The new measure will bear the legend: "The opinions expressed in the editorials below are those of the Managing Board. They are not official pronouncements of the Students' Executive Council."

Four years ago a serious dispute arose between the Students' Council and the Managing Board and since that time, although the surface of the undergraduate journalistic life has been calm, a feeling of dissatisfaction has been working. It finally found issue when a few weeks ago the Managing Board proposed an amendment to the constitution, providing for the complete freedom of the undergraduate editors from interference or censorship on the part of the Students' Council.

Difficulties presented themselves to the adoption of the amendment, but the Council's committee—to which it had been referred—finally found itself in a position to advise the passage of the proposals with the exception of partisan religious and political opinion. This was satisfactory to the Managing Board, so that now all that remains is the adjustment of a minor detail.

By next week freedom of the press will be a reality at McGill, it is thought.

The Talkies are getting voice and voice, according to "Life".

VICTORIA WOMEN ELECT YEAR'S STICK HOLDERS

Evelyn Crow for Senior Stick—Norma Bateman, Athletic,
Is Choice

At the annual elections yesterday afternoon the women of Victoria College indicated as their choice to hold the Senior Stick, Miss Evelyn Crow; and to hold the Athletic Stick, Miss Norma Bateman.

Victoria tradition regards the holder of the Senior Stick as the best all-round woman in the year, and the one to be held up as the example of what a senior should be. The Athletic Stick, traditionally, goes to the woman who has done the most in the year for athletics, whether intercollegiate, interfaculty, or inter-year. The sticks will be passed on from their present holders at the Senior Reception on Friday.

INTEREST EVINCED IN TEXT RENTAL

Proposal Aims at Convenience
But Might Not Work
Is Thought

LIBRARIAN DOUBTS

Members of the student body have expressed marked interest in the suggestion that the University Library should purchase certain specified text books for rental purposes. These books, according to the proposal, would be rented out to students for a complete term at perhaps one-third of their original cost. Necessary regulations to safeguard the life of the book would be imposed. The student opinion at large seemed quite favourable, although some expressed contempt.

Charlie Leshe, 370: "I think that the rental system is a splendid idea. There are many books I do without, which I feel would be beneficial to me, if I could afford them; besides I would much rather work in my room than in the library."

Bob Clark: "It strikes me as a very practical scheme. To me, a book on my desk is three times as valuable as one in the library."

Jerry Cragg: "It's a rotten idea." In answer to the question, would you use books on this system, most (Continued on page 4)

NOTED KOREAN VISITOR HAS THRILLING HISTORY

Mrs. Induk Kim Got Schooling

Of Boy

A visitor of special interest to the University this week will be Mrs. Induk Kim of Korea. She comes as a travelling secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement of America, and will spend four days, March 6th to 10th, speaking to groups of students here.

Mrs. Kim has a most interesting history. As a child, owing to the fact that education was only provided for boys, she, herself, dressed as a boy, and thus got all her early schooling. Later she went to a mission school. However, her early experience has made her anxious to see something of co-education in America. Mrs. Kim went to college in Korea, and then taught. About this time she was imprisoned for six months, as a political criminal.

She has since been doing post-graduate work in a University in the States. Last year she was one of the outstanding women speakers at the Detroit Student Convention. During the (Continued on page 4)

ANNUAL INVITATION

Peter Bent Brigham Asks
World's Most Noted
Physicians

A special honour has been conferred on Dr. A. L. Graham, Professor of Medicine, University of Toronto, in his having been asked to act temporarily as Physician-in-Chief of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital at Harvard University. Last year the position was occupied by Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Regius Professor of Medicine at the University of Cambridge. The Physician-in-Chief at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital is Dr. Henry Christian who is also Professor of Medicine at Harvard and who each year invites one of the most distinguished physicians of the world to take over his work for a week.

A similar honour in Surgery was conferred on the late Dr. C. L. Starr by Dr. Harvey Cushing of the same hospital.

Dr. Graham is a graduate of the University of Toronto who did post-graduate work in England, the United States, and Germany before he returned to his Alma Mater as lecturer in bacteriology. He joined No. 4 Canadian General Hospital (University of Toronto) and proceeded to the East with the Saloniki force where his work was so distinguished as to be mentioned in despatches. He was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel in charge of medicine at Basingstoke. In 1919 he was appointed full-time Professor of Medicine in the University of Toronto and Physician-in-Chief of the Toronto General Hospital, which positions he has held since. His work here has been of such a high order as to merit recognition in his election in 1922 to membership in the Association of American Physicians. In 1922 he took a large part in the clinical investigation of the value of insulin in diabetes mellitus. He has been prominently concerned also in the development of liver extract as a treatment for pernicious anaemia on which he is a recognized authority.

Acting and Technical Difficulties Met in Clever Touring Players' Production

The last performance of Carrol Aiken's production "The Midsummer Night's Dream" to be given in Toronto this season by the Hart House Touring Players, was presented at U.T.S. last week.

This group has just concluded a schedule of productions in eighteen colleges and private schools in this city. During this tour they were greeted with houses filled to capacity on every occasion. In the next few weeks they will fill engagements in several of the larger near-by centres of Ontario. The purpose of this tour has been to impress in the minds of the students the value and beauty of the play which is included in their curriculum, by giving the greatest possible reality to the characters and expression to the lines. A further aim, but none the less important, is to demonstrate to the schools the fact that they can produce Shakespeare's plays on their own stages and with amateur actors.

The University College Literary and Athletic Society will hold a very important meeting this evening at 8 p.m., at which nominations for the various "Lit" and year executives will be received.

The agenda also contains several other matters of much interest. The Robinette Shield for inter-year debating will be presented to the winning team, and the shield for the best skit at the "Follies" will be awarded. Men who have won athletic medals during the year will receive them at this meeting. There will also be announcements made concerning the U.C. Musical and the Junior-Senior dance, and refreshments and smokes will be provided.

VIC SENIORS HOLD FINAL CLASS PARTY

College's Future Development
Sketched by Honorary President

DANCE AT WYMWILWOOD

Victoria 279 gathered for their last class party on Friday evening. If it is any sign of a good time every member of the year would say that "a good time was had by all".

The first thing on the evening's programme was dinner at Burwash Hall. Following the dinner a toast was proposed to the College by Mr. J. R. M. Wilson. Dr. Johnston, the honorary president of the graduating year, in replying, briefly outlined the plans for the future building developments at Victoria.

The class was entertained by two of the members, Stan Packham, tenor, and Stan Osborne, pianist. Following this, everyone joined in shouting the old "bob" song, "Freshmen", which had flooded the sophs of 278 away back in '26.

A dance followed at Wymilwood, where enthusiastic class spirit was enhanced by the peppy orchestra.

The sentiment of the last class party seemed to "touch everyone deeply and it was not until after a "Toronto", "Hera-Hasta Alababo and Auld Lang Syne, that the guests were persuaded that the "last party" had really ended.

Check on Unworthy Movements
Also Stressed by Senator
Buchanan

"A newspaper to properly serve its community, should be in the lead in all forward movements, and as ready to check all unworthy or dangerous ones." So stated Senator Buchanan in the final lecture in the Sigma Delta Chi series, in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon.

Speaking on the subject, "Reminiscences of Thirty Years in Journalism," the speaker outlined some of the problems with which the press has to contend, and the ideals it should endeavor to foster.

"There is a tendency," he said, "on the part of many public men, to dislike the press for its criticism. But what the press really criticizes, or what it should criticize, is not the man, but the measures that man stands for."

The Senator recalled a time when John Ross Robertson, although personally strongly disliking certain candidates, still supported their policies in the editorial columns of the "Telegram".

As to whether or not a newspaper man should go into politics, the speaker declared he should do so, only on condition that he can still give unbiased opinion in his paper.

"The most influential papers in Canada, are those which are independent within their party," he said.

With regard to the question of so-called education as an asset to the newspaper man, the Senator stated that it was not an absolute necessity, and cited several cases to substantiate his statement. "But education plus inclination plus a nose for news is a great asset," he said.

In conclusion the Senator painted in glowing terms the future that Canada holds for the journalist who remains within its bounds.

LET WOMEN PROPOSE SAYS ST. HILDA'S

But Men May Become Lapdogs And Moonlight Lose Its Charm

SINGLE MAN PROBLEM

On Monday, the fourth, St. Hilda's held its first inter-year debate between the second and fourth years, the subject being "This House is of the opinion that women should exercise their leap-year prerogative."

Miss Wegman, the leader for the affirmative, wondered how women could get into the home, if she were not allowed to propose. She deplored the single man problem.

Miss Barnard, 371, feared that men would become like lap-dogs, and also, that moon-light would lose its charm.

Miss Johnson, 279, stated that it was women's duty to propose. She quoted statistics to show that 80 per cent of University graduates of the fairer sex, were left to fight life's battles alone.

Miss McMillan, 371, exalted feminine wiles, and anticipated the loss of woman's strategic position in the home should the motion carry.

Misses Mary Winspear, Eleanor Clarke, Dorothy Langley, Marjorie Winspear, Margaret Bonis, spoke from the floor.

The House divided 21-12 in the affirmative.

LIST OF CANDIDATES

Assign Faculties to Various Rooms for Two Periods
Of Polling

To-morrow the male undergraduates of the University of Toronto are given their annual opportunity to express a choice of men to sit as their representatives on the various standing committees of Hart House. The regulations governing the election have been issued by the authorities.

Members are informed that they will be required to show their Hart House membership cards at the door of the room in Hart House allotted to their college or faculty for voting purposes, next Wednesday.

Membership stamps for those who have not already obtained them may be had on application at the Hall of the desk not later than 2 p.m. on Thursday, 5th March. No stamps will be issued after that hour until the elections are over.

Those members who have already had their registration cards stamped with the Hart House stamp but have lost them may procure at the Wardens' Office a special voting permit enabling them to vote.

The polling hours are from 11.45 a.m. to 2.15 p.m., and from 4.30 p.m. to 6 p.m.

The rooms in Hart House will be allotted for voting to the colleges and faculties as follows:

Reading Room—University College.
Lecture Room—S.P.S. and Faculty of Forestry.

Music Room—Victoria College.
Trinity College and St. Michael's College.

Boxing Room—Faculty of Medicine.
Room A—Faculty of Dentistry.

Room C—O.C.E., O.C.A., Wycliffe College, Emmanuel College and Faculty of Music.

The voter having presented his Hart House membership card at the door of the polling booth and having it stamped, will proceed to the table allotted to his Year and will give his name. Having had his name checked on the voters' list, the voter will be given six ballot papers, one for each committee. After he has marked the ballots in pencil he will place these in the ballot boxes and leave the room. Members are reminded that no electioneering is permitted in the polling room.

The list of candidates for the various committees is as follows:

OUR MISGUIDED UNIVERSITIES

(Contributed)

The modern American and Canadian university is so far from being the breeding ground of a world's culture, that it is doubtful if it at all succeeds in producing a body of men that can in the bulk be easily distinguished from the Babbitts of the much despised uneducated crowd. Indeed the average undergraduate leads a secluded and sequestered existence that in the first place takes him aside from the real world of toil and anxiety and life for four invaluable years of youth when if ever he should be face to face with some form of reality; and in the second place makes it necessary for him on leaving the university to adopt in its entirety the viewpoint of the world in which he will work in order to catch up in a material sense with his uneducated contemporaries.

The average freshman who comes to college primarily to get an education has, during his final years in collegiate institute and prep school, entertained high hopes of the intellectual heaven he will find awaiting him at the university. Perhaps he has already met some graduate who, possessing to an unusual degree the culture and refinement conventionally associated with the university, typifies for him the charm and dignity of the world that will be his for the coming four years. But early dreams are soon shattered. His reception and initiation into the mysteries of the new life partake of the crudely practical, and thoughtlessly bizarre nature that in reality typifies the stereotyped mundanity of the modern college.

Firm resolves and rosy ambitions last until after the President's opening address. But soon almost imperceptibly he is drawn into the world of fraternities, of committees, of highly organized athletics, presented before him either in the name of the great gods "college loyalty" and "college friendship", or as a means, which he eventually finds to be utterly worthless, of gaining experience in practicality. And all these, our college authorities commend (since they consider them inevitable) as agencies of value to the fledgeling in the world of people.

The high tide of the great university popularity contest and the drunken frenzy of the social whirl by means of which our invaluable college friendships are made, seize his body to be one more sacrifice to the already defiled Mrs. Grundy; and if he be not entirely overwhelmed by the flood, cast him up on a fruitless shore a year or so later to be sickened by the meaningless cheapness of the life he has led.

And what is the attitude of the senior who at the end of his fourth year is preparing for the expected graduation? In a few months he will have to join the ninety-nine per cent. of the world's population that is engaged in making its daily bread, in breeding the next generation and in slowly dying. Does he feel that undergraduate debating societies, newspapers, dramatic clubs, entertainment committees, have given in any real degree an outlook on life that he can call his own? Too often he is utterly stupefied by the blind forces around him; and looking forward to the time when he can merge himself with the world, adopts already that manner of action, speech and even thought which he thinks will best bring pleasure to his future employer. Four years at college have succeeded in confusing a mind that had once hoped to be educated by

Habitués of the songsters were delighted on Sunday evening by the lecture on Elizabethan music given by Canon Edmund Fellowes, the distinguished editor of the great collection of English madrigals. Canon Fellowes is in Toronto on a short lecture tour. It did seem fitting that the songsters should be connected through Canon Fellowes to all the English tradition of singing. As the speaker remarked, the songsters were the direct descendants of the Elizabethan madrigal evenings.

Dr. Fellowes illustrated his charmingly intimate lecture with records of madrigals recorded by the St. George's Singers, and at the conclusion of the lecture, the Canadian Singers sang a group of madrigals, an admirable close to a most pleasant evening.

JUST A FROSH
(With apologies)

Lord, I am just a little frosh
That works with might and main,
I plug and plug and plug and plug,
And tire my feeble brain.

The only colours in my life
Are black and blue and green,
But on the whole I am content,
To prod my weary bean.

But sometimes when mid-April clouds
Befog my fuddled wits,
I see myself a-getting through,
And have ambitious fits.

I see myself a daring youth
Who writes with pen of fire,
The while I hardly condemn,
All sorts of evils dire.

As with Diogenes I seek
To ope official claims,
A ghost is always at my back,
The ghost of those exams.

And soon or late his awful paw
That never lets me go,
Will hurl me from officialdom
Back to the pluggers' row.

O Lord, some pray to Thee for pelf,
And some for a woman's wink,
But all I ask is a little wit,
And a goodish bit of ink!

confronting it with a list of studies and a programme of pleasures which are done and hence must be done.

Well, what are we going to do about it, and does it really matter? It makes not one whit of difference if the university is meant to be a mad-house, so perverting its habitués' minds that they are forever after incapable of original thought, and able only to serve as automatons dimly guiding a subdued world to more efficient mechanical perfection.

But presuming a primary purpose of college life is to find out and develop originality of spirit, surely it is time some return was made to the days when a university was an educational institution, the centre of the nation's spiritual life, not just the stamping ground of young sheep afraid for their life of expressing their own individuality, of offending in any respect the gods who run this present perfect world, of doing anything that Mr. Smith would not think of doing too.

The absent-minded eccentricity of the professors and the irrepressible irreverence of the students of yester-year at least produced men.

Meanwhile more than one man and woman having crammed all that there is in this much touted university life into less than the customary four year cycle that is enforced both for the student and for the frivolous colt out for an unrestrained gallop before settling down to the heavy harness work of the world, is preparing to leave college at the end of the second or third year thoroughly bored with the attitude of the great cultural centre.

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

The feature this week is a made-over play of Sir James Barrie, and though retaining much of the sparkling dialogue, is overdone in several places. The shakily-thin opening plot is only saved by the capable acting of Ruth Chatterton and H. B. Warner, but even the later tense dramatic action fails to lift "The Doctor's Secret" from mediocrity. The accompanying features, notably Jack Arthur's "Oriental", which achieves a beautiful scenic effect, and the M.G.M. vaudeville artists, are above the average.

—J. D. A.

EMPIRE

This week's production "The Ghost Train" is a mystery melodrama that is better than the average; it is well presented and is a good evening's entertainment. The play is well constructed but much of its effectiveness is lost in that many of the devices used for producing thrills have appeared in plays of this type which have played here before, but its comic relief is by far the best of any of these. Its humour is of a distinctly English flavour and always swift and rollicking, it at times achieves the hilarious. The first act is compact and a good piece of writing. The first part of the second is equally good but from there on it descends to the average.

The acting is at all times very capable, Miss Deirdre Doyle contributing an almost flawless performance. Robert Leslie carries admirably a difficult part and is only very rarely not capable of it. Miss Ann Carey is well cast and the rest are all adequate with the possible exception of Miss Marjorie Foster, who, in the second act, as an hysterical young woman, is hardly convincing.

The direction is well done; the off-stage noises in the first act being especially realistic, and the entire production is better than the average at this theatre.

SHEA'S

The bill at Shea's Hippodrome this week is good with three or four high spots. "The Gamble Boys and Bache", headline, in a melodious medley of song and dance. They certainly deserve their name. Betty and Jerry Browne stage a farcical elopement. The Briants, in "The Dream of a Moving Man", one of the best skits seen in a blue moon, are quite a new and welcome departure from the usual vaudeville act. It consists of sheer acrobatic pantomime, splendidly executed.

Ethel Davis, in "Refreshing Long Chatter", delivers a humorous monologue, with jokes and puns on modern society. A monkey act, in "Darkest Africa", concludes the stage offerings. The moving picture, as its name, Silks and Saddles, implies, is a story of the race track. It starts out in "Ole Virginny" not Kentucky this time. The hero, who is the jockey who's going to ride to victory as one perceives at first, falls in with thieves, but scores the winning "touchdown" at the last moment. It lags in parts, and needs a few twists to distinguish it from so many others of its ilk. A splendid news reel, a scenic travelogue, and the rollicking Collegians in "Graduation Day", top the bill off.

DENTAL SEXTETTE DEFEATS JR. U.C. 3-0 TO WIN JENNINGS CUP

SPEAKING OF SPORT

For some years now Dents' participation in the finals for the Jennings' Cup has been a regular occurrence, but they have always had the misfortune to be matched with a better team. At last they have turned the trick. The game was pretty poor from the spectators' point of view, but there was no doubt about the superiority of the winners. Dents netted the rubber once in each period and clearly deserved their victory. They showed flashes of real combination at times and swarmed right in on the U.C. goal, but just at the wrong moment something would go wrong and the bell would stop play or else they would shoot wide of the goal.

* * * *

Well, it's the acid test to-night. Varsity and Queen's, the old rivals in rugby, are fighting it out for the senior O.H.A. title. On the season's play the Blue have earned the call, but Queen's have always been noted for their fighting spirit and they're sure to put up a great scrap.

* * * *

Varsity basketball and water polo teams finished their work on Saturday. They did it well too. Both won the Intercollegiate championship.

Hutton House held its annual Formal Reunion Dance at the U.C. Women's Union on Friday, March 1. Graduates as well as former members of the residence joined the Huttonites in their merry-making. The modernistic lighting effects and scenery appeared to be the inspired production of artistic talent. The crashing jazz from the orchestra was illustrated by the zig zag lighting on the walls. The glittering color-scheme was a corresponding background for the multi-coloured gowns.

VARSITY HOCKEYISTS TRAVEL TO KINGSTON

To-night Sees Blue and White In First Play-off Tilt With Tricolour

LOCALS SHOULD WIN

The senior hockey team leaves for Kingston to-day to play Queen's to-night in the first of their home and home games for the championship of the O.H.A. All the regulars will make the trip and Marshall and Murray are the subs. "Red" Porter has given the boys no rest and they haven't slackened down any in their practices. Goals are to count on the round so he expects them to pile up a comfortable margin in the Limestone City and clinch the title in the return game at the Varsity Arena on Friday night.

"Mel" Harley, who has been sadly missed for some time, has recovered from his attack of "flu" and will start off at right wing with Jimmy McMullen on the other side and Stewart as pivot man. The usual defence of Paul and Whitehead will be on hand to show the Tricolour how it's done, and Murray Snyder will be in the nets. With this combination to contend with and such reliable alternates as Marshall and Murray, the blue should have little difficulty in winning.

ARTS JUNIORS BOW TO SMART DENT SIX

Mahaffey, Conn, Winners' Best While Greer Shines For Losers

GAME LISTLESS

Dents defeated Junior U.C. in the finals for the Jennings' Cup yesterday afternoon by a score of 3-0. The game was a listless affair and neither team seemed to be able to get going. Both sides lost many chances by bad passes in front of the nets or by kicking the puck. Although the game was slow the back-checking and poke-checking were a treat to watch and the "tooth-ache healers" certainly had that down pat. Mahaffey and Conn broke up play after play before they could get started.

Dents got a goal in each period and that three goal margin just about indicates their superiority. Soon after play began Conn scored on a mix-up behind the goal. Nabbing the puck in the corner, he stick-handled it past a couple of U.C. men and pushed it past Richardson before the Arts' net guardian had a chance to clear. For the second counter Whitaker banged the rubber in when the goalie dropped it in front of the goal mouth after a shot, and the last one came when Dewar passed the puck from behind the goal to Herron, who scored. Richardson hadn't a chance.

Mahaffey and Conn were the best for the winners, while Greer turned in a nice game for U.C. Line-ups:—Dents—Goal, McCartney; defence, Walden, Whitaker; centre, Mahaffey; wings, Conn, Dewar; subs, Herron, Armstrong, Adams. Jr. U.C.—Goal, Richardson; defence, Little, Greer; centre, Hugsley; wings, Shortley, Evans; subs, Saunders, Drury, Thompson.

ST. MIKE'S SOFTBALLERS TAKE TRINITY INTO CAMP

Irish Bunch Scores to Earn Easy 8-0 Win And Break Group Tie

St. Mike's had little trouble in defeating Trinity in an interfaculty baseball game yesterday afternoon, the final score being 8 to 0. This breaks the three-cornered tie in the group, with Vic still in the running for the honours.

Snappy fielding by the winners featured throughout the game. Their infield accorded Casey's good twirling perfect support all the way, MacDonal's work on first being especially brilliant. Three batting rallies in the first, third and fifth innings netted all the St. Mike's runs. Ryan, Mallon and MacDonal were the heavy hitters. Trinity cracked out eleven safeties, only one less than St. Mike's, but found Casey invincible in the punches and only got one man as far as third. Simmons pitched fairly well for them, but weakened with men on bases. However, the fielding behind him was not always of the airtight variety, otherwise the score might have been less. Sanchezayes behind the bat, and Horoy on third, showed well for the red and black. The former handled several four-tups in fine style.

An unfortunate accident occurred in the second inning, when the bat slipped from the batter's hands and knocked a spectator unconscious. After receiving medical attention, however, he recovered with apparently little bad effect.

Self-Satisfied Siamese Sherlock Banished to Bughouse for Bums

(By E. R. Toll)

The great detective dropped both feet on his polished sandalwood desk, leaned back in his massive mahogany chair, and yawned. Seated opposite, the eminent poet did likewise.

The G.D. coughed professionally. "Yes, Watson, it is a queer world. Let a man be different from the common throng, a man of originality, of genius, in short—a man like . . ."

"Me?" suggested the E.P.

"Exactly. Or like myself. Let him, I say, be individual, unique, distinctive, and they shut him up here. The paths of glory lead but to the bughouse."

The G.D. leaned forward confidentially: "Did I ever tell the real reason I was sent here?"

The E.P. twirled his left ear in the negative. "Well then," announced the G.D. in triumph, "here goes! It was like . . ."

"Me?"

"No. I say it was like this: A crime had been committed. I was Siam's greatest detective. My services were enlisted. I came. I saw. I conquered."

He paused for breath; the E.P. dashed off seven sombre sonnets for Student's Verse.

Then again: "This crime, you must know, was perpetrated in Siam. By a patent process of my own, I deduced that the least likely place to find the perpetrator was Toronto."

"But . . ." began the E.P. doubtfully.

"Now don't worry over non-essentials. Toronto, then, from the legal standpoint was least likely. Toronto then, would be the last place to be searched. Now the criminal mind must reason after essentially the same fashion. The crook therefore, would come to Toronto to hide. I followed. Is that quite clear?"

"Yes, but . . ."

"Then to continue: Arrived in Toronto, I straightway went to Hart House—down into the locker-room—opened locker No. 297 and arrested my man. Then they brought me here."

"Splendid," gasped the E.P., "but now tell me, how did you know that the crook would be in that locker?"

"Simple, quite simple," muttered the G.D., taking another shot of cocaine. "It was simply a case of deductive reasoning. You see, Watson, I myself was the crook, and that was where I had gone to hide."

JUNIOR MEDS GAMBOL IN ANNUAL AT-HOME

Brilliant Scarlet and Black Hall with Gay Throng And Smart Band

Almost two hundred and fifty couples were present at the Junior Medical At-Home, held in Hart House on Friday evening. The function will go down in history as a record of success which future committees will try to equal.

The big gymnasium was appropriately bedecked in the colors of the Medical faculty and the gay throng danced in a brilliant rainbow created by a battery of beaming lights in the gallery.

On a stage of scarlet and black, the orchestra produced melody which made even inexperienced feet step gracefully in rhythm.

Supper was served in the Great Hall.

The committee was as follows: H. D. Barner, A. C. Baillic, J. W. Sinclair, R. J. Soloway, C. E. Vaughan, and M. W. Nugent.

The patronesses were Mrs. J. C. Watt, Mrs. A. Tunter, Mrs. E. S. Ryerson and Mrs. E. F. Burton.

Toronto Has Turned Gregg

Five years ago John R. Gregg, the author and publisher of Gregg Shorthand, chose Toronto in which to establish his model school.

It is a distinctive sign of superiority to state that Gregg College has already grown to be the largest school of its kind in Canada east of Winnipeg.

The school that is so widely accepted must have features not commonly found in like institutions. It merits your consideration. Telephone Kingsdale 5588 to learn about special facilities offered University students during summer months.

LIBRARY TEXT RENTAL

students replied: "Yes, I believe I would."

Professor Wallace, University Librarian, was very dubious as to the outcome of such a system.

"I've never felt quite certain that it could be carried out," he stated, "unless the courses are greatly changed. I doubt if the scheme would be a success."

He pointed out the heavy loss due to the continual changing of prescribed texts, which were either supplanted by new ones or did not suit a different professor. However, to relieve the growing congestion in the library, Mr. Wallace suggested: "If there seems to be a sufficient demand, I am perfectly willing to suggest to the library committee that a certain amount of money should be set aside for the purchasing of books to be rented to undergraduates for a whole term at a rental which would protect the library against loss."

MRS. INDUK KIM

Academic year 1928-1929 she has been a special travelling secretary for the S.V.M. She is the first so-called foreign secretary they have had on their staff, and from all the universities where she has visited, have come most enthusiastic reports.

She will tell of the missionary work as now carried on in Korea, and will also tell of the present political and social conditions there. Students who would like to talk to her personally may do so Thursday or Friday mornings, between 11.30 and 1 o'clock, in the S.C.A. Office, Household Science Building.

and the construction was carried out under his supervision. A switchboard was designed by the electrical staff of the Theatre under Mr. William Allan, which allows perfect flexibility and control of the lighting apparatus. Three sets of curtains comprise the total scenic effects; scenes are localized entirely by skillful use of lights. This stage proves that gorgeous and expensive scenery is not essential to the production of a play.

With this efficient apparatus the technical staff of Hart House Theatre, under the supervision of the Stage Manager, Mr. J. R. Barber, can transform any collegiate auditorium into a well equipped theatre. The setting can be erected in three hours and packed ready to travel again forty minutes after the close of the curtain.

This is a unique experiment for which Mr. Carrol Aikens should be commended; not only is he giving his players an opportunity to develop their talent by meeting and solving every manner of difficulty that can ever confront an actor, but he is also making a great step in the teaching of Shakespeare in schools and the widening of interest in the Little Theatre movement. It is to be hoped that this will not be the last of such undertakings by Hart House Theatre.

Korea was the subject of an after-dinner address given at Knox College last night, by Mr. Charles A. Clark, who has just returned from the mission field in that country.

"This is a little one but can give trouble," relates the historian in describing the 16th hole at Jasper Park Golf Course, which R. Bell Irving, of Powell River, B.C., recently negotiated in one and promptly entered the gallery of fame in Canadian golf. The green is small and narrow with run-off and bunkers on all sides, and it has been fittingly named "The Bad Baby."

In a course which offers large grass tees, wide fairways, daring hazards and magnanimous velvet greens, the 16th brings a particular zest to the keen golfer.

Jasper Park Golf Course is situated in Canada's greatest National Park and is maintained in connection with Jasper Park Lodge, a most delightful resort in the Rocky Mountains operated by the Canadian National railways.

Great rolling stretches of beauty, with the magnificent background of snow-capped peaks combine to make Jasper the incomparable golf course. Bracing mountain air puts a vim in the game that comes from the sheer joy of living.

Canada's most delightful golf tournament will be staged at this beautiful spot during the week of September 8th to 16th next, and the principal prize in the amateur championship fight is the Jasper Park Lodge Silver Totem Pole Trophy, the most characteristic golf prize offered for competition in the Dominion.

The constitution of the McGill Students' Society has recently been published in full in the columns of "The McGill Daily", for the avowed purpose of showing the students the force of proposed amendments.

University College Literary Society Holds Nomination Night

Prizes, Shields and Medals Are Presented to The Respective Winners

REPORTS FROM DIRECTORS

Professor G. O. Smith Elected Honorary President By Acclamation

The nomination meeting of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society was held in the Junior Common Room at 8 p.m. The following were nominated for the executive of the Society: Hon. Pres., Prof. G. O. Smith (elected by acclamation); Pres. Alex. Stringer, Sam Beauregard; 1st Vice-Pres. L. M. Gellor (elected by acclamation); 2nd Vice-Pres. E. Arnold, J. Jackson; 3rd Vice-Pres. J. Sheppard, A. Wood; Secretary, F. Brebner, R. Armstrong, W. Adams, B. Murray; Treasurer, S. Brownlee, M. Henderson.

The meeting was the occasion for the presentation of the Maurice Cody Memorial Prize to Ross Anderson and the Honorary President's Prize to Bill Gace. Medals were presented to the members of the winning Jr. U.C. water polo team. The Follies Shield was presented to first year and the Robinette Shield for debating was presented to the second year.

Reports were given by the Athletic Director, Social Director and Treasurer. The Treasurer's report showed a surplus in the current account, of $4647.5, and in the reserve account of $7604.1.

A notice concerning changes in the U.C. magazine was given. This is to be changed somewhat, more attention being given to news items, pictures, etc.

After speeches by the different candidates and the Honorary President, the meeting adjourned for refreshments.

"WOMEN IN LAW" SUBJECT OF TALK BY MISS PARSONS

Women Need To Work Twice As Hard As Men Of Equal Ability

"Women who go into law must be prepared to work twice as hard as men with the same ability," said Miss Vera Parsons, speaking yesterday at Mrs. Kirkwood's weekly tea. Miss Parsons' subject was "Women in Law," and her attitude towards women entering this field was decidedly encouraging.

The fact that there are about five women lawyers practising in Toronto is not an indication that there are wide opportunities for women. On the contrary, it is a proof that women cannot, as yet, successfully compete with men in law. Most firms prefer men.

"If she is prepared to give a great deal of energy and study, much work and concentration, to pay attention to minutest details, and to wait five or six years for a practice, then, and (Continued on page 3)

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE WOMEN HOLD MEET

Musical Representative Said To Be Needed On The Executive

BUILDING FUND INCREASED

The U.C. women's mass meeting on the afternoon of March 5, was fairly well attended.

The Treasurer reported an increase of $517.35 to the Women's Building Fund, as the returns from the U.C. Theatre Night.

A presentation was made to Mrs. Brett in appreciation of her services in connection with the W.U.A.

It was stated—by the fourth year President that a musical representative was needed on the executive. A discussion ensued whether she should be nominated or elected. It was moved that the council nominate a musical director for next year's W.U.A. executive. The question will be voted on at the W.U.A. elections.

The motion that the Social Service representative should be nominated by Council rather than elected, was lost. The motion was carried that the S.C. representative be nominated that day and voted on at W.U.A. election which is to be held on Tuesday, Mar. 12.

ELECTORAL MEETING WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

First And Final Years Are Ineligible For Nomination

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association to elect the five student representatives on the Women's Athletic Directorate for 1929-30, will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Thursday, March 14, at 4.30 p.m.

Nominations will be received by the Secretary of the Association until Tuesday, March 12, at 5 p.m. Nominations must be signed by two members of the U. of T. W.U.A., and must be made on forms to be obtained from the Secretary, Room 82, U.C.

A student eligible for nomination must be at the time of nomination be in her second or higher year, but not in her final year at the University.

Representatives to the Electoral Body must be elected and sent to the meeting as follows: U.C., Vic, St. Michael's, St. Hilda's and Medical W.A.A.'s, four representatives each; basketball and hockey clubs, six representatives each; swimming club, four representatives; tennis and gymnasium (baseball) clubs, and O.C.E. W.A.A., two representatives each. Names of representatives must be given to the Secretary not later than Wednesday, March 13, and no substitutions or proxies will be allowed.

SETTLEMENT PUPILS EMANUEL STUDENTS' DISCUSS ACTIVITIES OF ACADEMICAL YEAR

Instruction Is Carried on Under Competent Music Teachers

BOYS' CLUB SEES HAMLET

Discussion Groups Led By Students About Ancient Topics

The University Settlement has been taking full advantage of the cultural opportunities which Toronto provides for her youth in the line of music and drama.

The front rows of Massey Hall were filled last Tuesday at the twilight concert by over thirty eager little girls, one of many groups invited to each concert by the management. Many were introduced, for the first time, to unfamiliar sounds and shapes of orchestral instruments.

While interested as an audience, in matters musical, the Settlement by no means neglects the performance. Over one hundred pupils are studying music within its walls and, as an added stimulus, an examiner from the Toronto Conservatory recently held examinations in which everyone proved their ability.

The Knight Hawks, an alert club of boys over seventeen, enjoyed a real treat at the Royal Alexandra last week when they went in a body to see Hamlet performed by the Stratford-on-Avon players.

The high point of the week for the Knight Hawks is Sunday afternoon, when discussions are led by University men on topics such as Crime and Punishment, Censorship of books and plays, and other problems of social interest.

SECOND OF LECTURES BY MISS RUTH HOME

Furniture of Restoration Period Followed The General Culture

"The Furniture of Restoration England" was the subject chosen by Miss Ruth M. Home, for the second of a series of weekly lectures.

These lectures are delivered every Tuesday at 4 p.m. in the Royal Ontario Museum.

Miss Home emphasized the fact that after the Elizabethan age, English culture took a decided lapse. After the death of King James, however, craftsmanship no longer counted, and the cheap oak and the crude taste developed a much lower work. But it was about this time that the restoration began.

Charles had married a French wife, and she and her followers introduced Continental culture, taste and ideas. The Jacobean chair was now first seen. It is strictly feminine with its high back, low seat and comfortable arms. Miss Home pointed out that it was about this time that the first bath tub was introduced and described it as an added comfort.

The day bed was first used in the Jacobean period, became a very characteristic part of the furniture, but its indulgers were severely condemned by the scribes of the day. The later period, handicapped by the wars and spendthrift ways of King Charles, produced a quite simple style of furniture.

The reign of William saw the ending of the Jacobean style and the introduction of inlaid furniture. Patterns from China were introduced and Chinese chests displaying Chinese dishes became part of every home.

College Subscribed Sum For Support Of Summer Students

CHANCELLOR BOWLES TALKS

Athletic And Financial Reports For The Year Were Submitted

The year's activities and accomplishments were discussed last night at the annual nomination meeting of the Emmanuel College Students' Society, with the president, Mr. Bruce Gray, in the chair.

Mr. W. Burnett read the report of the Missionary and Worship Committee. It was announced that Emmanuel College students had subscribed and earned $600 towards supporting two students on Home Mission fields, during the summer. They also assisted, with Victoria College, in providing a scholarship for one Oriental student in this University.

An athletic report was read. David J. Wilson, the treasurer, perused a financial resume of the past year.

In a witty speech, Chancellor Bowles, President of Victoria College, gave some timely advice to the society.

The nominations for the various officers, elected annually, took place. For president: Messrs Walter Carr and F. M. H. Cryderman; vice-pres. Messrs Chas. L. Lewis and Morrison Sellar; secretary: Messrs M. A. J. Waters and Wm. S. W. Breece; treasurer: Messrs Geo. E. Ashton and Chas. W. Leslie; assistants: Messrs J. W. Houston and Graydon C. Cox; S. A.C.: Messrs J. W. Walkinshaw, H. J. Mahoney, W. Davis and H. Hodgson.

ARRESTING ATTEMPTS MARK YEAR'S ELECTION POSTERS

Naughtiness and Futurism Seem To Impress One Onlooker

Futuristic art, Group-of-Seven pretensions and risqué exhibitions of nudity feature the annual string of election posters in the main corridor of Hart House, now proclaiming their respective wares to the critical members of the institution.

The usual exhibition of mediocre "Vote for so-and-so" cards is, this year, fortunately, supplemented by some really artistic efforts. The available space allotted for election advertisements along the walls of the main corridor is, as usual, fully occupied. All the committees are well-represented. The Sketch Committee, however, surpasses the others, in the matter of artistic beauty.

"Study of an Old Man," a sketch attached to the election plea of a candidate for the Sketch Committee, displays the probable suitability of the person in question for the office.

A drawing of a nude, though not of exceptional character, is, nevertheless, attracting much attention. The candidate should have good support at the polls, to judge from the popularity of his poster.

One House Committee poster represented in true futuristic form, a city skyline, has called forth much commendation. A sketch of University College, on a Sketch Committee card, is also a rather good piece of work.

The Library Committee has some very examples of humour and wit in its posters; and the Squash Committee candidates exhibit a knack for more than "raquets".

MARQUETTE VISITORS TO DEBATE VARSITY

Formidable Opposition From Visiting Team Is Anticipated

VARSITY SUPPORTS HYDRO

On Monday, March 11th, the question of Government control of water power, will be debated here, when Marquette University debating team will endeavour to prove that Ontario is wrong in her Hydro-Electric policy. On the other hand, the University of Toronto team will do its utmost to uphold Sir Adam Beck and the Hydro. When Marquette first wrote the Literary and Debates Committee asking for a debate, they suggested that the question should be worded, "That the public should own and operate the hydro-electric plants of the country," Marquette taking the negative side. The local committee suggested that the question be a little broader, and the wording decided on is, "That this House is in favour of full Government control of Water Power."

In view of the interest evinced by persons outside of the University circle, the debate will be open to the public. Marquette University are said to be sending a strong team, composed of Louis W. Staendemaier, a Pre-law Sophomore, with five years debating to his credit; James Sullivan, a Senior of the College of Liberal Arts, a member of Theta Rho, and with 15 debates to his credit during last year; and Professor William R. Duffey, Director of the School of Speech, Marquette University, and Coach of Debate.

The University of Toronto team will consist of Douglas McRae, School of Applied Science, R. V. Kennedy, St. Michael's College and Allan H. Ferry, Emmanuel College.

"Varsity" Staff Elections

The annual meeting of the joint men's and women's staffs of "The Varsity" for the election of editors for the year 1929-1930, will be held on Thursday, March 7 at 5 p.m. in Room 3, University College.

The recently threatening conflagration at Dalhousie University between C.O.T.C. militarists and S.C.A. pacifists has proved to be a false alarm, one gathers from "The Dalhousie Gazette".

Harley, Snyder and McMullen Play Brilliant Game And Vanquish Tricolour

"MEL" SCORES 3 GOALS

Queen's Rains Shots On Murray Snyder But All To No Avail

(Special to "The Varsity" by Staff Reporter)

Kingston, March 5—In a fast, stubbornly fought game, Varsity defeated Queen's 4-2 at Kingston last night in the first game of the series for the O.H.A. championship. The Tricolour set up a fast pace from the start, but the Blue and White more than their match. In the last two periods, Varsity had the better of the play, but Queen's pressed hard and the Blue and White were extended to the limit.

For Varsity, Jimmy McMullen, Mel Harley and Murray Snyder starred. Snyder played a stellar game, with plenty of marvellous saves. McMullen and Harley played like fiends all the time, the former being the hardest-working man on the ice, while "Mel" at right wing, scored three goals. For the Tricolour, Lawlor, Smith and Britton were the best. Queen's were ineffective around the goal but tried hard all the time.

Queen's from the start, bore down three at a time on Snyder, worried the Varsity defence, raining in shots on Snyder. Paul made a nice rush but got a tough reception. Snyder cleared nicely when the Tricolour front line got possession of the puck in front of the Varsity net. Harley got Varsity's first on a pass from Whitehead. The Blue then forced the play.

In the first minute of play in the second period Harley got another goal on a beautiful shot from centre. Varsity were backchecking effectively, and the Tricolour had difficulty in making headway. Smith, on a pass from Lawlor, scored Queen's first. Paul made a sparkling rush and beat the Queen's defence to score Varsity's third marker. The Blue then proceeded to rain shots on Quinn in the Queen's nets. The Tricolour tried the range from all angles but couldn't get the disc past Snyder. Harley scored Varsity's fourth on a nice pass from McMullen.

The play in the third period was most strenuous. McMullen worked like a Trojan, but found Quinn invincible. Queen's were over-anxious and didn't have their shooting eye working properly. Paul was penalized for a mix-up with Reist, and appeared to have been given the gate for no fault (Continued on page 3)

RUTHLESS CLAWS CLUTCH U.C. MEN'S LOCKERS

Unknown Nocturnal Marauder Seeks Loot In Sacred Precincts

Deeds of astounding and black violence are being perpetrated in our midst. University College has been visited by some nocturnal marauder, so it appears. The sacred portals of that mighty hall of learning have been grossly entered and its precincts violated by an unknown.

His ruthless claws have attempted to tear away in the men's locker-room, a six-lever padlock. Twisted horribly, like a gargoyle it hangs, mute evidence of the despicable work of some fiend.

O tempora! O mores! One can almost hear his rasping laugh as he, with sweating brow and panting breath, laboured to blast the lock of some innocent. Filthy lucre in the way of learned tomes, was the object of this renegade's search.

ELECTIONS AND THEIR BY-PRODUCTS

A pseudo radical recently remarked in a private gathering that any one who exercised his franchise, no matter in what form, was an unmitigated fool. If this remark had been made by an inmate of an insane asylum, allowances could have been made. But the man who made the statement was of more or less sound mind, of mature age, and recognized as one of Toronto's literary runners-up. For the last if for no other reason, the remark cannot be ignored.

To-day the male portion of this University has a chance to exercise their vote in the Hart House elections. How many of them are pseudo intellectuals? Former elections have shown that, fortunately for the welfare of Hart House, only a small percentage of eligible voters come under this category. We shudder to think what would be the fate of the house if these long haired intelligentsia predominated the voters' list.

It is a truism to say that one of the greatest factors in the success of Hart House is the committee system; and this system is useless if the committees are not representative, or worse still, representative of one faction. The latter is one of the greatest dangers of a system of this sort. Hitherto Hart House elections have been free of this cancer, and the greatest safe-guard to this condition is the conscientious vote of every male undergraduate.

Electioneering in the form of blotters and cigarettes takes the place of the "Baby Kissing" in political elections. Observations of former elections have forced us to the conclusion that the reaction of the student body to this sudden generosity is of three kinds.

There is the freshman, who becomes embarrassed by the unprecedented outpourings of the party cornucopia. Staggering under a load of blotters, with half a dozen cigarettes in his mouth, a cigarette behind each ear, and the Lord-knows-what in his pockets, he enters the polling booth in a daze, and hurriedly places an X opposite any name that sounds even vaguely familiar. He slips out of the door, only too glad to escape the bounteous advances of the electioneers.

Then we have the sophomore, who is frankly out for all he can get. After having walked through the swarm of gift-bestowing electioneers as many times as he has pocket space for gifts, he enters the booth, and votes the way he had intended to all along. More power to this type of voter.

Lastly there is the supercilious veteran of many campaigns who ignores completely the advances of the "rabble" in the lobby. A couple of cigarettes and perhaps a blotter is the most that he can be persuaded to accept. This type of voter has always been on too lofty a plane for our mercenary understanding.

Whatever may be the effect of these tactics as vote getters, they serve a purpose, by introducing a note of good natured rivalry to the whole election. They are fast becoming a tradition, and traditions are too few to be stifled.

CHAMPUS CAT

WHEN SISTER STARTS TO BAKE
You chaps don't half appreciate
The cooking mother does,
Just wait till sister starts to bake!
The puddin' full of fuzz,
The pie's as tough as leather—
And the cake as light as lead—
Then you'll recall with longing
The cooking mother did.

I've a sis in "Household Science"
So I guess I ought to know.
She makes such chocolate puddings
As no Christian man could go,
So when she isn't watching me
I give the cat my share,
But kitty only takes one whiff:
Praise Zeus that cats can't swear!

I throw it to the chickens
But they never take a bit
And then the cat comes snorting out
All trembling in a fit.
I hide that pudding in the barn
Untouched by hens or cats
And there it serves its destined fate
It poisons all the rats.

On special nights she buys cream
Chcese
To make some heathen sauce,
And when she drops it in the stove
I hee haw like a hoss.
She hauls it out and melts it down
And stirs in starch and glue,
That mixture when 'tis finished
Would turn red litmus blue.

We have the stuff for supper,
I get mine down for sooth,
She asks me how I like it
I say, "To tell the truth . . ."
But here she interrupts and squeals
"You mean, ungrateful pup,
If that's the way you're going to talk
You might as well shut up!"

When 'specially mean she tries French
Crisps
At least she calls them that.
They'd break the sheet metal
So again I try the cat.
He makes one grab, chips all his teeth
And snaps off half his claws
I pine for manly nourishment.
I fight a losing cause.

O it's no cinch, this life I lead!
That cooking sister does!
With pie as tough as leather
And puddin' full of fuzz!
I'm sick with indigestion
It won't be long before—

Radio Operator Has Travel Record

Trained operators in charge of radio-equipped cars in daily service on the Canadian National Railways traveled a total of 8,134,726 miles during 1928, and the most travelled operator during the twelve months was R. K. Anderson, who may well lay claim to a world's record for his performance. Mr. Anderson covered 153,065 miles on duty, a distance which represents the circumnavigation of the globe several times. This operator is usually on duty on board the International Limited, the fast daily train operating between Montreal and Chicago. Trains on eight runs on the National System carry radio equipped cars, the Canadian National Railways being the first in the world to offer radio as part of the service provided for passengers. The illustration shows Mr. Anderson seated at the receiving apparatus in a library, compartment, observation car.

VARSITY DEFEAT QUEEN'S 4-2 IN FIRST OF SENIOR O.H.A. FINALS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White senior sextette's 4-2 defeat of Queen's on the latter's ice indicates that Varsity will represent the senior series in the play-downs. The Tricolour put up a good game and threatened in the last period when "Red" Porter's hopefuls were playing two men short. The Blue have the necessary class and should make the grade at home without a great deal of difficulty. Queen's have a game fighting sextette, however, and Varsity will be extended to increase their lead here Friday night.

On advance dope the Varsity Arena should be jammed to the roof for the return game this Friday. The Tricolour play a fast, aggressive game—but the Blue are even speedier. The combination on the forward line has featured most of Toronto's wins this season. With two teams of this type opposing each other, the game should be lightning fast.

Murray Snyder played a great game in the nets last night. He has been turning in a steady, reliable effort in every game this year, but last night his goal-tending was extremely good. A great deal of credit for holding the Red, Yellow and Blue to a pair of counters is due to him.

McMullen and Harley, the "dynamite twins" of the squad, were stand-outs. The play of this pair is a treat to watch. Harley rang up a trio of tallies, while McMullen went at top speed.

FIRST AID RENDERED BY MEDICAL STUDENT

Members of the U. of T. intermediate basketball team returning from a game in Guelph via the radial, rendered valuable first aid to a woman who was seriously injured as a result of a motor car accident on the highway near Dixie last night. The road was dangerously coated with ice and the automobile swerved and turned over into the ditch. Gordon Cook, fourth year medicine student, ascertained the extent of the injuries and administered first aid until a doctor arrived.

VARSITY DEFEATED BY AGGIES 24 TO 18 IN UNLUCKY GAME

Hull Runs Amuck, Gaining Seventeen Points For O. A. C.

BLUE MEN OFF COLOUR

Game Marred by Roughness—Thirty Personal Fouls Were Called

Varsity intermediate basketball five were defeated by O.A.C. in Guelph last night 24 to 18 in a close, hard-fought struggle. Now Varsity has only a slim chance to capture the championship and it depends upon Western downing Osgoode next Thursday. The Agriculturists employed a man-for-man, five men defensive system which successfully coped with Varsity's offensive, and this largely accounts for the low score. The Blue men were off colour in their shooting and their foul shots were particularly inaccurate.

O.A.C., playing on their own floor, had no difficulty in finding the basket, and H. Hull ran wild, amassing 17 of his team's points. He let his shots go from all angles and in the first half he sank 7 baskets. Many of Hull's shots were of the lucky variety and his consistent good fortune was enough to break any team's spirit. The game was marred by too much rough play and 30 personal fouls were called.

For the first part of the initial period O.A.C. and Varsity scored basket for basket, but towards the end the sensational shooting of H. Hull enabled the Guelph team to secure a 7 point lead at the halfway mark.

In the final period Varsity gained slightly and lost out by a 24-17 tally. H. Hull fouled Brady, who quickly retaliated. Brady was ejected from the game while Hull went out on his fourth penalty.

Brady was the best of the Blue forwards, while Cock and Devitt were both effective on the defence.

Varsity—Forwards, Riggs (4); Brady (7); centre, Pasternak (2); guards, Cock (5); Devitt (2); Fox, Stevenson, Laughlin.

O.A.C.—Forwards, H. Hull (17); Hewer (4); centre, Curry (3); guards, Graham, G. Hull; subs, Griffiths, Weber, Eckert.

Securities worth $20,000,000, representing the endowment of Cornell University, are now safely locked in the vaults of the National Bank of Commerce in New York City, where they were shipped in small consignments from the office of the University Comptroller at Ithaca.

UNIVERSITY TRACK CLUB.

The University Track Club held a meeting in Hart House yesterday. It was decided to try and create more interest in relay races with the idea of eventually holding an Inter-collegiate Relay Carnival. Efforts will be made to interest the track clubs of other universities in this idea.

The following dates have been decided on for the outdoor events next fall:

Oct. 5—Interfaculty Relay Race at time of the Varsity-Western game. This event is a new idea.

Oct. 9—Interfaculty Track Meet.

Oct. 18—Interfaculty Track Meet at Toronto.

Oct. 19—Interfaculty Relay Race at half time of rugby game.

There will be no half holiday allowed for the Interfaculty meet.

The officers for this year are:
Hon. Pres.—Dr. Brown.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—J. A. Mahon
President—Wally Graham.
Vice-Pres.—W. A. Gilbert.
Secretary—L. G. King.

WOMEN IN LAW

Then only, should a woman enter law." Miss Hunter, a junior barrister of Toronto, was asked her opinion. She was vigorously optimistic.

"It is only a short time since women were admitted to the teaching profession. Now, they have swamped it. Women are gaining recognition in all fields, and why should they not be successful in law? It depends entirely on the woman herself."

Both Miss Parsons and Miss Hunter agreed that women could build up a more successful practice in a small town than in Toronto.

"There is a large practice in Toronto," concluded Miss Parsons, humorously, "for the woman who can speak Chinese. I do not offer Chinese as an alternative to starving to the woman in law, but I do advise women to think well before choosing law as a profession."

Whitehead succeeded in securing the puck repeatedly, and in lifting it up the ice, holding the Queen's attack at bay. Reist grabbed a loose puck in front of Snyder and drove it into the net, putting them within two of the Blue. Queen's pressed hard, but were unable to score before the period ended, leaving the score 4-2 for Varsity.

True Sculpture

The Work of Miss Merle Foster

It is more difficult to write about the work of a sculptor than about that of an author or a painter. The author's books may be read without going outside one's own study. A sufficient number of the painter's pictures can usually be seen by a visit to his studio. But to see a sculptor's work it is frequently necessary to do considerable wandering around. Particularly is this so in the case of those who do what is called, for the want of a better term, "commercial sculpture", because their creations are necessarily very scattered, incorporated in buildings or decorating somebody's garden.

However, it has been our habit for some years, to do considerable wandering around and noticing such things, and at the same time ascertaining if possible who had done the things which particularly impressed. Among the works of Toronto sculptors there are none which have impressed us more than those of Miss Merle Foster. The excellence of her work, coupled with the fact that she is on the staff of the University, gives her a claim on our attention.

To enumerate all the examples of Miss Foster's work which we have seen would be an almost impossible feat of memory. Among the things which stand out however, are the crests over the entrance of the Art Gallery of Toronto; the panels in the Administration Building at the Canadian National Exhibition; the lights, flower-boxes, and mantels at the Granite Club; the door-way of the Customs House at Niagara; the stone carving work on Albert College, Belleville; the drinking-fountains in the Toronto city parks; many portraits in both the round and in bas-relief; numerous book-ends, candle sticks, etc., carried out in brass, and a great variety of garden figures, bird-baths and fountains.

Miss Foster received instruction in modelling at The Ontario College of Art, and in Boston. When she decided to utilize her talent in a professional way she took stock of her accomplishments. She had learned, as a result of her school training and of practice, how to create things in a plastic medium such as clay. For the work to have any permanent value, it was necessary to reproduce the clay model in plaster—cement, or metal. She dismissed at once—as too few modellers do—the idea of letting someone else do this part of the work for her, and realized that she must learn the art of casting.

To acquire this technical knowledge, much work was necessary. Fortunately, she reached this stage of her career during the war, when positions were available which had hitherto been closed to women. She grasped at any opportunity of working in any factory or shop where something about casting might be learned. It was real work,—not at all the sort of thing one would expect a lady sculptor to be doing. The time and effort spent, however, in this purely manual labour, has borne much fruit. Not only does Miss Foster do all her own casting, but her knowledge of the art affects the development of her models so that the final result is far superior to what it would have been had not casting been considered.

One important part of Miss Foster's work is the rendering of architectural detail, and in this field, she shows a very uncommon ability to interpret in the round or in relief, the sketch in the flat, given her by an architect or designer. Her resolution of a theme expressed in the two dimensions of a plane projection, into the three dimensions of a solid mass, produces not a mere imitation, line for line, of the original drawing, but an interpretation in the terms of modelled clay, which has that sympathetic sculptural character, that can proceed only from the manipulation of highly trained and sensitive fingers, governed by an originally creative mind.

A modeller of great technical skill but limited mentality, given a drawing from which to work, would, in a very conscientious endeavour to adhere faithfully to instructions, produce something which, technically speaking, would be beyond reproach, but which, sculpturally speaking, would be lifeless. Miss Foster on the other hand, given such an indication, considers it, so to speak, as merely the title of a work, which, carried out through the medium of her own creative power, will be fully realized as a completely expressed work of original sculpture.

In this connection also, it must be remembered that the architect often has no more than a vague idea of what he wants in his detail work, and has, all too frequently, very elemental ideas of the technique, scope, and limitations of modelling. Consequently his drawing is of little assistance to the sculptor. This remark is not intended to be in any way derogatory to architects, but we have had sufficient personal experience working in a sculptor's studio, to know the ingenuity it sometimes requires to transfer the half-formed ideas of the draughtsman to the final result in plaster, cement, or cut-stone, and it is in the light of this experience that we are better able to realize the high calibre of Miss Foster's work which we can see in ever increasing amount decorating the newer buildings around Toronto and the province in general.

Several examples of this work may be seen around the University of Toronto. The drinking fountain in the University College Women's Union, with its relief representation of the college and the crest of the college is here, as are the panels on either side of the portrait in Baldwin House.

Patrons of Hart House Theatre frequently see the players wearing masks which have been built up and painted by her, and the model of the dragon used recently, so effectively in the play by the same name was from her studio.

In the production of papier-mâché work, we believe Miss Foster is alone in the field, so far as Toronto is concerned. Her largest single production in this line was in connection with the Dominion Jubilee celebration two years ago. A firm in Vancouver wished life-sized figures of the Fathers of Confederation, arranged according to the well known picture. It was a tribute to Toronto that they had to send so far to have the work satisfactorily handled. Miss Foster took the contract. Each head was separately modelled from a portrait, and, along with the hands, painted in natural colours; the bodies were constructed by various methods; and in less than six weeks, the entire thirty-four figures were ready to be sent to the costumeur. Incidentally, photographs of the models which we have seen are barely distinguishable from those of living persons.

This sketch has given only the barest suggestion of the importance of Miss Foster's contribution to the art of this country. One of her strongest convictions is that in this age, when, as she herself puts it, "People can't afford to spend their time looking at statues", it is necessary to combine the beautiful with the utilitarian. In other words, that the necessary and useful articles should be made as beautiful as possible, so that one gets aesthetic as well as practical enjoyment from their use. The converse, she holds, is also true, that, without denying beauty as an end in itself, works of art, in order to fulfil their highest destiny, should be created with some useful purpose in view. That Miss Foster is doing her part to carry out her conviction is apparent to anyone familiar with her work.

Some Recent Books

"THE WELL OF LONELINESS"

By Radclyffe Hall. (Pegasus Press)

The long-standing contention that literary censorship does more harm than good seems to be well borne out by recent experiences. We remember the case some months ago when a local book-seller was hailed into court for displaying for sale, "Power", a translation from the German of Feuchtwanger. What were the consequences to the unfortunate merchant we do not recall, but we do know that the consequences so far as the book was concerned, were an enormously increased publicity and circulation. Something of the same nature seems to be happening in regard to "The Well of Loneliness". We have been asked if we have read it about six times as frequently as we have any other recent book. We have heard it discussed more than any other recent book. We have been asked what it was about, why it was banned, who wrote it, and all the rest of it. It is for the benefit of those who are still asking that we are writing this comment.

Our first intimation that there was such a book, came from Jonathan Cape, in the form of the usual publisher's announcement. We had seen a couple of Miss Hall's earlier books and were not particularly interested. Then came the reviews in the English literary periodicals, which for the most part were more or less neutral as to the worth of the book as literature. We were still not interested. Then came "The Sunday Express". It said that the book was, "a seductive and insidious piece of special pleading for perverted decadence". The critic remarked that he would prefer to give his children a phial of prussic acid than this book, on the theory that the former "would only kill the body" while the latter "would kill the soul". The next step was an expression of opinion by the Home Secretary, and the publishers withdrew the book from circulation. The great bulk of the literary talent of England came forward in its defence.

A few weeks later we received a second publisher's announcement, this time from The Pegasus Press in Paris. It stated that while not engaged in general printing, they felt "The Well of Loneliness" merited a better fate than it had received, and they were glad to announce its immediate re-publication, "without the alteration of so much as a comma". For the sum of Twenty-five Shillings, they were to be pleased to send it at the purchaser's risk.

Apparently some copies were coming to Canada, because in the course of time the Ottawa authorities placed their ban on the book. From the number of copies circulating around the ban does not seem to have been very successful.

Not long ago, someone lent us a copy which we read. As literature, the book is not outstanding. It is neither good or bad. As to its moral harmfulness we do not feel competent to judge. To us it seems incapable of doing any harm, and possibly capable of doing much good. The controversial point is, of course, that the book deals with the question of sexual inversion. Outside of medical literature—which incidentally it is our business to read—we have seen the matter discussed only once before. That was in Mr. Seymour Hicks' excellent little book, "Difficulties". That a serious problem exists in England in regard to this subject cannot be gainsaid. Whether it does harm to spread information regarding an existing condition is the debatable point. It is, apparently, for governments and sensation-seeking popular newspapers to decide. We feel, however, that without the publicity from these two sources, the book would never have become as well known as it is.

We believe that, with this issue we are inaugurating a totally new scheme in the Newspaper world. We have two front pages. Why? for two reasons. We get a bigger take-off from our advertisers for front page space, and secondly, two front pages are better than one. Also we thought it was rather funny. But this was not the main reason.

Special to "The Varsity"
Birdseye Centre—The marriage took place on Feb. 30 of Anemia Petunus, the only daughter of Mme. de la Rue and her husband, to Algernon Eustace, scion of the house of Hogs. The bride looked charming in a confection of satinette with a veil of tears. The groom wore georgette B.V.D.'s trimmed with échure lace with sox to match and a charming ensemble of crope romaine in bois de rose. His Nordic swarthinness showed up well against the Latin fairness of the bride, who has long been known as "la belle dame des trottoirs". The bridesmaid wore a picture hat of velvet—the attracted much attention by the classic simplicity of her costume.

During the ceremony the organ played "havoc" and the bride's mother wept high, wide and handsome, she wore a robe de bain in three shades of white.

Cheval a la carte and Pluto Water figured largely in the bountiful repast supplied by the groom's aunts. All the guests appeared and scarcely noticed when the happy couple left for Mimico. The groom travelled in a smart creation of beige silk with hat to match. The bride travelled in a motor—vintage '09.

The young couple have the best wishes and I.O.U.'s of a host of friends. When they return they will reside at Wineclift.

THIS ELECTION SOLD SAYS MUM G. BUM

Where is the Purity—The Pure Chastity Of Yester-Year

DEFEATED UNSULLIED

"This election has been sold!" charged Mumpford G. Bumble, U.C. candidate for the Bar Committee in the Hart House election, when interviewed by "The Varsity" early this morning.

"Graft! Votes have been bought wholesale in the most flagrant and unashamed manner," alleged Mr. Bumble, throwing his arms around the chandelier and biting the leg of the table viciously.

Mr. Bumble, who was the unofficial candidate of Beta Hapha Egg, local professional jazz-singing fraternity, went on to charge that each of the eight candidates who had been elected to the Bar Committee had been guilty of distributing El Ropo cigars to the voters on their way to the polls.

"And not only cigars," thundered Mr. Bumble, scratching the back of his tonsils in wrighteous wrath, "but lollipops and all-night suckers were handed out with the most blatant insinuations. The term 'free and independent electors' has become an empty mockery and a farce!"

"Into our midst has stalked the grim and grimy figure of Tammany ward politics, with all the worst connotations of the term," screeched the aroused candidate.

"What—what—what has become of last year's snows? Where is the purity, the chastity, of yester-year?"

Mr. Bumble, obviously overcome by the force of his catarrh, blew his nose violently. Resuming, he declared: "I shall not be satisfied until I see this election run over again—and run clean."

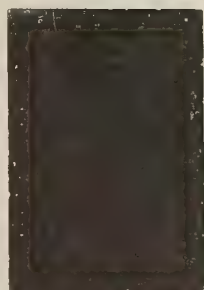

When asked his opinion of the general tone of the posters used in the campaign, Mr. Bumble said: "I consider them merely another indication of the depths to which we have descended. If we must exchange vice for votes, in the name of the immortal gods let us do without the votes!"

"I did," he added.

The defeated candidates were the only ones who could legitimately claim to have come out of the contest unsullied, claimed Mr. Bumble.

Arts sophs were last week found guilty and fined by the Queen's Alma Mater Society in the investigation following the recent Barfield fracas in which sophomores broke up a freshman hop, causing considerable damage to private property.

Hart House Debate Proves

"BRULE TANNIA"

The Hart House Debate, held last evening in the photographic darkroom, was a tremendous success as witness the paucity of the crowd. Hundreds were turned away. The motion, "Resolved that it is not in the best interests of the community that simians use Free Speech," was upheld by the affirmative.

Elber M. Gelbon took exception to everything that was said. In a speech lasting half the night, he cried that simian fraternities tend to create snobs. These snobs are snobbish, he said, and most of them are snobs. Elber also said, in a metaphor, that the Free Speech of simians reminded him of his own, that is, he would always like to be free to speak.

Crea McCharles was the second speaker, coming after the first one. He was the second speaker to speak.

McCharles, the next speaker after Gelbon said that he was more versed in simian culture than the first speaker. (The first speaker was Gelbon.) "Nevertheless, after close fellowship with zoo residents, I am lead to believe that the zoo is the harbour of traitors to the glorious Anadack nation. One ape actually muttered something like Anadack and then spat out a peanut shell with a demoniacal grin. I then skipped away with my mind still dwelling on the treacherous act which Oswald had committed at the spiny for monkeys."

Professor K. M. Mazzei, the chairman, then related how his dear brother G. Gunn, a gorilla, had turned into a rolling stone with no moss at hand; and never was heard of again. Everybody wept at the sad story of Gunn. Just then, some monkey-tricks were performed, and the debate closed, with "Brule Tannia".

TO THE LAST DITCH!

This paper has always stood for progress and the amelioration of the burden under which members of this University groan. The editorial board felt therefore that, as the term is now fast drawing to a close, and as yet we have reformed nothing, it behooved us to "get hot". After considerable thought, a glaring malpractice was unearthed, and with this issue we intend to make a firm stand. Something has been slowly making inroads toward the heart of our University since its inception in—well, quite a bit before our time; something which threatens the happiness of over five thousand (count 'em) undergraduates, a ghastly shadow which looms over one's whole University course, tingling the roscate hopes of youth with a murky ochre. And we, your 'il paper have set ourselves to face this shadow, armed only with our 'il Remington portable (adv't). Dramatic, you must admit.

We, the staff of "The Varsity" feel that the greatest drawback to collegiate happiness here on earth is examinations. At a meeting of the whole staff held recently we passed six votes of non-confidence in examinations in as many minutes—but that's another story. This significant gesture is in keeping, we thought, with the modern spirit of revolt so prevalent in modern youth, and we intend to support it to the full. Our Underwood portables (Adv't) will not be laid down until this evil has been wiped out, (pass the bottle, Toughy!), wiped out.

Students, we are martyrs in your cause. Give us a hand-out. Board of Governors, we defy you!! Come clean with a decent proposition, and we'll let you up!

Art, Music and Drama

H.C. Players Gilded

Yesterday afternoon at 5.02 sharp the curtain, after considerable difficulty, rose on Miss Maujaway Jynes' presentation of "Moria Monk". This famous one-act play deals with difficulties of an Irish glassblower when she is confronted with the problem of "Should she ask him in?" The play abounds with good clean fun but the scene in the Queen's Hall dormitories is a trifle sordid. The big moment of the play is reached when the heroine, alone and unaided on the huge iceberg answers back to the villain. "But why do you hush me?" The cast, when sober, were very good, Miss Eleanor Bitten as "Lulu, the Sewing Machine Girl" layed them in the aisles. Baul

Garters, as both butlers carried a large part extremely well but was rather weak in the scene where he discovered that he wasn't himself after all, but that it must have been two other people. Prof. Bail, as a blood hound in the first scene and two blood hounds in the second gave a capable performance, marred only by a tendency to scratch. Coward Lindsay as Two Shouts Without was very convincing. Miss Jean Downs as Little Mimi was stuporously good in the big scene where she cries "Oh, poppa, not in this terrible snowstorm."

Great things by small men here on earth below
Where lofty spires all raise their towering brows
Are often done; and yet forsooth I know
And yet man's inhumanity to man
Will thus bedew with Jove's ambrosia
Yon snowy flock trips by on silken wing.
Thy glitt'ring forelock; thy country bemoans
Thy fate, but better far to lie unwept
In far-off fields. Hold high thy torch;

Winnipeg, March 5—Thirty thousand tons of Siberian railway material will shortly make its first journey towards the Orient. This material having been stored for the past thirteen years in the Canadian Pacific Railway Coquitlam yards at Vancouver, was a reminder of the revolution in Russia.

This is part of a shipment of approximately 60,000 tons. One half was delivered prior to the outbreak, while the balance was on its way being automatically stopped when news of Russia's condition was known. The first movement of this steel is going forward on the S.S. Alabama Maru, and 1,500 tons now is being loaded for shipment to Japan. The material which consists of trucks and steel framing for box cars, may be used on the wide gauge North China roads, in Shantung province near the Siberian border or for scrap.

SPECTATORS RUDELY RIOT DURING INTERCOLLEGIATE CRICKET

The Varsity is Biased
To the Editor or whoever is responsible for
"The Varsity".

Dear Sir—
May I ask why the biased policy existing in the Varsity. I am a student and as such have the interest of all the varied intellectual efforts of the undergraduates at least now why, Mr. Editor do you feature some events on the campus to the neglect of others? You were quick in featuring any social happening at S.P.S.—the weekly hops at Victoria receive their space. When Trinity College stages an evangelistic revival it gets its space, as is also the case when the panel delegate visited Knox. Now when you "play up" these minor festivities, why did you neglect the "Sale of work" held in our college during the previous week. The boys spent much time and energy on producing the very best in the now vanishing art of needlework. It might interest you to know that our friend Nap Hilbert won first prize for his patch-work quilt—done in Monarch yarns, and the tea cozy contest was won by Francis Xavier O'Flannigan. This was a worthy work in a worthy cause and was sponsored by Bishop Flinger and directed by the sons of that eminent divine. It is sacrilegious and purely prejudicial to overlook these brighter spots in a student's life and I sincerely trust that this will not happen again.
Yours fraternally,
A believer in Wycliffe.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Q.—Dear Sir: I am considering applying as manager of a certain well-known team for season 1929-30. I have had no experience in this line and am doubtful if my tender will be accepted. Should I apply?

A.—By all means, you are just the type of man they are looking for. We assume, of course, you have vested interests.

Q.—Dear Ed.: I hear that next fall there will be an interfaculty quod tournament. I think that for games of this importance we should have an imported referee. Has any appointment been made as yet?—Regina

A.—Not as far as we know. It is likely that Detroit will furnish the official.

Q.—Mr. Editor: In your long years of witnessing sporting events, what spectacle impressed you the most? —Gaspard McGuffey.

A.—Personally the biggest thrill I ever got in this line was last fall when I rolled over to see a game in which Senior U.C. was to oppose some lesser centre of light and learning. When I arrived U.C. had not appeared on the field. Thereupon I crossed over to witness a near-by game when suddenly I heard the old Unee-Unee (Who in — composed that—masterpiece?) On turning around there was the U.C. team all wearing sweaters and stockings of the same colour. When I revived I was carried into Hart House and it was an hour before I felt equal to any task greater than lifting a bowl of ye old H.H. I o'clock soup. On asking one of the fair sporting ladies what was her most vivid impression, the answer was—McGill vs. Varsity water polo at Hart House several years ago.

CHAMPUS CAT
IMPRESSIONS
Arts—Any first year essay on "Why I Came To College"? Yeah?
School—"Drink rum! Drink rum! I!" Poor misguided youth.
Med.—Tonsilectomy, stiffs, rotten stonies; i.e. Shop, or being interpreted, Boloney.
Theology—A queer combination of piety and general aich-ee-double-ell.
Household Science—Some poor devils are going to have chronic belly ache.

Ladies and gentlemen, (if any), the next number will be a Cat Talk. This number is not a Whoopee Dance, but a Poor Puss Blues. Yeah, it's the last lament of a very sad cat.
C—C

THE LAST LAMENT

Oh! I am a foolish cat,
But I don't care who knows it,
For the world doesn't mean a thing to me.
I'm as crazy as a bat,
And I talk right through my hat,
And my name is Champus Cat, Eee Pee.

Oh! I have a little twin,
He's a wiser cat than I,
For he wears big glasses, tweedle dee.
He's as funny as the devil,
And he's always on the level,
And his name is Champus Cat, Eee Tee.

Now we two kittens
Are an awful combination,
(As I'm sure you all will agree)
For although we both are twins,
We are not as like as pins,
And we sure do scrap shamefulee.

Now to-day I'm very sad,
And I've got a darn goo dreason,
For my time is nearly up, tweedle dee.
And even as I write
I'm in really sorry plight
When I think of what an ass is Pee.

For my twin has got the laugh
On his crazy bug-house brother,
Just because he is wise, as you see.
For while this is my last,
Not until to-morrow's past
Will you hear no more from twin cat Tee

So this is my last farewell,
And I know it isn't funny,
For how can a dumb cat hope to be.
But I hope if in the Summer

YOU'D THINK YOU WERE PLAYING BALL

The Big Cricket Test Draws Its Many Thousands Also

THE YEAST SONG

The annual cricket test (spectators' endurance) match between Varsity and McGill to decide the Intercollegiate championship and possession of the "Bronzed Lady" began at the Varsity Stadium yesterday.

Although the game was scheduled to commence at two p.m., by ten in the morning the stands were jammed and a constantly increasing line-up for standing room had got under way at six the previous evening. Among those noticed in the grandstand were Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Bernard Shaw, Gene Tunney, "Red" Grange, H. L. Mencken, "Bill" Thompson (extra special invitation) and Sylvia Pankhurst.

When the Big Blaw team led by Captain Duxge trotted on the field with their bats over their shoulders and a cup of tea in their left hand, the stands rose to a man and poured out the traditional "Yeast Song".

Immediately prior to hostilities the 46th annual six day bicycle race between Varsity and Western was started. It is expected that the finish of both events will coincide.

While the rival captains were rolling for ins or outs, Nelly, the ancient and honourable mascot, was wheeled out on her favourite hearth and made a circle of the oval while the Varsity Band (traced and recovered by the Pinkertons) played "After the Ball".

Varsity won the toss and McGill kicked but the head umpire, Rudyard Kipling, who had just handled a soccer game, promptly reprimanded them. McGill opened with the strong Red pair, E. C. Twiddle-Dumphries and Cholmondoley Rottingham Puffer. Dumphries could do little with the delivery of Bill Bangs, Varsity's "goody" bowler and succumbed to a high-ball on the second swivel. He was replaced by Fitz Arthur Tootley, who drove the first ball to deep leg where Weldonne made the catch. Weldonne was severely censured by the Blue coach for being out of the conventional position, thus being able to get under the ball. "You'd think you were playing baseball," snapped the coach. After two hours and a half of play McGill had scored 27 runs for 3 wickets. The stumps were drawn for tea and the crowd amused itself by community singing.

When play resumed McGill held up well. Finally Wounds set up an off leg service bowling Puffer, who retired amid thunderous applause. The umpires thereupon decided to pull the stumps.

The match will be continued to-morrow morning at ten.

You should chauce to meet a dumber,
You will please remember poor Eee Pee.
C—C

Sad case, Cat.
C—C

And now, no matter what doesn't happen, you won't get another chance to laugh with or at, (chiefly at) one.
Eee Pee.

LADY NELSON FIRST OF NEW FLEET

Five well-designed, well-conditioned steamers are under construction for the Canadian National Steamships for services between Canadian Atlantic ports, the West Indies and British Guiana, and Bermuda, the Bahamas and Jamaica. The first of these vessels will be known as the "Lady Nelson" and will be ready to inaugurate the service at the close of this year. These steamers will engage in the passenger, cargo and mail service, offering superior accommodation for tourists and travelers and ample provision for the carriage of general freight and refrigerator goods.

The steamers will be 438 feet over all, 59 feet 3 inches extreme breadth, maximum draught 24 feet, gross tonnage 7650 tons and a service speed of 14 knots. They will be operated by the Canadian National Steamships in connection with the trade agreement made by the Canadian Government and the Governments of the Islands. The hulls will be painted white, with red boot topping, and the funnel in three bands of red, white and blue.

UNIFORMS FOR S.A.C. IS CAUSE OF RIOT

Agitation For Years Results
In Action For Men
On Committees

"WANNA UNIFORM" CRY

At a special meeting of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C., it was decided to buy uniforms for all members of Hart House Committee. The motion, which received little opposition, was the result of much agitating for several years.

E. M. Harry, U.C., thought that the idea was sound enough, but wasn't "Suitable", (Cries of "throw him out")

A long discussion followed on the colour of these uniforms. Pink with yellow spots scattered nonchalantly over the surface was the suggestion of H. R. Gerkin, who thought that this would be particularly suitable, in view of the recent change in the complexion of the Hart House cheese. Here the meeting was interrupted by Miss Markes who asked "Even on special occasion?" It was decided not.

The Question of material was brought up by A. G. B. Urns, who favoured asbestos. (Cries of "Wanna uniform" from Miss Markes. It was decided not.) J. A. Marshall moved that the uniforms consist of white duck pants, with a blue sweater. The motion was lost.

At this point A. H. Fairy pointed out that this matter was, after all, not under the jurisdiction of the Council at all. He was thrown out. After his retirement it was decided that there was something in what the last speaker had said, and as the meeting wished to eat the Council adjourned.

When interviewed by "The Varsity" afterwards, Miss Markes stated, "I did wanna uniform so."

Special to "The Faculty"

This here Podunk Siding World Cronlicher had heered as how things was urty hot down in the Green City of Torontoy. So we sent our best reporter down to find out if it was as bad as it sounded. We think as how yez would maybe like to know what the results was. These is them, in the presaked word of our best reporter, as told to us.

"When I come to arrive in that there Green City, I cuden't see as how it was sech a heck of a lot hotter than up hear in Podunk Siding. So I made me some tactful investigashuns. Thom what I investigated sayed as how I should ought to go up to the unversity. I went. I cuden't see sech a heck of a lot of difrence. But purty soon I seed as how them there stewdents was rushin around at a heck of a rate. So I axed them what the heck it was al about. They told me as how they was gettin hot on account of them dengen exams wus so consarned close. Leastways that is the nearest I cin come to their presat words, on account of my consunths prickles me to think on the presat ones. But anyways, I cuden't see why these here exams should ought to make them get so hot. Fer, says I, "heck, I ain't hot nohow."

Which all goes to show that there cin be some tactual great difrences in how peopls looks at things. Fer here our best reporter caint find nuth in ununsual in the heat down thar, which should ought to make them stewdents git so "consarned" hot. We would like to know some more about this, and perhaps, if yew wud print this in yer colyums, it wud stur sumthin so we cud git some real interestin news efer our paper.

TORONTO GLUE CLUB HAS SINGING VOICES

"I'm a Bum-Bum" Beats Out
"Look Ye Saints"
By Inches

STOP PRESS!

It was ascertained at a late hour last night that final organization of a University of Toronto Glue Club was made at a mass meeting held in the Porter's Lodge of Wyckville College. The organization will be known by the novel name of "The University of Toronto Glue Club."

After a very enthusiastic business discussion, it was decided to have a try-out, "right then and there" as one person so aptly put it. At first there was some confusion, as everybody wanted to sing a different song. However, a compromise was decided on and everyone sang what they wanted, in their favourite key. After half an hour, three basses from Trinity, singing "Look ye Saints", and two sopranos from S.P.S. rendering "Hallelujah, I'm a Bum-bum" were the only contestants left in the field. At time of going to press, it looks as if the School men would have a little the edge on the Hoskinites. The latter seem a little weak, and are taking longer and longer pauses between each verse.

STOP PRESS—President Falconer declined at 8.23 this morning to accept the Presidency of the newly formed "U. of T. Glue Club."

"I FAW DOWN"

Sappho was a—hic—typical school-girl, spluttered Professor Chienchaud of the University of Idarake (that's a deep one) in his address to the Superannuated Waitresses of Hart House, in the Smoking Room at Wymwood yesterday.

This famous poetess, the professor asserted, was in her day as popular as a chessterfield at the Hart House Masquerade. In appearances she was dark, chiefly from the bruises inflicted by the boy friends' wives. One of her quaint whims was to eat garlic so she could be easily found in the dark. The little rascal's disposition was said to be so mean that at every Christmas she gave her grandmother a football. Sappho number is not known (pun). Her earliest efforts in literature was in writing little verses on back fences. Her first book was entitled "Elsie's School Days", or "What Happened to the Boy Allies at S.P.S." Her second book which was immensely popular, was "A Chorus Girl's Mistake", or "Who Paid the Rent". The professor, who was by this time hiccuping violently, then recounted several charming anecdotes of this justly popular poetess among which was the cheerful little one about the two tra-

SOME CENSORED

Student opinion around the Campus was certainly united in regard to the recent suggestion of Cardinal Wolsey. When asked by "The Varsity" if, they in any sense of the word, were, the following significant answers were received:

H. M. Hemmiltstein, 3rd year Meds: "Whaddya mean?"

Don "Skilmp" Smith, 6th year Arts: "Well, I am and then again I am not."

Pat Hoffman, Occ: "If it wasn't that you have a good natured face, I'd take the question as an insult."

M. Grant, 5th, S.P.S.: "I have just demolished forty beers. Don't bother me."

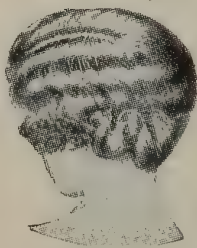

R. de Smith-Smith: (Censored by the night Editor).

These opinions all looked at the question from the same angle. An original aspect of it was presented by Howe LaFrance, who thought that if the proposition had any merit whatsoever, it could stand on its own legs. Several questioned by the reporter, blushed, and made off. However, the general consensus of opinion would indicate that the matter was too trivial for consideration by mature and cultured people.

Maidenly Modesty Moves Mightily More Than Master Managers

Peter was working overtime. The Muses had done it all, he thought; at least he was going to blame it on them in his official report. They had swept down on a great centre of learning by the shores of Lake Ontario, and destroyed every man, woman, and child in it between dusk and dawn. "But why?" said Peter to the Muses.

"Because," replied the Muses with one accord, "because they trifled with us. We blew the petals of a rose and found that these students loved us not. Their campus was no centre of learning, but a green to dance upon, or else a morass of slimy pseudo-intellectuality—we're not quite sure which."

But at this moment the police shouted to the Muses to move back, for another consignment of the students was arriving.

At the head came one who carried a note-book and pencil.

"I'm not to be quoted," said Peter wearily.

"Look here, Pete," said the student, "we have affidavits signed by sixty college presidents and forty prime ministers and four thousand ministers as well as the vote at the last Hart House Debate to show that you should let us by."

"Lay off that stuff," said Peter (who had become hard-boiled since the night before). "If youse guys want to get by, you need to answer one question of mine. Everybody answers."

"Our last examination," whispered an M. and P. half-wit at the back of the line.

To each one of those that filed by him, Peter addressed one question. And to each he gave a ticket. Around the corner they were caught on an escalator that led no one knew whither.

"What were you?" Peter would say. "I was ye scribe of the Dentalat-homecomm," said one.

"I was President of the Womensubgraduateassociation," said a third.

"I was Publicitymgr of the Neckers-club," said a child of journalistic leanings.

And thus they passed by. And to each of them Peter gave a ticket that meant trouble. But they knew it not. At last there came one who said with shame: "I was nothing."

And unto him Peter gave a ticket marked: Pass.

Annual Dental Night at Hart House Theatre Has Thirteen Skits

THE HILENT SOUSE

"Nonsense Among the Dense" Fifth Year Skit And Impersonations

Hart House Theatre was filled last night for the production of "Dentantics". The programme was a long one, thirteen skits of varying lengths comprising the bill. The curtain rose on a nurses' skit "All the world loves a lover", which portrayed the difficulties encountered by a chap disguised as a new pupil in a young ladies' finishing school.

The first year was a scene laid in the camping ground of a bunch of hoboos. The third year skit was concerned with the activities of a huge "Television" radio which occupied the centre of the stage and from which the various radio entertainers visualized by the machine emerged. Next the co-eds presented a mystery playlet entitled "The Hilent Souse", which dealt with the adventures of a young man forced to spend the night in a haunted house. The fifth year skit vast fortune left him by an uncle. The fourth year presented a short farce "And the Clock Struck One" which depicted the trials of a trio of travellers forced to spend the night in a haunted house. The fifty year skit closed the programme and was entitled "Nonsense Among the Dense", intermingled with their major skits were numerous extras. The first of these, "A la Ken Murray", given by the first

BOBBIE KERR TELLS OF OLYMPIC FEATS

Wycliffe Athletic Annual Dinner Has Famous Sprinter For Guest

PICTURES PROVE SUCCESS

The annual banquet of Wycliffe College Athletic Association was held last evening in the College hall. Following the toast to the King, Messrs. A. J. Jackson, M.A., and R. O. Wilkes proposed the toasts to "The College" and "Athletes", respectively, which were aptly responded to by Messrs. J. M. McWhinney, B.A., and Dean Horan.

The honoured guest and speaker of the evening, Mr. "Bobbie" Kerr, world champion 200 metre Olympic sprinter, 1908, gave an illustrated address showing the remarkable achievements of the athletes representing Canada at the Olympic games in the past summer.

The success of the evening is attributed to the efforts of the Executive of the Association composed of the following: President E. W. G. Worral, Vice-President R. O. Wilkes, Secretary C. J. Draper, Assistant Secretary F. J. Coleman, and Curator W. G. Langhorn.

Norman J. De Witt Elected Editor

Norman J. DeWitt, III, Victoria, was elected yesterday afternoon by the Varsity Staff, as their candidate for the position of Editor-in-Chief, for the year 1929-30. Mr. DeWitt was elected on the second ballot, after a close contest.

In the election of Managing Editor that followed, Wilfred Sanders, III, Trinity, was the popular choice, but as Mr. Sanders has since declared that he does not desire the position, does not intend to forward his application to the Joint Executive of the Students, this position is as yet without applicants.

All recommendations for positions on the Varsity must be accepted by the Joint Executive.

CULTURE CONSISTS OF WEARING TOP HAT

Interesting Discoveries by Women in Interfaculty Debate

AMERICAN INFLUENCE?

"Culture consists of wearing a top-hat", and "one can get a degree in the States in 9 pins", "Boston is the centre of English culture in the United States". These were interesting facts gleaned at a rather dull debate held at Loretto Abbey College on Wednesday night. The subject which brought out these statements was "Resolved that Canada derives her cultural inspiration from the U.S. rather than the British Isles." The government was defeated on the motion, 14-18.

The speakers for the opposition referred learnedly to works which they had apparently not read, and showed an amazing knowledge of the reference shelves.

The speakers for the affirmative were Misses Westerman and Axford, for the negative, Misses Lyons and Harris.

Misses Radigan, Doran, McMillan and Roussele spoke from the floor. Miss Roussele made one of the few intelligent speeches of the evening anent the indigenous Canadian culture of Quebec.

SENSATION VARIETY DOSTOEVSKY IDEAL SAYS PROF. DAVIS

Russian Novelist Analysed And Found To Hate Formality

ESSENTIALLY AN EXPLORER

A Great Story Teller But Without Artistic Perfection In Form

"The unusual material in novels of this great Russian novelist finds explanation in the author's own life and environment," declared Prof. Davis in his lecture on Dostoevsky yesterday afternoon.

Born in Moscow, he lost both parents at an early age. At 28 he was arrested by Revolutionists, led out to execution, only to be granted a reprieve at the last moment. "The letters and diary of the author's second wife give only a too painful record of his life," said Professor Davis.

Hardships in Siberia increased the intensity of the author's epileptic attacks. Financial difficulties forced him to sell works before they were perfected. So his novels lack artistic perfection, yet do not lack in intensity. "I can never control my material. That is my greatest torment." Dostoevsky adopts the attitude of a Swift against those who are too satisfied with themselves and conditions under which they live.

"Give him economic prosperity . . . and man will play you some trick . . . He will do anything to show that man is not a piano key." This is the author's conception of life.

Novels of Dostoevsky convey a sense of tragedy. His peculiar genius consists in ability to present vivid pictorialization by means of monologue or soliloquy. Fantastic elements in his

INVESTIGATION DELAYED BUT NOT SHELVED DECLARES PRESIDENT OF S.A.C. AT MEETING

G. MacGillivray States That Illness of President Has Retarded Caput Action

BUT INVESTIGATION COMING

"We are not at all responsible for the delay that has occurred in the considering of the Joint Executive's recommendation that there be an investigation into the constitution of the executive and into the methods of student government in the university," declared Mr. George MacGillivray in a statement he issued to "The Varsity" after yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Joint Executives of the Students' Administrative Councils.

Mr. MacGillivray went on to explain that due to the illness of Sir Robert Falconer, there had been no meeting of the Caput during the past three weeks. It is the Caput that is to act on the recommendation that there be an investigation. At yesterday's meeting there had been a general desire expressed that the investigation go forward with as much speed as possible.

"We desire to avoid the slightest appearance of trying to shelve this matter," continued Mr. MacGillivray, who is president of the Council. "It is generally felt that such an important matter must not be allowed to drop. Mr. MacGillivray made this statement as a result of the expressed wish of the Executive.

The judges for the contest were Miss Laila C. Scott, Rev. Dr. Maclellan and Prof. S. M. Adams.

IN KOREA, GOVERNOR IS THE WHOLE CHEESE

So Says Mrs. Induk Kim To S.C.A. in Women's Union Speech

"In Korea, the Governor General is the whole cheese!" So stated Mrs. Induk Kim of Korea at the S.C.A. noon address Wednesday at the Women's Union.

Mrs. Induk Kim deplored the fact that since 1911, Korea has been a Japanese colony. "Government is an absolute monarchy. Every office is filled by Japanese, and this same monopoly of office is seen in industry."

Mrs. Kim gave an idea of the crowded and congested population of Korea by comparing Canada, with three people to the square mile, and her country, with four hundred people to the square mile. The climate varies. The winters are much like those of Canada. Tourists say that Korea is a "Switzerland in the East." Korean customs differ as much from Canadian customs as night from day.

"I might call myself a pioneer in marriage," said the speaker. "I chose my own husband, while most Korean women have their marriages arranged for them.

DINOSAUR DENOTES ANIMAL THAT RUNS DECLARES W. A. PARKS

Many Kinds of Ancient Animals Come Under The Term

SLIDES TO ILLUSTRATE

Open Meeting of Trinity College Science Club Held Last Night

"Dinosaurs" was the subject of a lecture given by Dr. W. A. Parks at the open meeting of Trinity College Science Club in Trinity College library last night at 8.15 p.m.

Dr. Parks explained that there is no such thing as a dinosaur but that the term, which simply means a terrible lizard, is used to denote a diverse assemblage of animals which stood up on their legs and ran, which fact distinguished them from other reptiles. Geology, the study of the earth, is as much a study of history as a scientific subject and the various divisions of geological time may be called chapters which are grouped into books, every layer of rock being a page in this history. The principle pages are those left by the sea in its advances over the land. The most important legible characters are the plants and animals in the rocks and by these a record of life on the earth long ago is revealed. By the continual wearing away of the land by the sea, new layers were formed on the sea-bed and perpetual destructive processes went on.

Creatures died and their bodies sank to the bottom of the sea where debris from the land covered them and after movements of the land took place the remains of the creatures were left in the condition in which they are found to-day.

Dinosaurs were the most spectacular of the animals which dominated the earth for one hundred and fifty million years and it is difficult to explain what part they played in the Divine plan of the universe. There are various theories which account for their disappearance but these are unsatisfactory.

The lecture was illustrated by lantern slides of an expedition sent out by this university under Dr. Parks to southern Alberta, which is the most prolific hunting ground for dinosaurs in the world. Dr. Parks also explained the difficult task of removing a specimen.

LE COCHON

Grognon, mais familier comme si nous l'avions gardé ensemble, tu fources le nez partout et tu marches autant avec lui qu'avec les pattes.

Tu caches sous des oreilles en feuilles de betterave petits yeux cassés. Tu as de longs poils comme elle, comme elle la peau et claire et une courte queue bouclée.

Et les méchants t'appellent: Sale Cochon!

Il s'en dit que, si rien ne te dégoûte, tu dégoûtes tout le monde et que tu n'aimes que l'eau de vaisselle grasse. Mais ils te calomnient.

Qu'ils te débarbouillent et tu auras bonne mine.

Tu te négliges par leur faute. Comme on fait ton lit, tu te couches, et la malpropreté n'est que ta seconde nature.

SMOKE WITHOUT FLAME?

The "Free speech for College Newspapers" slogan is having an airing at McGill now. From that University come joyous reports of "a changed constitution", which will allow the Editor-in-Chief of the undergraduate daily free scope to say what he pleases, without interference from those in authority. Great stuff! Is this the dawn of a new era in College journalism? Are the bonds under which former Editors suffered (funnily enough) in silence to be broken at last? We can see future historians labelling this age as "The Emancipation of Student Life".

From now on, we will watch the columns of "The McGill Daily" with more interest than ever. It ought to be exciting. Nothing less than a slanderous attack on individual members of the Senate will satisfy us now. Now that the Editor may say what he pleases, what will he say? It must be something drastically different from what he said before, else they would never have felt the pressure of the iron hand of government.

What is the duty of the College press after all. Is it to present to the not very interested student body, the Editors personal views on what he considers interesting topics? Or are the Editorial columns supposed to voice, as far as lies in the power of the Editor, the opinion of the mass? Surely the latter; for, interesting as the particular Editor's opinions may be, do they merit devoting the time and expense necessary to the publishing of a daily paper?

Let us assume then that an Undergraduate daily is supposed to voice more or less the opinion of the Undergraduates. Then obviously the best means of gauging this opinion is through a student's council. Where, then, does freedom of the paper come in? It is obvious that a paper is much more a slave when it represents the opinion of one, and only one individual, than when it is more or less indicative of the major trend in student thought.

Nevertheless, McGill is to be congratulated on having freed herself if she considered herself enslaved before. But what we are looking for is results. What will the paper be able to say now that it could not say formerly? We will watch with interest.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The subject to be debated Monday night by the visiting Marquette debaters and the U. of T. team is one admirably suited to a discussion between representatives of Canada and the United States. Government control of water power, is, (in view of developments in Quebec) a subject which is occupying the minds of all men active in public affairs.

With this issue, the regular publication of "The Varsity" ceases. There will be two special issues on Friday, March 15th and 22nd. Contributors are asked to govern themselves accordingly.

CENSORSHIP IDEA MENACE TO HONESTY

"It is becoming more and more apparent every day that certain elements among the forces of reaction and prudery in this country are clamouring with louder and ever louder voices for the establishment of some sort of federal book censorship in the holy name of a morality dead and buried these fifty years," states Felix Walter, one of the editors of "The Canadian Mercury", in the February number of that publication.

An enormous supply of "Cat" material has accumulated. And only three more issues! So here goes:

As a pun
You're a bun
Climb in the oven
And get well done.

And the following are from our old friend, Laurie B:
The judge was killed—A tear blinded mine eye:
He was as good a judge as gold could buy.

Her teeth are like the stars; not for their light—
But just because the stars come out at night.

And here's one from School:
OH—YOU BRUTE!
Do you believe me when I tell you I adore you—

When I tell you that I think your form divine?
Do you believe me when I say I'm mad about you—
When I say I hope someday to make you mine?
Do you believe me when I say I idolize you—

When I tell you that I hope to win you soon?
Do you believe me when I tell you that I love you?
Well, if you do, you're crazy as a loon!

WESTERN UNIVERSITY TO HOLD REUNION

Takes Place in October After First Western-Varsity
Tilt

Announcement was made this week in Toronto by Cecil L. Snyder, President of the Toronto Branch of the University of Western Ontario Alumni Association, that arrangements had been completed whereby the largest Western "U" reunion in the history of the university will be held next October in the Royal York Hotel. The announcement followed weeks of negotiation on the part of the leader of the large group of graduates now living in Toronto.

CANADIAN BILL AT HART HOUSE THEATRE

Premier Presentation of three-act comedy by Toronto playwright

The climax of a successful season will be reached by the Hart House players when on March 14, 15, and 16, they will present their Canadian bill. For this event, which is always especially interesting from the local point of view, giving presentation as it does to new material by a native author, a three-act comedy by Merrill Denison, Toronto journalist and feature writer of note, has been chosen. In his new play, "Contract", Mr. Denison has deliberately turned aside from the homey settings of his former successes, from the habitat of the settler and the backwoodsman, and demonstrated his ability to find satirical comedy in sophisticated surroundings. "Contract" is a society play dealing with the timely subject of stocks and speculation. A carefully selected cast includes: George Patton, Tommy Taylor, Victor Hobbes, W. P. Schutte, H. E. Hitchman, V. E. Banks, Cathleen Conolly, Frances Dockrill, Nella Jelfers, Elizabeth Fergie, a young Toronto artist whose work is attracting increasing attention. There will be four performances of the play which will be produced under the direction of Mr. Carroll Atkins, Director of Hart House Theatre.

VARSITY TAKES TWO GOAL LEAD INTO QUEEN'S GAME TO-NIGHT

SENIOR O.H.A. TITLE AT STAKE TO-NIGHT

Varsity Has Two Goal Lead And Is Confident Of Result

QUEEN'S WILL FIGHT

To-night at the Varsity Arena Varsity plays Queen's in the return game to decide the Senior O.H.A. title. On past performances the Blue and White ought to increase their two-goal lead gained down at Kingston last Tuesday night, but come what may this Tricolour team will be in there fighting tooth and nail right up to the final gong. The Blue are not likely to allow Queen's to bring the play to them, but will be out with all they have to pull out a decisive win.

This year the Varsity team boasts as smart a hockey combination as has been seen for many years at this seat of learning. The Harley-McMullen-Stewart forward line trio form one of the best attacking divisions seen in action this season. They are all "old colours" with a wealth of experience behind them and by this time their combination play is highly developed, and a treat to watch. Murray Snyder, the Blue goal-tender, was the star of the game in the Limestone City, and he has the happy faculty of being well-nigh invulnerable when the pace gets hot and his team mates tend to falter. Out in front of him he has the stalwart Whitehead-Paul combination, equally effective on the defensive as on the offensive. Varsity's alternates, Marshall and Murray, demonstrated down at Kingston that they are a decided asset to any team.

With this array of talent the Blue and White will enter to-night's game as favourites, but the Tricolour are by no means out of the running yet. Both Varsity and Queen's play an aggressive, speedy brand of hockey which is a delight to watch and the Varsity Arena ought to be packed to capacity to witness this tit-bit of the season.

Mon. Mar. 18 St. Mike's at Sr. Vic
Fri. Mar. 8 Jr. Meds at Sr. Meds or Pharmacy

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The prize package for amateur hockey fans should be to-night's game between Queen's and Varsity. The two-goal lead of the Blue and White may be sufficient to carry them through but they will have to step to hold it. The Tricolour were badly off in their shooting on Tuesday night, but it may be a different story at the Varsity Arena. All in all it looks like a game that will keep the rink in an uproar.

If Murray Snyder can repeat his performance of Tuesday last the Tricolour will have great difficulty in grabbing a win.

Quinn in the opposite nets is bound to be kept busy. If it isn't McMullen, Harley or Stewart working nice passes or Paul stepping through or around the defence, Harry Whitehead will be on deck with his bullet shot.

A tie on the round to-night will necessitate a play-off early next week. The winners of the Senior O.H.A. are to meet the victors in the Iroquois Falls vs. Kitchener set-to. Kitchener are known to have a strong team but this bunch from the Paper Town are said to be a real good outfit. The series between Varsity or Queen's and the winners of the other hook-up looks like a hockey classic.

In Quebec Montreal Vics stack up against the St. Francois team who played the Varsity Grads here two years ago. These are both strong outfits and the winner should have little difficulty in disposing of the Maritimes. The Ontario Association survivors face the Ottawa and District winners for the right to meet the easterners for the Eastern Canada title.

VARSITY QUINTET MEET CHAMPIONS

Intercollegiate Champions To Play Detroit Y.M.C.A. To-Night

BLUE AT DETROIT

Varsity basketball quintette, Senior Intercollegiate Champions, will seek new laurels when they take on Detroit Central 'Y', world's Y.M.C.A. champions to-morrow evening in the Motor City. The Detroiters won their title at Copenhagen, Denmark, and they have been seen in Toronto on two occasions when they gave West End 'Y' a couple of lessons in the art of the cage-game. They can truthfully be classed as a great team. They are a fast breaking, fast dribbling aggregation and every member of the team is an expert ball-handler and a dangerous shot. If the Blue squad can pull a win, they will bring fame to the U. of T.

Friday night the Blue five engage Assumption College, Sandwich Ontario. The Assumption team is rated one of the best in Canada and will give the Blue team a keen battle. They have been meeting many American teams with much success and Friday's match should put Varsity in a fine fettle for the game with Detroit the following evening.

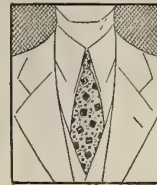

Kitchener Greenshirts Seem Set to Meet Varsity

Kitchener Greenshirts, playing their third game in four days, and intermediate O.H.A. champions, defeated Iroquois Falls, champions of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association by two goals to one in the Arena last night. This is the first of a two game series for the right to meet the winners of the Varsity-Queens tilt.

The Greenshirts will carry a one-goal lead into the second game Saturday afternoon. With opportunity to rest, Kitchener should take the Paper-makers into camp again and get into the Ontario Association finals.

WYCLIFFE BOW TO U.C. BY 5-2 IN BASEBALL

Winners Come From Behind To Win With Thirteen Solid Hits

Sr. U.C. Interfaculty baseball team took Wycliffe into camp yesterday 5-2. The game had no bearing on the group standing, but was fast and hard fought.

The winners pounded out 13 safeties from the delivery of Hunt, twirling for Wycliffe. They tied the score in the second inning and sewed up the game with three more runs in the fourth and fifth. Davis, Bell, Cunningham and Graham provided the batting-punch. The last named also did the pitching, after Wycliffe had scored two in the first, and held the opposition scoreless for two innings. Cunningham was in the box for the final frames and he also did not allow a run. For Wycliffe, Draper and Langhorn each got two hits out of a total of seven for the team. Hunt struck out several, but was hit hard.

"FATE"

Mysterious Fate! Thou Silent One,
How shall we guess thy riddle deep?
I've written in the starry dome,
Or does the Sea its answer keep?

Mayhap the whispering winds forced Man's destiny to listening trees;
Perchance the daisies in the dell
Might know of Life's great mysteries.

How may we guess our fated end?
How know the secret of the Sphinx?
'Tis hidden in the Ocean's sand,
Or wrapt in fleecy clouds, methinks.

In sun's bright rays is it concealed,
Or in the pale Moon's silver light?
In rosy blush of dawn revealed,
Or mantled in the cloak of night?

The glistening dew-drops in the grass
Are silent, weeping o'er the ground,
The bushes tremble as I pass,
But still the Answer is not found.

Mysterious Fate! since earth's first day

Have men thy secret password sought,
And still they seek along Life's way,
And still they seek, and find it not,
—F. Jean Gay

SOLILOQUY

Men called me mad, and shut me in this cell—
Turned me from earth into this awful hell;

I pace throughout the day, and know not fear,
But when night's ebon canopy draws near

I am the victim of a whirl of dreams;
Visions that haunt me with their horrid screams

And eerie mouthings full of grim delight . . .

Always at dark I view the weirdest sight
Man ever saw . . . or evermore shall see

Within the curtain of eternity . . .

How can I ever vividly describe
The horror of that nameless awful tribe

Of demons that torment me every night
With hideous slaving jaws mocking my plight—

Jeering—and holding torches to my skin;
Of ghastly satisfaction—while I twist
Watching my futile agony with grin

And writhe in pain, yet uselessly resist.

Last night I had this vision o'er again:
I screamed—! shrieked and howled in my pain . . .

And in the morn my jailer came to me
And mercilessly bound me to my bed Night's inky shade has come: I cannot free

Myself from these cruel bonds—and

Some Recent Books

"ACCIDENT"—By Arnold Bennett.
(Cassel).

A combination of love-affairs, politics, strange premonitions, and disasters. A fine statement of the case of the Labour Party, by the young man who accepts their candidature, and just as good a statement for Conservatism, by his wife who leaves him on the grounds of his party affiliations.
Love proves too strong and the man renounces his new party, only to find that his wife is disappointed in him for his weakness. Back of it all is the figure of the father who, in spite of all his efforts gets mixed up in his son's affairs, and in a train wreck at the same time. It ends with everybody happy. The book is written in Mr. Bennett's lighter style and makes for pleasant and easy reading.

"JOSEPH & HIS BRETHREN"—By
H. W. Freeman. (Mussion).

One of the most unusual and at the same time most enjoyable books we have read for some time. One can't recall anything quite like it. There is some suggestion of "The Growth of the Soil", but even here there is a difference. The peculiar appeal of the book is difficult to define. At first one feels it is going to be distinctly unpleasant reading, but that idea is soon lost and before many pages are done one has almost as much interest in Crakenhill as have the Geaters.
For it is Crakenhill, a hundred acres of East Suffolk, that is the hero of the story. The farm has been made what it is by the efforts of Benjamin Geater and his five sons, and apart from it they have no interest or no existence. Everything is sacrificed to the farm. Each one of the brothers has, at some time or other, felt some ambition for something else,—the army, Canada, the life of a circus, marriage, and so on, but the farm always proved stronger. They leave it temporarily and work elsewhere, they live only for Sunday when they can go and look at it. Eventually the farm gets them back. That is inevitable. Its power is supreme.

M. C. Players' Guild

On Wednesday afternoon there was one of the finest one-act plays in modern literature presented and this writer believes that had the Guild's list of offerings during the past year contained more plays of as high merit they would have more adequately fulfilled their function. This play "Aria da Capo" by Edna St. Millay is an adroit little fantasy on war, embroidered with the lovely compact phrases and the sure light touch of this poet-ess. It is largely symbolical, but at times reaches moments of sheerest lyricism and underneath there runs a strong undercurrent of hard, jaunty sophistication. Its technique is sure and dexterous; the play never falters for a moment.

Its presentation was a credit to Miss Wimogene Hills, the direction at all times being very capable. The acting too, was very adequate considering the difficulties the roles presented. Paul Gardner as Pierrot was convincing, but would have been more so had more time been spent on the part. Prof.
Dale as Thyris gave a sure performance, enhanced greatly by the use of wonderfully effective mask and Miss Dorothy Porter was as winsome a Columbine as could be desired. The other roles were filled satisfactorily.

The setting showed imagination and, while the lighting could have possibly been improved, the production as a whole was extremely satisfying and deserves much praise.

Dentantics

Dentantics was a fine example of a type of show that ought never to have come into existence. With hardly a redeeming feature throughout, it was without doubt the poorest entertainment that this writer has ever sat through. The show was dreary, savoured of cheap burlesque and all the original material it contained could be played in less than half an hour.
None of the skits were other than carelessly done. Most of them were of the type generally associated with high school efforts, nearly all were tawdry and badly constructed, and some only vulgar without the redeming element of cleverness. There was no reason why this couldn't have been as good entertainment as was Daffy-dil Night for both had the same facilities. Daffydil was a good show chiefly because it gave evidence of a great deal of hard work on good material.
Dentantics was a rotten show because of the lack of effort and of worthwhile material. It was the type of production that should be discouraged.

Menorah Society Play

Wednesday, March 13th, in Hart House Theatre, the University of Toronto Menorah Society is staging the difficult and gripping drama, "Disraeli" written by L. N. Parker, the play which made its initial appearance in London in 1911 with George Arliss, and which ever since has attracted packed houses. The production is being directed by Mr. N. S. Goldhar,
B.A.

The leading roles are being handled by undergraduates who have had considerable experience in past Menorah productions. Mr. J. H. Gringorten will take the part of Benjamin Disraeli, Miss Vera Alexander that of Mrs. Travers, the subtle and cunning
Russian spy, Mr. D. Seigal and Miss Sadie Blumenthal will handle the minor leads. Others taking part in the production are Miss Frances Goodman, Miss Elsie Kaplan, Mr. S. N.
Goldhar, Mr. J. Rabinowitz, Mr. M.
Swartz, Mr. S. J. Bochner, Miss B.
Kaplan, Mr. H. Daufman, Mr. P.
Barre.

The cast has been carefully directed, and judging from its rehearsals, the forthcoming production should do the play justice.

work is due to peculiarity of the author's mind. "What most people consider fantastic, I consider real."

In spite of the confusion of episode in "A Raw Youth" we fall completely under the author's spell. Dostoevsky a great story teller, gives us "The sense of unsubstantial pagantry of life."

In "The Idiot", an example of Dos-toevsky's realism, the author presents a truly noble figure—one whose nobel-ness consists in unselfishness. Dostoevsky is essentially an explorer—prefers to examine things yet unrealized.
The mark of the East is always upon him, he voices unconcern for material success and failure. Western virtues —frugality, orderliness and constraint, he had little use for. "Variety of sensation is the end of life."

The plea in Dostoevsky is for a way of life for each individual. He is the supreme prophet of Russian ideal of reconciling Europe.

QUEEN'S BROADCASTING IS ON PRACTICAL BASIS

May Even Send Reports Of Rugby Games By Radio

A practical broadcasting station run by the University is a feature of life at Queen's. The possession of this station is due to extended work on the part of members of the Faculty of Science. The first broadcasting license given to the University was in 1923, when the wave-length of 450 metres and the call letters CFRC were assigned. One of the earliest achievements of the new station was the play-by-play broadcasting of a Queen's-McGill rugby game in the fall of that year.

The wave-length was altered by the Dominion Radio Branch in 1925 to 267.7 metres, and various improvements were made in the apparatus. By 1927 the set had been completely modernized, and games were broadcast under the new conditions. However, since facilities were inadequate, studio programmes were discontinued. Another difficulty that was met was that the vociferous cheering of Queen's supporters drowned out the announcer's voice in the Arena, and consequently, broadcasting of hockey games has been abandoned until a box can be built for the announcer in the Arena. A similar box on the roof of the Rugby Stadium is being considered.

AMERICAN COLLEGES MORE MONARCHIAL THAN ARE ENGLISH

English Professor Says American Universities Heads Are Autocrats

THESIS SYSTEM WRONG

Still Professor Tout Finds Some Good In The American Colleges

An interesting opinion on University Government was given in an address in London, England, recently by Professor T. F. Tout, retiring president of the Royal Historical Society. Contrasting English and American methods, Professor Tout said that American Universities are monarchial, while English ones are aristocratic. That is to say, Universities on this continent are governed by presidents in an autocratic fashion, and those presidents are responsible only to a small body of lay trustees. On the other hand, English Universities are governed by a large body of elected or co-opted fellows.

The professor had other things to say about American Universities. He roundly condemned them because of the thesis system, the acute specialization, and the tremendous enrolment which, he said, led to unsatisfactory instruction. None the less, there were certain admirable points that the speaker touched upon. One was the efficiency and impartiality of American historians, and another the very fine libraries with splendid research facilities.

Queen's will have a safe and sane initiation of freshmen next fall, one which will not transgress Caput rulings, if plans now before the Alma Mater Society are put through.

"Hell Week"—U.S. fraternity initiation week—was recently condemned for the second time by the Intrafraternity Conference held in New York City.

On the subject of the proposed amendment to the Motor Vehicle Act in Quebec, the following resolution was adopted unanimously by the Province of Quebec Safety League at its regular meeting yesterday:

Whereas the Province of Quebec Safety League, through the channels for education which have been made available for its use, has endeavoured to secure observance, through education, of the provisions of the Motor Vehicle Act, and whereas the League has recognized the difficulty of observance by motorists of Section 41, Paragraph No. 1, which requires a motor vehicle to reduce speed to eight miles per hour within 300 feet of railway crossings, and whereas the obvious object to be attained is protection of human life at the railway crossing itself and to do this it is proposed to remove the clause reducing speed to eight miles per hour on approaching a crossing, and substituting a clause requiring motor vehicles to come to a stop, before entering upon the crossing.

Therefore be it resolved that the Province of Quebec Safety League commend the action of the government of the province of Quebec in the proposed amendments contained in Bill 44 covering the above points and would urge adoption.

FRESHMEN DELIGHTED FIND COLLEGE HOPE REALIZED IN FULL

One Even Admits He Has Had A "Darling Time"

SOME DISAPPOINTED

First Year Adds Greatly To Experience Of The Freshmen

When several freshmen were interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday on the questions whether they considered college life had measured up to their expectations or not, what was their idea of it before they entered college, and what their chief impression of it was now, some considered that it was thoroughly beneficial and worth-while, and others found it went miles beyond their expectations.

G. D. Dixon, U.C.: "Yes, it has come up to my expectations, although I thought at first that it might be a waste of time. I consider this year to have been thoroughly beneficial."

A. H. Woodcock, Trinity: "As far as I'm concerned, it certainly has. My idea was that there would be a certain amount of initiation that I would be inclined to 'pooh-pooh', but I have found it best to accept it, however. I thought I knew something when I came in, but now I see that my previous education was more or less of a preparation for getting knowledge and that four years seems a short time to get it. I worked hard last year, but due to the distractions about the campus, I find it more difficult this year to work as well."

I. M. Secombe, U.C.: "Sure it has, but it looks as though I was taking a one year business course in Commerce."

E. Parsons, Vic: "Of course it's come up to my expectations and more. I thought I was entering into something about which I knew nothing and now I wish I could stay here the rest of my life, if not longer."

A. C. Cochrane, U.C.: "College life is not as thrilling as I thought it would be. When I first arrived I was amazed at the total lack of college spirit. University athletic and literary activities receive scarcely any support. Prior to coming to college I was informed that a cloud-burst of parties, teas and theatre would descend upon me, but now I have learned to the contrary."

J. F. Dickson, S.P.S.: "Yes, I consider college to have measured up to my expectations. Some of my first ideas have been fulfilled and others have developed that have convinced me of the worth-whileness of college life."

H. Agnew, Trinity: "It has gone miles past my expectations. I have had a darling time. I'll be extremely glad when Easter comes."

G. H. Glass, Vic: "Undoubtedly. I never had much of an idea. I was almost afraid of it. It adds an awful lot to one's experience."

"The Literary Digest" proved to be the most widely read periodical on the campus, according to a recent University of Utah undergraduate poll.

ROBOT HAS ABILITY OF VARSITY STUDENT

"He stands, sits, walks, talks, turns, twists, wiggles his ears, and even on occasion shows his teeth in a vicious gesture," reports "The Harvard Crimson" of Eric Robot, life-like automaton now on exhibition in Boston.

"Asked if he believed in prohibition," proceeds the "Crimson," "the Robot answered, 'I don't know, when does it start?' Among other items of information accumulated in this human machine are the times of arrival and departure of all Boston-New York trains. The inventor claims the ability to evoke after slight training a correct Harvard pose and accent, if desired."

MUSICAL COMEDY IN HART HOUSE

Frisivolous Follies To Frisk Behind Foot-Lights Of Theatre

UNDERGRADS' PRODUCTION

A news item of interest in Hart House circles is the presentation of a musical comedy in Hart House Theatre, which will be called, "Honey Boy". It is the first time in the history of the theatre that it will bow down to the great god, Jazz, and recognize it as a form of entertainment for Hart House theatre-goers.

The cast will be almost entirely of college students, and the scenery will be prepared chiefly by undergraduates. The costumes to be used in the comedy will be extremely fantastical, and lend colour to the tone of the presentation.

"Honey Boy" was written by Howard Lindsay, II U.C., and the music by Maurice O'Mara, I Trinity. The lead is played by Jane Mason of St. Hilda's, who plays opposite a U.C. Miss. The dancing and singing choruses will also be undergraduates, and the music will be dispensed by a student orchestra led by Jerry Richardson.

PROGRESS IMPORTANT CHIEFLY IN THE ARTS

Political and Economic Advance Less Essential To Nation's Life

"It is in the aesthetic, literary, philosophical and moral contributions of mankind to civilization that progress is of consequence, not in the political and economic careers of downfallen nations." Such was the keynote of a recent address delivered by Will Durant, of "The Story of Philosophy" fame, before the students of the University of Kansas.

"If we look at history as a succession of wars and battles, of the rise and decay of states, as a procession of politicians and governors, of warriors and generals," declared Dr. Durant, "we must agree with the pessimists that human labour and toil is futile, that human progress is a delusion. However, this is not real history.

"The state of Greece is dead; we know not even the names of her greatest politicians and governors, of her warriors and generals. But what of the wisdom and beauty developed under the Greek civilization? Is it dead? What of Socrates, Aristotle, Plato—are they dead? Indeed, they are more alive today than ever, when their philosophy reaches thousands of people as contrasted with paltry hundreds in their own generations. The Parthenon lies in ruins, but the influence of the artist, Phidias, lives on."

Unless she spends more than an hour dressing for a date with him, a co-ed may be known not to rate a man very highly, says the Syracuse student publication.

year was, as the title implies, an impersonation.

The second year in "The Comeback" revealed what happens when a husband returns to discover another man making love to his wife. The nurses' extra "Orchestra a la Jazz," lasted but a few moments. The third year's extra "The Gambler," was a short turn dealing with the fact that every "rocket" has two sides to it.

During the intervals between the skits a dance orchestra stationed near the organ filled the gaps while scenery was being shifted.

ney in generosity, and respectfully solicited other's votes for such and such a committee. Far across the campus, for several hours during the day, the howls of hopeful candidates were heard. While inside Hart House, blotters, cards and epithets were hurled about profusely as each candidate extolled his own ability. Gum, cigarettes, or chocolate bars were given away free with every threat to "plump the ballot".

Men coming from lectures were seized, subjected to a merciless rigmarole of electioneering, finally presented with anything from a candy to a kiss, and implored, entreated, requested, invited, exhorted, or commanded to "vote as you like, but vote for me." In fact, one candidate was prepared to carry any prospective voters to the polling booth.

From a "quiet, clean, monastic" retreat, Hart House was converted into a veritable department store at Christmas time. In order to get beyond the front door one was forced to wade through piles of blotters, apple-cores, and gum-wrappers, provided that the candidates could be kept off for a sufficient length of time. In fact, the authorities are said to have hired extra help to clean the place up.

"The Lampon", Harvard funny-paper, recently got into difficulties by publishing an attack on the proposed House Plan, into which personalities were introduced, and which led the University trustees to threaten resignation.

Zeus Though Angered Pities His Obedient Striving Children

(A. G. Reynolds)

'O slothful student! Presume not to deceive thy wary profs, with lectures missed and work half done; know thou that their all-seeing eyes can penetrate the mists and darknesses of thy most secret and mysterious wiles. For, O insolent mortal, as they sit with me, sipping, on Olympian heights, the tasty nectar, or frolicking in fields of aphodite, they laugh and scorn at thy intrigues, yet countenance thy self-destructive lethargy until the judgment day! Thus spoke almighty Zeus. Then, as a father, who, having angrily admonished his wayward son, takes pity and counsels him in loving tone, so Zeus, the father of the gods, great in mercy, yielded, at length, to the wretch's tears, and reasoned with him thus: 'O son of man, forsake thy wanton ways, and with a godly sacrifice of midnight oil, repent thy sins. Now, time it is, for thee to cease thy yieldings to the tempter's voice; to turn thy smiling countenance from off the silver sheet—to duller pages. High time it is, indeed, for thee to pass unheeded and unsought-for those caricatures of life, those outward gestures of an empty mind, those commixtures of vile noises and fancy steps. Hence, I charge thee, to thy proper tasks repair! He spoke; and forthwith vanished. Thereupon upstairs the transformed youth, by prudence counselled well, casts down his lighted cigarette, and with grave mutterings of high intent, pursues his homeward way. But ah! his crony met him on the road, a sleek-haired wretch in coon-skin coat, who requested him in plaintive tones—to have a game of chess. Alas! the youth, he could but yield (the god's grave threat he had forgot), so in a roadster stepped, and speeding, at the faithful frat he soon arrived. Yet when rosy-fingered morn, over the eastern hill was seen to come, the youth (mayhap by sudden inspiration led), was found alone among his dusty books, scratching the white paper with his streaming pen.

It's a lie!

TCHEKOFF A PEASANT WHO PITIED THE POOR BUT HAD NO ILLUSION

Attempted Only to Diagnose Russian Ills—Offered No Solution

A DOCTOR BY PROFESSION

Professor Knox Speaks On Russian Realistic Writer

"Tchekoff was a realist," said Professor Knox yesterday in his lecture in East Hall. The key-note of his style was restraint and simplicity. Much of his charm is lost to us in the translation, for he had the rare gift of an extremely delicate touch, which can only be truly appreciated in the original. Most of his work consisted of dialogue, in which idiomatic language was largely used.

Tchekoff himself was born of the peasant class and writes almost entirely of them, "beaten and bullied by petty officials and muttering to the peasants with vodka and mutterings to the saints." And although he pities the peasants he has no illusions concerning them. He had no faith in mass movements to better their lot, but rather in the growing decency of the individual. He himself practiced this preaching of his.

By profession he was a physician and as such he had an unparalleled chance to study the lower classes. His attitude in his writings is that of a sensitive doctor diagnosing a case; but he didn't attempt a solution. He had an estate in southern Russia and while there he did much to alleviate the physical suffering of his peasant neighbours. It was during an epidemic of cholera here that he showed himself in his best light.

Tchekoff travelled a great deal during his life. From his letters to his mother and sister we learn much of his natural cheerfulness, and much also of his philosophy of life.

POOR PUSSIES PERISH IF SAINTS HAVE WAY

Extermination of Cats is Topic In St. Hilda's Inter-year Debate

FIRST AND THIRD YEARS

Poor pussies positively must perish, so aver St. Hilda's College Literary society. The first year upheld the affirmative in the motion "resolved that all cats should be exterminated"; the third year opposed the motion passionately. The speakers were Misses P. Thompson and B. Scadding 372 and K. Maxwell and M. Bonis, 370.

Cats of all sorts, aristocratic and plebeian, beloved pets and kits of fiction were lauded and reviled. Miss Scadding showed a great love of mice. Miss Maxwell quoted Darwin and showed the good cats did for the crops, while Misses Bonis and Thompson respectively held up cats as objects of adoration and horror.

Misses Winspear, Rous, Goode, Mason, Spurr, Cassidy and McMillan spoke from the floor, they touched upon all branches of learning, ancient and modern, practical and theoretical. After a rebuttal in which Miss Thompson proved herself a mistress of innuendo, the house divided 24-20 for the government.

Dentistry Disagrees With Criticism Appeals To S.A.C. For Apology

ENGLISH EVANGELIST

F. NOEL PALMER,

Who will address a special service for students this afternoon at 4.30 p.m. in Victoria Chapel in the interests of the T.I.C.C.U.

OXFORD EVANGELIST IS HERE TO CONVERT

T.I.C.C.U. Sponsor Appearance Of F. Noel Palmer, B.A., B.D.

SERVICE TO-DAY

The Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union will hold its first special service for students at four-thirty this evening in Victoria College Chapel. The speaker will be F. Noel Palmer, B.A., B.D.

Mr. Palmer's home is in Bedford, England. At Cambridge, after the war and some time in the hospital, he experienced conversion and, a little later, realizing the truth which he has since expressed in the remark: "95 per cent. for Christ is a dog's life, but 100 per cent. is heaven on earth", he gave himself wholly to the Lord Jesus Christ. After that he was one of the leaders in the formation of the Oxford Intercollegiate Christian Union and, after receiving his degree, spent two years in evangelistic work in the University.

There followed two years as a tutor in Cliff College, his marriage to Josephine Booth-Clibborn, daughter of the Marquess of France, theological studies at Drew Seminary, and pastoral work in New Jersey and New York City.

Dalcroze Eurythmics

On Thursday, March 21, M. Paul Boepple, Professor of Dalcroze Eurythmics (Geneva) and Director of the American Institute in New York, will give a Demonstration in Convocation Hall assisted by three of his student teachers. The Dalcroze system, is recognized in Europe and the United States as being highly valuable to students of music, dancing, and dramatics. It is the development of M. Jacques-Dalcroze, a Swiss composer and professor of music, and his method comprises Rhythmic Movement, Solfege, and Improvisation. Critics as varied as Bernard Shaw, Walter Damrosch and Rachmaninoff have praised it highly; and Paderewski admirably interpreted its meaning when he said: "The principle is that through bodily experience rhythm is called out of its latent state into manifestation."

Review of Dentanics Cause

APOLOGY REFUSED

Dr. Secombe Makes Statement

The students of Dentistry are at present up in arms and the criticism that appeared in last Friday's Varsity of the annual Dentanics Stunt Night, and is demanding a twofold apology from the Editor.

The dramatic critic of the Varsity received free tickets to the production and thought that he was expected to criticize the show from the same point of view that other undergraduate presentations were considered. This he did in what is admittedly a severe manner.

The Dental students, whoever, declare that their performance was intended solely for their own faculty, and that all they wished to see in the Varsity was a general news story of the show. They take violent objection to the whole tone of the critical article.

Last Friday the Varsity critic received an unofficial demand that he attend a mass meeting of the Dental Faculty. Dr. Secombe, Dean of Dentistry, however, requested him not to attend until the meeting was made official, which was done next day. On going down to the Dental Building he was met by the Cabinet of the Dental Parliament, to whom he explained his position.

He gave an assurance to the Dental men that he had intended no malice, explained the critical standards he used, and expressed regret at the disturbance created. Dentistry, however, demanded a threefold apology: first in the columns of the Varsity, secondly to the faculty of the college which it is claimed are (Continued on page 7)

FRENCH AIR EXPERT DISCUSSES AIR LIGHTS

M. Pierre Franck is Chief Engineer in French Ministry Of Aeronautics

LAST ADDRESS TO-DAY

Landing fields, their planning and illumination were the chief topics discussed by M. Pierre Franck, Chief Engineer in the French Ministry in Aeronautics before a large gathering in Room 22 of the Mining Building at 4.30 o'clock Thursday afternoon.

The importance of a perfect system of flood-lighting was stressed by the lecturer. "Aerial Lighthouses" differ from Marine Lighthouses in that they employ a different type of beam. In the former a more diffused and general beam is required and not just a single point of light.

Many problems new to the gathering were noted by M. Franck, such as the searchlights necessary on the plane itself and the means whereby these may be used when the engine is slowed down for the landing.

Radio's place in the aviation of the future was dealt with and the question of aerial radio antennae was discussed. The work of Professors Medi and de Fleur was explained fully, especially their efforts to overcome the effect of the vibrations on the vacuum tubes of the radio set on board the aeroplane.

M. Pierre Franck gives his concluding lecture at 8.30 o'clock Friday evening in the Mining Building.

TORONTO DEBATERS BEAT MARQUETTE MEN

SPEECHES FROM FLOOR

By 21-14 House Upholds Full Government Control Of Waterpower

The saddling of waterpower under government control was favoured by a majority of the audience which attended the University of Toronto-Marquette debate at Trinity College Library last Monday evening. The resolution, "Resolved that this House is in favour of full Government Control of Waterpower", was upheld by Douglas McRae, S.P.S., and J. Ord, St. Michael's College, both of Toronto; while the negative was represented by the team from Marquette University, Messrs. Louis W. Staundmaier and James Sullivan.

The first speaker for the House, Douglas McRae, lauded the splendid achievements of the Hydro-Electric Commission of Ontario. He said that the only plausible body to harness waterpower was the Government. In Germany, especially, the benefits of government control can be noted.

W. Staundmaier, in opposition, berated the government in Ontario, because they wanted to control all enterprises. Ninety-five per cent of the waterpower in the United States is under private enterprise. The people receive the benefits of companies which know their business. A government has not the ability to run a productive enterprise. The farmers do not have sufficient power under the Hydro and individualism is recognized in the United States—a thing which government control destroys. There are 128 towns in Ontario not using government power.

J. Ord, for the "ayes", stated that government control is cheaper in Toronto than in Buffalo, although Toronto is much further away from Niagara Falls. We get our electricity at cost, and can run any number of electrical devices. In the United States this is not so.

James Sullivan, in a witty speech for the negative, said that the Hydro Commission had become corrupt, appropriating unlawful lucre. The United States has time and again exhibited the uselessness of government control of waterpower.

Undergraduates speaking from the floor were: W. C. Heddon, U.C.; Tuzo Wilson, Trinity; and G. O. Murray-Wright. A vote was held, the "ayes" receiving 21 and the "noes" 14 votes.

ST. MIKES AND TRINITY ARE BOTH OPTIMISTIC

Decide in Joint Debate Not To Envy Our Grand-Parents

Optimism prevails at both St. Michael's College and Trinity College if last Friday's joint debate held in the Common Room of Trinity House is any indication. By a vote of 28-24 the House defeated the motion "that we envy our grandparents."

T. V. Kennedy, St. Michael's led for the affirmative, declaring that he envied the self-satisfaction of the Victorians. F. J. L. Evans, Trinity, spoke first for the negative and found the actions of modern youth pleasing.

H. H. Clark, Trinity, supporting the affirmative, decided that the modern generation was irrational. The next speaker for the negative was C. MacAndrew, St. Michael's, who showed the high state of modern civilization.

NAUSEATING SMELLS FILL U.C. LAST OF WEEK OF DISTURBANCES

U.C. VOTES AND PAYS EVEN BOTTLES ARE SEEN

Violent Electioneering Features Brief Fight in Men's Elections

Electioneering just as strenuous and even more sensational than anything put on by Hart House featured yesterday's elections in University College. From eleven o'clock until three the junior common room was a bedlam. Even casual visitors were inundated by offers of cigarettes, candy, blotters and other enticements, offered in return for the promise of votes.

A feature of the afternoon voting was the distinctly evil odour which permeated the room as a result of alleged S.P.S. activities. Careless of appearances young campaigners even left the Black Bass beer bottles which had held bribes for desiring voters on the floor and windows of the room. While in the inner recesses of the building even stronger liquids flowed freely.

A. J. Stringer was elected to the presidency of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society. The other election results will be found on pages four and five.

STUDENT FROM INDIA HOPES FOR LIBRARY

Miss Checha Eipe Wants Books To Found Household Science Library

IN MADRAS UNIVERSITY

"We are trying to establish the teaching of Household Science in our regular school curriculum," said Miss Checha Eipe, when questioned regarding her work on her return to India this June.

Miss Eipe has been attending Varsity in the Faculty of Household Science for two years. Her intention when she returns is to teach Household Science in St. Christopher's College, which is affiliated with Madras University, and which performs the same function at O.C.E. does here.

Its graduates in time will be trained to teach Household Science in the schools and accomplish a two-fold purpose. They will prepare pupils for an advanced University course in the subject; and will also overcome the existing prejudice against women participants in equal educational advantages with the men.

As Miss Eipe is leaving Canada with only her own books as library equipment, she has asked that any student having books on any of the Household Science subjects which they would like to give for the inauguration of a library in Madras, leave them with Miss Parkes, Room 82.

Correction

"The Varsity" is in receipt of a letter from Dr. Stephen Czako, who lectured here recently, pointing out an error which appeared in a report of his lecture. The report quoted D. Czako as saying that the mother tongue of Hungary related to the German. This, it is pointed out, is incorrect. The Hungarian peoples are descended from the Finnish-Ugric family of languages, and their language is much more related to the Finnish and Turkish languages, and is in no way connected with the German. We regret that our report should have contained this error.

Past Week Has Seen Three-Fold War Between Meds School and U.C.

DALERIANIC ACID

Police On Hand to Keep Order When U.C. Votes Yesterday

University College yesterday received its baptism into the mysteries of medical concoctions. It proclaimed its existence far and wide by the sweet odours issuing forth from all places within the building. To wend your way about the corridors was to breathe in an odour such as has made skunks famous the world over.

The whole trouble started last Friday. S.P.S., while holding their annual elections, painted in flamboyant School colours the outside railing of the Medical Building. Then S.P.S. turned green and saw red. They painted all of the Med's pavement in those colours.

So the peaceful Meds went into the dark recesses of the chemistry laboratory, drew from thence two tanks of dalerianic acid, than which there exists nothing more odorous; and dumped one flask into the front door and the other into the side entrance of the Schoolmen. It was a very cold day, 'way below zero. Up went the windows at S.P.S. to free the atmosphere within from the ghastly smell. Cold, cold, Schoolmen shivered to their marrow-bones. The delicate odour still remains.

On Saturday morning more abuse was heaped upon the already incensed Engineers. A huge skull-and-crossbones painted in red, white and black, (Continued on page 7)

UNIQUE PICTURES GIVEN HART HOUSE

Special Bequest Makes Possible Purchase of Two By Tom Thomson

EXHIBITED AT WEMBLEY

Two years ago Professor G. M. Wrong set aside a sum of money as the Harold Verschoyle Wrong Memorial Fund in memory of his second son who was killed on the Somme in 1916, the interest on this sum amounting to $125 to be paid to Hart House on 1st January each year and to be devoted to the purchase of works of Art for Hart House. This is the first benefaction of such a kind ever made to Hart House. The first payment was made on 1st January, 1928. The Sketch Committee made no purchase that year, but with $250 on hand after the second payment, the Sketch Committee has this year purchased two sketches by Tom Thomson. These sketches came into the hands of Mr. Fraser of Mowatt Lodge, Algonquin Park, and were sold by him to Hart House at $100 each.

In September last, Mrs. Harckness, sister of the late Tom Thomson, informed the Ward that she was prepared to part with "The Pointers" to Hart House and to Hart House only. This was the last of the large well known canvases by her brother and was exhibited at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley, being considered one of the best of Tom Thomson's work. The price is $1,500 and after careful consideration, the Sketch Committee, the House Committee, and the Board of Stewards decided the opportunity must not be missed.

AS OTHERS SEE US

Just what do the poor newspaper-fed public think University life consists of? A majority of them have only the public press as a purveyor of news. And what a purveyor! No wonder the man on the street looks on the college man as something of a cross between a clown and a moron.

There is fast growing up a tendency among newspapers to use University events as freak copy; something to balance a story on the marriage of the left Siamese twin. Any little bit of horse-play becomes in their hands an "antic", and every minor dispute "a campus-stirring uproar". Why is this? Why is the University an object of the press searchlight, second only to the House of Commons or the City Hall?

It is because of the "College Boy" myth; a myth which is a peculiar feature of this continent. This is a legend, largely fostered by the press, that a University is a place where students spend their time raiding each other, co-eds ardently debating questions such as "Resolved that this house despises the responsibilities of Motherhood." This is the sort of copy the public press eats with gusto, while accomplishments in the arts, or discoveries in the sciences are only toyed with as unappetising.

A rare bit of flavouring to this feast is offered if by hook or by crook, (usually the latter), the papers can work the faculty into the affair, usually in the form of an irate Dean, demanding apologies right and left, or a Caput demanding the expulsion of at least half the college.

The newspapers, having created this appetite in the public for anything "Collegiate", are doing their best to satisfy it. But it seems rather hard on the University. Why should she be fed to the hungry hordes merely to satisfy an artificial appetite? There are lots of other bodies which would make just as good fodder, with less injury to the country's welfare. How about giving the gormandisers a change of diet? Other people surely do just as interesting things and go to just as interesting places.

In this connection it is regrettable that a downtown paper should have involved the Dean of the Faculty of Dentistry, (whose statement we publish to-day), in the current Dental-Varsity dispute. Dr. Seccombe has from the first taken no active part. His only action was to advise the Dental students to act through official channels rather than resort to unofficial methods of redressing their alleged wrongs.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A novel method of insuring against trouble in the Editorial Columns of the Undergraduate Daily is being used by the University of Oregon. This University has hit on the ingenious scheme of abolishing the Editorial Columns altogether. In its place they are running the correspondence. This is tantamount to cutting out the Editorial tongue, and seems a barbarous method of getting around the freedom of speech problem.

Art, Music and Drama

Hart House Theatre

"Contract", the third of this season's bills is excellent entertainment. Written by a resident of this city, it is possibly best described as a comedy of manners and as such is smart and polished. Its humour depends on the lines rather than the situations and, except for an occasional lack of finish, they are sharp, largely provoking and sparkling. The most outstanding feature, however, of the evening, was the excellence of the acting. The entire cast is strong and equal at all times to their lines; in particular Miss Kathleen Conolly. A new comer to Hart House, Miss Conolly gives an extremely fine performance. Her characterization was at all times sure and lacked nothing in finish and shading. She was given admirable support; Elizabeth Forgie contributing a fine, even performance and H. E. Hitchman was, as usual, excellent. Nella Jefferis carried a difficult role with a nice sense of comedy and was only rarely not up to the mark.

As a piece of writing the play is to be commended. It is cleverly written but suffers slightly in a deficiency of characterization. The first act is the best, but is marred by a rather feeble curtain, the second is a little ragged and the third, while it begins very promisingly, is a little hackneyed at the close. The plot is slight and revolves around the plight of a determined young lady when sued by her fiancée in a breach of promise suit. Its technique is capable but hardly dexterous.

Special mention should be made of the setting, which is done in Arts Moderne, and blends well into the brittle tone of the play. On the whole the show is clever and refreshing, and as a good evening's entertainment is recommended.

—H. C. C.

H. C. Players' Guild

"Eden Island" was enacted by the U.C. Players' Guild at the Women's Union last evening. It will continue to-day.

The action takes place on Eden Island, in Muskoka. The chief role was taken by the author himself, Nathaniel A. Benson. He played the part of Michael with force and subtlety. Irgarde Westerman, as Ann, is good, but inclined to over-acting at times.

Pat Usher, as Alfred, is natural enough. Special mention would be derogatory to those not mentioned. George Brooks, Marianne Ogden and George Douglas as "Spugs" Meyers, the bad man, give convincing roles.

The play is a medley of bang-up drama, romance and Hinduism on a lonely isle. Shots freely ring out and humorous truisms are given to enliven scenes. The stage at the Union is rather inadequate for worthy amateur productions.

The main play was preceded by a light skit entitled "Moonstruck-Maid-struck", by Paul A. Gardner.

—O. A.

Menorah Society Plan

Each year, there seems to be one amateur dramatic production about this university which stands out above all others. Last year "Cyrano" caused the furor. This year, we submit, the Menorah production, "Disraeli", should be a very strong contender for the coveted position.

The play centres about the inner life of the most picturesque Prime Minister that ever tendered advice to a British sovereign.—Benjamin Disraeli. The story, which forms the plot, deals with the way in which Disraeli manipulated the purchase of the Suez Canal for Great Britain.

The cast for this production was, in our opinion, very happily chosen. The physical features and other qualities of the characters were as close to an approach to perfection as one might demand from a professional troupe, let alone an amateur cast. Mr. J. H. Gringorten, as Disraeli, played an excellent part. This role is a very heavy one, submitting the actor to considerable strain. It is to be said to the credit of Mr. Gringorten that, far from succumbing to the strain, he progressed in efficiency as the play went on. The last act found him, as also the other members of the cast appearing therein, performing that "summa summorum" of all dramatics,— actually living the part.

Miss Sadie Blumenthal as Clarissa, played an admirable part. She did ample justice to one of the finest speeches in the play. Miss Frankie Goodman as Duchess of Glastonbury, appeared in the first act only, but she counter-balanced this by the quality of her performance. Mr. David Seigel, as Charles, and Miss Vera Alexander, as Mrs. Travers, fulfilled all expectations. Mr. S. Goldhar, as Sir M. Probert, did well.

S. J. Bochner, H. L. Daufman, Bertha Kaplan, Elsie Kaplan, J. Rabinowitch, M. Swartz and P. Barrs, assisted in rounding out a well-performed play. The costumes, make-up and scenery were quite good, and, in all, the play gave strong indications of the able direction of Mr. Goldhar.

BLUE AND WHITE SEXTET MEET OTTAWA HERE SATURDAY NIGHT

VARSITY QUALIFIES FOR ALLAN CUP TILT AFTER 7-6 VICTORY

Defeat Iroquois Falls, Winning Round Ten Goals To Six

NOT BRILLIANT VICTORY

Northerners Fail to Score After Passing Defence, But Fight Hard

On Wednesday evening the Varsity senior O.H.A. sextet defeated Iroquois Falls 7-6 and won the round by a score of 10-6, qualifying to meet the Ottawa Shamrocks in the Allan Cup semi-finals.

The game was much better than the preceding one on Monday night from the spectator's point of view, but it was only in the second period that the Blue showed up at their best and at one time they piled up a six-goal lead. Naturally they slowed up after this and the Northerners caught them napping in the third period. By the close of the second stanza the Eskimos had cut the lead to 3 and after the rest they ran in three counters in quick succession. Varsity's defence was wide open and four or five man attacks swept in on them time after time. Toronto gradually pulled themselves together and Jimmie McMullen netted a couple which sewed up the game.

There can be no doubt as to which is the better team that those Paper-makers certainly gave "Red" Porter's men a scare. If they had a couple of men who could really shoot they might have turned the tables but it was in this department of the game that they were weakest.

Varsity will have to improve if they are going to have any chance for the Allan Cup. They showed smart combination at times but those times were too few and far between. However, they turned in some sweet games during the season and with real opposition they will probably show why they are representing Ontario for the Allan Cup.

NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME FOR VICTORIA TWIRLER

Garton Holds Trinity Scoreless While Teammates Bang Out Twelve

'Jack' Garton, star twirler of the Victoria indoor baseball nine, pitched a no-hit no-run game yesterday, when Varsity defeated Trinity 16 to 0, thereby capturing the group honours. Garton had perfect control, allowing but one walk during the seven innings. He received air-tight support in the field except for a single error.

The Varsity batters found no difficulty in pounding out the offerings of the Trinity slab artist, collecting 24 hits. Detroit Easily Wins by 26-15 After A Thrilling Game

Varsity senior basketball team broke even in their games last week-end when they defeated Assumption College, Sandwich, Ontario, 36-18 and were downed 26-15 by Detroit, world's Y.M.C.A. champions.

Detroit and Varsity employed the same style of play which accounts for the low score. Both teams were well-matched and though the winners are quite the better squad, they were extended to the limit to finish on top of the Blue team. At half time Detroit was leading 11-7. Twice during the second period Varsity were within a point of the champs, but were unable to secure the lead. The Detroiters seemed to register points only when they were necessary. Piper stood out for the winners. His shooting was uncanny, potting 16 points of his team's 26. Mitchell, Newman and Currie were Varsity's best, although O'Leary contributed some pretty set-shots.

Varsity was never in danger during their match with Assumption College, doubling the score on a team which is highly rated in Canadian basketball. Newman, with 11 points and Currie, 6, starred for Varsity.

managing companies will see that pay-shops are signed by members of their companies not later than 18th March.

PAY PARADES

Company Pay Parades will be held early in April. Details will be posted in Corps H.Q. as soon as possible. Each member will be required to present his voucher for returned clothing and text-books. (Members taking Military Studies Course are allowed to retain text books until after the University examinations.)

(Signed) W. S. Wilson,

CARDS OF INVITATION to the Annual Inspection may now be obtained at the office. Members should use this means of inviting their friends.

OFFICERS wishing to take instruction in SWORD DRILL may do so at Corps H.Q. on Tuesday, 19th March at 5 o'clock.

VARSITY AND OTTAWA ARE OPPOSING TEAMS TO-NIGHT AT ARENA

Blue Needs Lead Before Journeying To Capital City For Return Game

VARSITY HAS PUNCH

But Defence Must Take Care To Protect Snyder In Goal

To-morrow night at the Arena Gardens Varsity will play Ottawa Shamrocks in the first game of a home and home series for the right to enter the eastern Canada senior hockey finals.

This struggle promises to apply the well-known acid test to Red Porter's squad. The Blue and White have as yet to meet a first-class sextet in their quest for the Allan Cup. The Shamrocks on the advance dope will furnish hockey of high-class calibre and seem capable of extending the Blue to the limit.

Both teams have knocked off all opponents with neatness and dispatch, and the series to decide who shall meet the Quebec-Maritimes winner is going to be good. Ottawa have a fast team with a sound defense. Both rear-guards will be encountering the best attack they have had to face this winter. The Ottawa second-line has been hailed as being mighty smart, but the Blue with Paul and Whitehead appear to have considerable edge on the offensive.

Varsity has a fine scoring machine, but in spite of the good back-checking of the forwards, opposing puck-chasers have got by Paul and Whitehead with some regularity.

In the Queen's game here last Friday Whitehead was bouncing the Tricolour with great success, but on Wednesday Iroquois Falls' attack worked in on Snyder too often for the latter's comfort.

It is doubtful if the Ottawa forward line can put on the ice three players as smooth as McMullen, Harley and Stewart. In these play-off games three alternates are allowed and this will permit a complete relief forward line. Marshall, Murray and Brant will probably be the Blue's relief men.

The return game of this series will be played in Ottawa Monday night, with goals on the round deciding. Ottawa will be tough to beat on their own ice and any lead that the Blue can get in Toronto will be mighty welcome.

SUDDEN DEATH GAME TO SETTLE TITLE

Intermediate Pucksters Play Queens in Kingston To-Morrow

REGULAR LINE-UP

The Varsity intermediate sextet will invade Kingston to-morrow to engage in a sudden death battle with Queen's for the Intermediate Intercollegiate Hockey title.

The Blue and White won the western section of the Intercollegiate series by defeating Western in London last week and should clinch the title to-morrow. The Blue had a tough struggle in their group, last Saturday's game deciding the issue. In the eastern section Queen's and Loyola engaged in a bitter struggle for the championship. The Tricolour were successful and will endeavour to revenge the Queen's seniors defeat at the hands of Red Porter's men.

Varsity will start their regular line-up that has been going so well in the recent games. The Douglas-Moran clan got off to a bad start in the Intermediate O.H.A. group which was won by Willowdale, the O.H.A. In-able list.

BLUE GIRL ATHLETES TO CHOOSE LEADERS

Voting For Sporting Executives Takes Place Next Week

The annual meeting of the Women's Basketball and Hockey Clubs for the purpose of electing the 1929-30 executives will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Thursday, March 21, at 4:30 and 5 p.m., respectively.

The annual meeting of the Women's Swimming, Tennis and Baseball Clubs will be held in the Lecture Room on Friday, March 22, at 4:15 p.m.

Voting members are restricted to those on the managers' and curators' lists of actual playing members in the different faculties. These lists must be completed and in the hands of the Secretary by Wednesday, March 20.

Nominations must be made in writing by two voting members of the Club in question and filed with the Secretary of the Association, Room 82, U.C., not later than Wednesday, March 20.

RUGBY MANAGERS

Applications for managementship of the Senior Intercollegiate, Senior O.R.F.U., Intermediate and Junior Rugby teams will be received at the Athletic Office, Hart House, not later than March 20, 1929.

All those wishing to apply kindly mail to, or leave the application at the Athletic Office, as soon as possible.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Now that the Blue and White have disposed of the Paper-makers from Iroquois Falls, Ottawa Shamrocks are next on the list. But if this Ottawa bunch are as good as they're cracked up to be Red Porter's boys better not play the game they did against the Pories on Wednesday night. If they do the Capitols will carry back about a six-goal lead to the banks of the Ottawa. On the other hand, the Triple Greens may not be so hot. If they're not and the Blue hit their real stride, it will be vice versa. Chances are, however, that it will be a real game.

Two former Toronto hockey stars are on the By-Town line-up. "Dicky" Richards, who used to hold down a wing for Varsity a few years back is said to be the main cog in the Ottawa attack. Darcey Coulson, who used to bump 'em hard and often when with St. Michael's juniors two years ago, lines up on the defence. Coulson could body check with the roughest and toughest.

Right now the way that the Blue forward line is working would satisfy anybody. The boys are passing the puck unselfishly and stick to their positions. They back check faithfully and it is a rare occasion that their opponents break away for a clear rush on the Blue rear guard. Paul and Whitehead are going grand offensively but could tighten up a little on their defensive work. Whitehead would be much more effective if he'd pass the puck more frequently and opportunely. The big boy packs a terrific shot but he has got mighty few goals with it this campaign.

With an opportunity to use three relief men in the play-off games, the Blue attack should be faster than ever. The Varsity second string men are no wonders at getting goals, but check nicely.

ELECTION RETURNS

VICTORIA COLLEGE

On Friday, March the eighth, in Alumni Hall, Victoria College held their annual elections. Some seventeen Societies and year executives chose their officers for the coming year. In some cases the contests were particularly keen and in others acclamations were plentiful. In keeping with the College tradition no "electioneering" was done and a really serious attempt was made to distribute the offices among those who were interested and capable in the respective fields.

Saint John, N.B., March 11—Canada occupies an important position in the maintenance of World Peace in the opinion of Comte Serge Fleury, chevalier of the Legion of Honor, attache of the French Ministry of foreign affairs, author and lecturer, who arrived here this morning on the Canadian Pacific steamer Metagama. Canada occupies an unique position in that it acts as a buffer between Great Britain and the United States and also between Great Britain and France, said the Comte on his arrival here. He is very much interested in Canada and spoke in glowing terms of the manner in which the French and English had grown up in peace side by side.

The comte said that he intended to keep his eyes wide open in this country so that he could take back with him a true and interesting account of conditions as he found them here.

He advocated the exchange of college students between Canada and France and thought other countries should send students here to familiarize themselves with this country.

Comte Fleury is on his way to attend the fourth national conference on education to be held at Victoria, B.C., on April 5th to 7th, and Vancouver, April 8th to 13th, and to which gathering he is a delegate.

THORNTON WILDER SPEAKS OF BOOK AS OF A CHILD

Author of "Bridge of San Luis Rey" Describes Making Of A Book

WAS QUIET CHILD

In Toronto Lecturer Explains How He Came To Write

"In being asked to speak about my book, I feel like a mother who is asked to speak about her child," marked the opening of the lecture by Mr. Thornton Wilder, the author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," in Hygeia Hall, last Monday night.

"There are three phases in the life of a book," the speaker explained. "The first is psycho-analysis, the need to write that is one's by heredity. The second is the ideas, emotions and trends, and how they react on the mind of the reader. The third is the relative superficial level of books read, people met, and the attraction for one's opposites." The author's childhood was not spent in exercising the freedom of play with other children. He preferred the reading corner with its Alice in Wonderland, and even Don Quixote. Mr. Wilder claimed he had the advantage of being a teacher by profession, and the ability to read French works in the original.

The story of the Marquesa was the most beautiful woman of the court of Louis XIV, who was loved by all those who knew her, but lacked the love of her own daughter, the only thing she desired.

In closing, Mr. Wilder advised his audience to read, not merely for the sake of passing time; but to read with a purpose, to know what they are reading, and in this way to understand and enjoy the thoughts expressed by the writer through his characters.

HONEY BOY IS TITLE OF MUSICAL COMEDY

Undergraduates Present First Show of Kind in Hart House Theatre

The first full-length musical show ever to be presented by undergraduates in Hart House Theatre will be seen next week when R. Howard Lindsay offers his musical comedy, "Honeyboy."

Visitors at recent rehearsals have expressed unbounded enthusiasm for Maureen O'Mara's music. The number, "Empty Dreams," promises to be the hit of the show.

"Empty Dreams" is one of the most haunting popular melodies I have heard for many a long day," exclaimed one visitor.

The dances by Mosher's, executed by a ravishing chorus of pretty co-eds, bid fair to create a tremendous sensation. The costumes are, for the most part, by the Hart House Costume Department. "Colour and brevity—what more could one ask?" was a remark at a recent rehearsal.

The book by Mr. Lindsay features a fast-moving plot and hilarious lines, interrupted by a cast which includes Jane Mason, Margaret Wilson, Margaret Barton, Warren Harvey, Fred Mallet, Murray Bonnycastle, Robert Beatty, and Andrew Allan. Howard Lindsay plays a comedy role which should be popular with the audience.

That the music, lyrics, book, direction, and entire staging, with the exception of the training of the dance ensembles, have been done by undergraduates and that everyone, with not more than one or two exceptions, connected with the production is a student at the University is claimed to be unique in the annals of college musical comedy.

THIS GENERATION LIVES IN SHADOW OF A MORaine

Dr. Gilkey of Chicago Preaches In Convocation Hall On "Perspective"

Dr. Charles Gilkey of Chicago in his sermon at the service in Convocation Hall Sunday spoke of this generation as living in the shadow of a moraine—a moraine of things and detailed duties that obscured the visions of the high mountain tops of ideals. His topic was: "The Problem of Perspective," and in approaching this subject he drew a figure of speech from one of his recent vacations in the Rocky Mountains during which he and other vacationists had dwelt in the shadow of a moraine that had obscured the sight of the high eminence of Long's Peak.

Even university life was shadowed by the moraine of modern existence. The student was hurried and hurried by a multiplicity of duties before his powers had a chance to stretch themselves, and he consequently acquired habits of superficiality and mediocrity. "Why the increasing proportion of teachers from rural centres?" he asked. "Because to the country lad teaching is still a profession with glamour. But the city boy is hard-boiled, and compares the financial rewards of teaching with those to be sought in other lines of endeavour."

Annual Picnic Held at 8.17 Dogmatics Don't Cow Parsons

(E. B. Jolliffe)

The Seven Occult Societies held their annual jamboree and picnic in Room Number Seven, Northern House, Washburne Hall, on Wednesday evening at 8.17 sharp.

In rising to introduce the subject, "Why is a Cow?" Mr. Parsons took strong exception to the use of the term "subject," declaring that he preferred to look rather on the subject of the evening as an object. Anyone would admit that a cow was an objective rather than a subjective reality. Mr. Bigman refuted this by declining to admit it, whereupon Mr. Parsons retracted the charge with apologies, adding that one concept was undoubtedly more hypothetical than the other. He would not go so far as to say which one. That would be falling into the snare of dogmatism. The Chairman, Mr. Rhenault, ruled this remark out of order, pointing out that the question concerned cows, generally speaking, and not canines.

Not to be cowed by this rebuke, Mr. Parsons was going on to say that he saw light, when Mr. McGorrie interrupted by blowing a fuse. This precipitated a fiery discussion on the difference between a dark cow and a light cow. Either colour was not a colour, averred Mr. Balkonabridge, and hence the cow must be considered as a negative reality, or not a reality at all. Asked to be more definite, the speaker refused to nail his colours to the mast, adding triumphantly: "United we fall, divided we stand—on our legs!" Mr. Bigman took this to be a "dirty insinuation" against Knocks College, but was referred to the Occults' Library Committee for further investigation of the faith of our fathers.

Mr. Bizewander took this occasion to remark that our fathers didn't have any faith. His doubts were at once squelched by the Chairman ruling that: "We would not be here if that were the case." A case in point, he went on to say, was that of the cow which jumped over the moon. At this juncture he was applauded for so cleverly bringing the discussion back to the subject of the evening. Mr. McGorrie confessed that he had doubted the story ever since late adolescence. Socrates explained that this was a normal manifestation of adolescent development. Now that Mr. McGorrie was in university, Socrates hoped that he had moral courage to doubt even the existence of the moon. He himself was prepared to prove that there was no moon.

"I think there is a moon," said Mr. Bigman, "but I will not go so far as to say that the cow jumped over it. We have not even learned why a cow is. (Hear! Hear!) Personally, I am inclined to be modernistic, and interpret the story as an allegory."

"I deny the allegation and I challenge the allegorist!" cried Mr. Parsons, leaping to his feet. He was at once cooled off by having his head inserted in the ice cream. The Chairman remarked cuttingly that the day of the duel was long past.

"I interpret the story," resumed Mr. Bigman, "as an allegory to show the bright side of Life."

"You mean the cover?" said Mr. Pawnsnam.

Socrates pointed out that the cover of Punch is even brighter.

"What kind of Punch?" asked Mr. Balkonabridge, smacking his lips.

"That kind!" explained the Chairman, knocking him down.

As signs of disorder were now becoming rampant, Socrates drew an analogy with the French Revolution and suggested that the ice cream be used for biological purposes. This having been unanimously approved, the meeting resolved itself into a Committee to Fill the Whole. Mr. Parsons was rescued from the depths, and the Chairman declared that a pragmatic solution of the evening's problem had been reached. "A cow is," he ruled, "in order to produce ice cream."

Visiting— Mother and Dad after 8.30

THE campus may be hundreds of miles from home, but only a few minutes by telephone. Remember—your folks are keenly interested in your college activities and somehow you don't manage to write as fully or as often as you'd like.

Why not set aside one night each week for telephoning home? It's an inexpensive pleasure. By arranging a set hour each time, you can make use of Long Distance Station-to-Station rates which are surprisingly low—especially after 8.30 p.m.

The Long Distance Operator will gladly give you any information.

SHEA'S

A be-spectacled heroine who is a total loss on the market of popular demand is the role given to Marian Nixon in this week's presentation at Shea's. The unveiling of the latest beauties of the aforementioned heroine and her subsequent hit in society is the work of the hero, (who isn't recognized as such 'till the last clinch) Eddie Quinlan. The work of these two make "Geraldine" stand out in your memory of Shea's presentations.

The impersonations of Flora La Vere were fair, although the only person known to the audience which Miss La Vere delineated, was Marion Davies. For some reason one of the "acts" could not appear, and the other troupers filled in for the delinquents. As a charitable act it may have had merits, but as an amusement feature it left everyone "cold". A new "turn" was given to the usual acrobatic performance in a game of bicycle basketball between Canada and America (evidently representing United States and all lesser countries).

Nothing can be said in favour of the Lupino Lane Comedy and to say anything against it would be like summoning the police force to chase a flea. It just wasn't.

As we had already sat through two other news reels depicting President-elect Hoover saying "I do" on inauguration day, our spines remained untangled through this epic moment.

With the exception of "Geraldine" you could well afford to miss this show.

The Sweater Costume!

The Most Logical and Prettiest Daytime Costume for the College Girl at this time of Year.

The new Sweaters blossom forth like the tulips and jonquils of Spring. They come in such gay colors and pretty new patterns of knitting. Some of the smartest new shades are, Monet Blue, Indian Spice, Sea-Crest Green, Mother Goose and Goya Red.

$7.50

To wear with these sweaters are little skirts to exactly match in wool crepe, a light weight non-crushable material. They have an interesting combination of box pleats and knife pleats and smart little yokes with pockets. They can also be worn with the new tuck-in blouses.

$8.95

The sweater and skirt costume is ideal for the class room and also lovely for later outdoor wear. They mean a very smart costume for as little as $16.95!

Belts Have Their Innings!

Belts are a real factor in fashions this Spring and they are worn with all kinds of daytime costumes, coats, sweaters and frocks. DENT MEN DISAGREE APPEAL TO S.A.C.

insulted by the contrary opinion of the critic, and finally an apology in person to a meeting of the students.

At this point the Editor of the Varsity stepped in and refused to allow a member of the staff to apologize in the name of the paper. At a second meeting held Wednesday afternoon, at which both the Editor and the Dramatic Editor were present, no agreement was reached, though the demand for an apology to the faculty was dropped.

The Dental students are taking the matter up with the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. at its special meeting to-day. At the request of "The Varsity", Dr. Wallace Secombe yesterday issued the following statement:—

"After the publication of the last issue of 'The Varsity', a number of dental students held, what they termed, an indignation meeting, and adjourned to hold a further meeting on Saturday at noon to which Mr. Clarke, the Dramatic Editor of 'The Varsity' was invited. It was only a short time previous to the proposed Saturday meeting that I learned of this, and at once telephoned Provost Cosgrave, informing him that the meeting of students was unofficial and suggesting that he communicate with Mr. Clarke and request him not to attend. I personally met the students who had gathered and informed them that Mr. Clarke, at my request, would not be present and that such a meeting was irregularly called and that any action to be taken in the name of the students of this faculty should be through the official Dental Students' Parliament.

The Faculty Council has not considered the difference of opinion between Varsity and the dental students and my own feeling is that it is a question that can well be left to the University students themselves to deal with.

No apology has been requested by the Dean or any member of the Faculty of Dentistry."

NAUSEATING SMELLS

grinned devilishly at them from their front door. Monday, U.C., in vast, brown letters was painted on two or three places on the Meds' building and on S. P. S. Then S. P. S. fished the brass shingle off the Meds' front door.

After all these events, the climax was reached yesterday when U.C. men were holding their Literary and Athletic elections. In the dark night, danderine acid was thrust into the key-holes, the crevices, in fact through the very walls themselves. All day the horrible smell remained to the detriment of everyone in the venerable building. S.P.S. were probably planning to raid the U.C. Junior Common Room, but were forestalled by the arrival of the police who stood guard over the building.

U.C. Magazine

The current issue of the University College Magazine which will go on sale Monday, marks a considerable change in policy.

The periodical which will decorate the rotunda on Monday morning will be more in accord with the popular taste. Literary interests worth by no means be ignored, but an attempt will be made to recognize more fully the multifarious activities of the college's abounding life, particularly in the field of athletics, which have so far figured as much in those pages as in a paper for the permanently paralyzed. Writings of games and of sports generally, both male and female, are to be included; and there will be accompanied by photographs, a measure which necessitates a change in the texture of the paper used.

Manitoba students recently marched through the streets of Winnipeg to lay before Premier Bracken an undergraduate petition with fourteen hundred signatures, requesting new University buildings.

A film showing phases of Harvard undergraduate life, issued by the University Film Foundation, recently received its first showing at Harvard.

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE OFFERS EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY TO STUDENTS

In the past two years, The MacLean Publishing Company, Limited, Toronto, has grown tremendously. To-day it is one of the largest publishers of periodicals in the British Empire—due largely to its intensely Canadian attitude. The purpose of the founder of this Company, Lieutenant-Colonel John Bayne MacLean, is and always has been to develop Canada for Canadians.

The largest publication put out by this company is MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE. It is particularly devoted to informative articles by competent Canadians on Canadian affairs and current events, and that it is being appreciated is shown by the fact that in 1928 its circulation increased over 30,000 copies, and to-day exceeds the Canadian circulation of the largest United States magazine by about 22,000 copies; a fact of which Canadians might well be proud.

MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE feels it is fitting that students should enjoy the special opportunities of making money offered by a work so basically patriotic as the wider and more intensive distribution of the Magazine. It will not tolerate, however, sales based on any charity appeal—MACLEAN'S is sold on merit only. MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE has had a considerable experience during the past two or three years with students as salesmen. This experience has shown that university men can successfully sell MACLEAN'S on its merits. Several students earned over $1,600.00 during their summer vacation months.

This year MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE is offering a special arrangement to university men who desire to earn money during vacation. To men of the right type MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE will pay a weekly salary sufficient to live on comfortably, transportation expenses, and an especial liberal bonus on production. The contract offered to students requires them to produce full quota in order to draw their season's bonus; if they fail to do so by as much as one order they lose out on that particular bonus. The arrangement is exceptionally fair, however, as it is divided into five periods and every student may earn a bonus for one or more of the periods even though his production may not warrant payment of the bonus offered for the whole season.

Any student of this University who is interested in earning real money during the coming Summer, will be well advised to write the Student Sales Manager of MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE, 153 University Avenue, Toronto 2, Ontario, for full particulars.—Adv't.

PATENT MEDICINE IS NOW REMEDY OF EDUCATORS

"Daily Princetonian" Editorial
Condemns Fads in Colleges
As Jokes

UNIVERSITIES CROWDED

State Universities Forced to Expel Large Proportion
Each Year

"We are living in an age of patent-medicine remedies in the field of education," declares an editorial in "The Daily Princetonian" which has caused a good deal of comment in educational circles recently. "The various projects for achieving the millennium in our colleges are exceeded in number and absurdity only by the plans for world peace and brotherhood. Perhaps this is due to the fact that no one has offered a hundred thousand dollars for a prize-winning solution of collegiate problems. At any rate, the general consensus of opinion among the medicine men is that whatever is wrong with the colleges can be swiftly and thoroughly remedied by a plan. According to Professor Munro of Harvard, the only necessary qualification for an educational expert is that he be 'a glib fellow away from home.'"

"We find this type of fakery present in several violent forms. We have the abolitionists, who believe that the perfect college may be developed by abolishing football, fraternities, lectures, or examinations. As substitutes they offer intramural sports, social equality, intensive classroom work, and original research. Unfortunately these cure-alls have proved themselves effective only on paper. Then there are the vocationalists, who have carried their democratic dedication of 'working one's way through college' to the point of founding part-time institutions. By this novel method the best

CYNICAL YOUTHS ARE NOT NORMAL

So Says President Hopkins
At The Dartmouth
Exercises

CONTROVERSY RAGES

President Hopkins, at the opening exercises at Dartmouth, told his hearers that it is not a normal attitude of youth to be cynical, pessimistic, or misanthropic. "For youth to assume these is an affectation." An attitude out of character is always open to suspicion of being insincere. "One can cultivate cynicism, skepticism, or unbelief far easier than one can gain understanding."

Commenting, "The Boston Herald" said: "This is good stuff for college consumption. As President Hopkins noted, they appear often, too often, in the college press, and this, in his opinion, does not represent the mind of the average undergraduate body. Is all this a pose? Or is it a token of intellectual laziness?"

In extension, "The Dartmouth" declared editorially: "If the college man is cynical, perhaps it is because he is tired."

"We would make a distinction between the cynics. There is that man who wakes up on a gray, weary Monday morning with a headache to face an imposing pile of neglected academic

A Quality

St. Hilda's Literary Society held a meeting on Thursday, March 21st. Miss Cartwright announced that the sophomores had won the dramatic cup for the year by their presentation of "The Well of the Saints" by J. M. Synge. She also commended the presentations of the other years highly. The final year debate "resolved that the stigma of mutability thrown upon woman is her highest attribute", followed. The fourth year represented by Misses Johnson and Wegenast, upheld the affirmative vigorously, the first year, led by Misses Hedley and Ingles opposed the motion.

They were followed by vigorous speeches from both sides of the house which invoked historical examples and original verse in support of their arguments.

The division of the house gave the first year a decided majority.

BEST GAME OF SEASON

To-night at the Arena Gardens Varsity will take the ice against St. Francis Xaviers, the Quebec champions, in the second game for the senior hockey title of Eastern Canada.

The Blue are facing a four-goal deficit as a result of their defeat in Montreal on Wednesday night when they lost to the Saints 5-1. The winners of this series with goals on the round counting, will travel to Winnipeg to take on the Western Canada champions for the Allan Cup and the Canadian Championship.

Although Red Porter's men are in a tough position chances are more than good that they will come through and take the game and the round. The Blue and White lost to Ottawa Shamrocks here by 3-1 and then defeated them 3-0 on their own ice.

In Wednesday night's game the score was tied 1-1 at the end of the second period, but following a disputed goal awarded to St. Francis, the Quebec team ran in three goals to pile up a commanding lead for their visit to Toronto.

Varsity will doubtless play a better brand of hockey to-night. The Blue had completed a strenuous pair of games with Ottawa and with a short rest stacked up with the Quebec champions. The efforts of the Ottawa series were in evidence on Wednesday and the comparatively small ice surface at the Mount Royal Arena seemed to bother the speedy Toronto sextette.

Barring Murray, who is ill, the Blue will use the same team that won the O.H.A. championship. Brant and Hetherington will likely assist Marshall in the relief work. With the exception of minor cuts and bruises Porter's men are in pretty good shape. Marshall got a nasty smash on the nose in the last game when Igroquois Falls which put him off his game to some extent.

Considering everything, to-night's game should be by far and away the best of the season. Varsity will have to open up with everything and carry the play to the Easteners. If they can get the jump on their opponents the Blue should make up the deficit.

"The Varsity"

The following is the official resume of business transacted at meetings of the Joint Executive of the S.A.C. held on the 15th and 19th of March respectively:

"A deputation from the Faculty of Dentistry headed by Dr. Somerville, President of the Dental Parliament, was present at the meeting and presented their views concerning the Dramatic Editor's write-up of the Dentists' performance. They claimed that the criticism should not have been published and they demanded a personal apology from the Editor-in-Chief to the student body and that he print a similar apology in the pages of "The Varsity".

"After thoroughly discussing the matter the following motion was unanimously carried:—

"That the delegation from the Faculty of Dentistry be informed that the Editor-in-Chief has expressed his willingness to publish in the next issue of "The Varsity" a statement to the effect that the criticism of the Dentists' performance was only the personal view of the Dramatic critic and that no insult was intended to the Faculty of Dentistry, and he regrets very much if it has been taken in such a light. The Joint Executive, after careful investigation, feels that this is sufficient to meet a regrettable situation.

"When Mr. Somerville in answer to a question was informed that this was not in the nature of a personal apology, he read to the meeting the following, which was later officially received in writing:—

1. That the Dental Students' Parliament refuse any future editions of "The Varsity".
2. That the Dental Students' Parliament immediately proceed to

Gilda Gray Hates Golf and Thinks That College Boys Are Just Great

"Frankly, I hate golf," declared Gilda Gray, well-known movie star and shimmy artist, when interviewed yesterday by a "Harvard Crimson" reporter. "I get plenty of exercise doing my little act on the stage."

"I think college boys on the whole are just great," continued Miss Gray, "and as for Harvard men—Hot dogs! Don't they have simply wonderful football teams there! I often go to the Harvard-Yale game, and I cheer for Harvard, too. I've always wanted to run down onto the field and carry the pigskin through that line of Blue myself. I bet I could shake off those tacklers!"

"The thing I like most about college boys and girls is their pep, which seems perfectly endless. The older generation—mind you, I'm not including myself—ought to feel sorry for all that they're losing."

"Still, I never went to college myself, and I don't regret it. I never went beyond the fourth grade, and they had to burn the school down to get me out then!"

WALTZ AND FOX-TROT

"Honeyboy" Draws Crowds by Catchy Music And Dances

To the moan and blare of flippant jazz a musical comedy braced its way into Hart House Theatre this week. It was the first of its kind to enter through the dignified portals and as such is almost entirely fostered and produced by undergraduates. The book of "Honey Boy" is by a second year student of U.C., Howard Lindsay, the music and lyrics by Maureen O'Mara, a fresquette at Trinity. The entire cast is, with one or two exceptions, entirely composed of university students. The dancing chorus, a much lauded and an extremely important factor in the show, has been recruited from the undergraduate body.

The plot of "Honey Boy" is concerned with one John Rudolph Honeyboy, an eminent author, who, in the first scene, is discovered in the country house of a friend where he has secluded himself to work on his new novel. To accomplish this and to be freed from the bother of publicity, his cousin, Laddie Honeyboy, impersonates him. But hardly had he set himself to the deception when the disturbing factor appears in the person of a scheming actress who has engineered a motor accident nearby so that she may compromise the author. The first scene is brought to a close with the arrival of Laddie's fiancée.

The second scene, laid in the garden of the estate discloses further complications when Laddie serenades the actress thinking she was his betrothed and is discovered caught in the trellis of the balcony by his fiancée.

The first scene of the second act takes place in a night club where matters become still more complicated when Laddie is accused of murdering John Rudolph Honeyboy. However, things are finally untangled and all tion even outside of university circles.

KEEN OBSERVATION BASIS HARDY'S ART

Professor MacDonald Finds That Hardy Was Young
In Spirit

FIRST STORY A FAILURE

"Although some people may not agree with me," said Professor MacDonald, at yesterday's lecture on Hardy, "I think that the basis of Hardy's art is his keen observation and his keener sense of hearing." Hardy was continually seeing, hearing and understanding. These senses of his were much more strongly developed than Wordsworth's.

Hardy had the sound training of an architect and he was better able to criticise form and structure. "It is very hard to realize," Professor MacDonald continued, "that some of Hardy's novels date back fifty years. Hardy's spirit was so young and his writings so new that it is very amazing to think that Hardy lived in the Victorian era. When Hardy was quite young the controversy between science and religion was at its height. Hardy, naturally curious, finally sided with the scientists."

Hardy's first story was not a success but his later ones brought him in a generous income and he now turned to writing poetry. His novels have been divided into three classes. The first has ingenuity and predominance of plot. The second group is the fantasies and novels and the third the ones with the characters outstanding. "Critics have objected to the inevitable tragedy in Hardy's works," said Professor MacDonald, "but it is not Professor MacDonald, but it is not Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet'."

Hardy did not use it as a device to have an unhappy ending. His novels are not filled up with pessimism but have a wide spread interest and the actual reality of life as Hardy sees it is portrayed there. In all his plays you feel the sincerity of a man who has been perplexed and not deluded by life.

Hardy himself was not the pessimist people think him. On the contrary he was a man whose attitude to life was happy and pleasant. He became sad when he saw the terrible conditions around him, and his philosophy of life was sad. It was that the power that sits about our world is unconscious of our ends. His fundamental idea for this was that the power must be unconscious. Of things on earth or else it would certainly alleviate the unhappiness on earth.

In closing Professor MacDonald stated that Hardy was a great writer when he could rank with Dickens, Scott, and Shakespeare, but above this he was a greater man.

QUOTES LETTER

Sir Bertram Intended Bequest
To Be Used As An Experiment

Much discussion has been provided by the publication recently of the will of the late Sir Bertram Windle who, before his death was Professor of Anthropology at St. Michael's College and the University of Toronto. There are many who feel that Sir Bertram was influenced by an ingrained animosity towards Irish Catholics, the result of his associations with the Sinn Féin previous to his coming to Toronto, and it was this which prompted him to stipulate certain racial restrictions in connection with the scholarships which in his will, he set up for the benefit of Catholic students.

Various faculty members of St. Michael's College, one of whom was one of the late Sir Bertram's closest friends, have made statements discrediting the above impression.

"The initial clause of his will which was a beautiful and charitable thought, should have satisfied everyone on this point," Father Carr stated, "Should further proof be necessary, I have been authorized to give for publication a letter which Sir Bertram wrote to the Father Superior and marked 'not to be opened until after my death.'"

"Sir Bertram was too big a man to

GLAZING IMPORTANT

"From the pottery of pre-dynastic Egypt to the modern Wedgworth were encompasses a period of from seven thousand to eight thousand years in the history of man, yet the fundamental principle remains basically the same," stated Miss Ruth M. Home, opening her lecture on "Mediterranean Pottery" last Tuesday afternoon in the Ontario Museum. "Pots were at first moulded in the shape of gourds, but they assumed more definite forms after the invention of the potter's wheel."

Miss Home then described the process of preparing the clay and shaping it on the wheel. "However," she continued, "the pots became rancid owing to their porosity, and this difficulty remained unsurmounted until the great discovery of glass which revolutionized the entire industry of pottery. The first use to which the new commodity was put was to make a glaze, a thin layer of liquid glass applied as a wash over the entire surface of the pot. Eventually the potter mixed copper with the wash and resulted in a beautiful blue glaze which was used as a covering for amulets. These took the place of the more costly turquoise and were equally efficacious in diverting the evil eye."

Miss Home continued by describing Persian, Turkish, Caucasian and Italian pottery and lustreware, and in conclusion exhibited the various examples of pots.

OUR VIEWPOINT

We have been asked to define our position with regards to the recent complaint of the Faculty of Dentistry, who claimed that the criticism which we carried of their annual production was out of place, and who therefore demanded a double apology. While feeling that such a demand was absolutely unwarranted, and that a dramatic Editor should be free to give his opinions of a show in the dramatic columns, we wish to make the following points clear. In the first place, we find it necessary to deny that this critique was "a malicious attack on this faculty". We admit having occasionally experienced a desire to "maliciously attack" our particular dentist, but would point out that this was an emotion produced by the circumstances of the moment, and not a definite policy affecting this paper.

In the second place, it seems necessary to point out the rather obvious fact that when a critic publishes a review of a production, and duly initials it, this review is, after all, only the opinion of that particular reviewer, and does not necessarily imply that it is the opinion of the whole audience in general, or the promoters of the show in particular. It is not an unheard of occurrence for the promoters and the dramatic reviewers to differ as to the quality of a production.

Whatever the merits of the case, we regret very much that the article should have been the cause of ill-feeling on the part of the Dental Faculty.

A RETROSPECT

It is customary in this, the final issue of the year, for Editorial columns to overflow with expressions such as "as we pick up the Editorial pen for this, the last time", and "gazing on the past term in retrospect", and so on for the necessary six hundred words.

Unfortunately we must break with such ancient traditions for many reasons. In the first place our Editorial "pen" is a typewriter, and as such is too mundane a thing to mention. In the second place, the retrospect from our particular Editorial chair would cover a period of certainly not more than some sixteen issues, which is a period of time hardly worth retrospecting.

However, as this has been one of the most tempestuous years ever experienced by "The Varsity", it is impossible to ignore the past. Whatever may have been the harmful effects of this tempest, it solved for this year, at any rate, the problem of getting the paper read by the average undergraduate, which is indeed an accomplishment. From this aspect at any rate, the year has been a successful one.

Art, Music and Drama

"Honeyboy"

The promoters of "Honey Boy", the original musical comedy presented this week at Hart House Theatre, by R. Howard Lindsay, have done a plucky thing. To produce a musical comedy under any circumstances necessitates having the courage of one's convictions, and doubly so under the conditions which naturally surround a production of this kind. But what is still more remarkable when one considers similar attempts, is that "Honey Boy" is worth the faith and effort which undoubtedly went into it.

That good hard effort was behind the show was evident from the smoothness with which everything went off, and no type of production reveals in such a glaring manner lack of finish as a musical comedy, where the slightest slackness results in a jostling chorus, or a vocal solo, saw singer. Apropos, the chorus work was one of the highlights of the production, due as much to the absence of the customary hard looking "moths of Broadway" as to the precision of the dancing.

The plot, (professional cries of "a plot in a musical comedy? How naive!") revolves around a too popular author of love fiction (Mr. F. J. Mallett) who, in order to get a rest from his public, transfers his identity to his young cousin, (Mr. Warren Harvey). The resultant mix-ups which occur in the affairs of this young man, particularly in regards to his fiancée (Miss Jane Mason), affords material for a very good evening's entertainment.

The lyrics and music by Miss Maureen O'Mara contained the necessary tilt, and were not difficult enough to embarrass the singing chorus.

Featured as a genuine undergraduate musical comedy, this production would probably compete with any show of its kind now on the Canadian road. Canadian towns have certainly been infected with worse. W.S.

H. C. Players' Guild

The Guild brought its season to a close on Wednesday afternoon with a presentation of two original skits. The first of these, written by Paul Gardner, depicted a scene in the crowded hearth of Brigham Young and was one of the best examples of this type of skit that this writer has witnessed. The author has a decided flair for crisp, pungent dialogue; the wit polished and the skit was in all ways successful, so much so that the material begged the occasion in that it contained the substance of an excellent one-act farce.

The second offering, a burlesque of Laura Secord's famous trip is best described as hilarious. The humour was boisterous, the situations ludicrous and the entire show played with a carefree, joyful verve. The skit was clever not only in its conception but in dialogue. It was a compact, salubrious caricature and it as well as the first skit, deserved a much larger audience than it drew.

Montreal, March 20—It was learned at Canadian Pacific headquarters here to-day that the decision of the Canadian Government to abolish the revenue tax on steamship tickets has inspired the company to make further reductions in the cost of round-trip cabin fare on the Atlantic. It is understood that the official announcement will show reductions of upwards of thirty dollars. These reductions will bring one-way fares down to the level of several years ago and render it unnecessary for Canadian to deny themselves the privilege of the full run of the ships. One of the vessels of the type of the "Montrose", "Montclare", fares will be as low as $135, and re-adjustment should be a great stimulus to cabin-class traffic on the St. Lawrence route. The reductions will not be in effect between May 16 and August 15.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-night's game between St. Francois Xavier and Varsity should provide a brand of hockey of the days of the Granites-Soo-Hamilton Tigers epics. The Blue are down four goals and will have to step on it to take the round and the right to represent the East in the Allan Cup finals at Winnipeg next week. "Red" Porter's men have the ability to turn the trick. They are a fast, tricky squad and their victory over the Shamrocks in Ottawa prove they have the old fighting spirit. If the easterners are in form to-night's game should be a thriller. It should be a battle from start to finish.

* * * *

Hockey fans will remember the series played by Varsity Grads and St. Francois Xaviers two years ago. St. Francois held the Grads to a 1-1 tie in Montreal but the Grads walked away from them up here, winning the round by about seven goals.

* * * *

This year the St. Francois played as an intermediate team in the O.A.H.A. They pulled a considerable surprise by defeating Montreal Vics, last year's Allan Cup finalists, in the Quebec play-offs. Although ranked as intermediates the Xaviers are a good senior team. Their line-up contains many experienced players with a goodly proportion of those to whom the Grads showed a few tricks two years ago. Baril at right wing starred for Selkirks in the Soo-Selkirk Allan Cup finals played in Toronto in '24. Brunet, their flashy defence player who wears "specs", is said to have received numerous offers to turn pro. The Xaviers are a colorful aggregation who should set a fast pace.

* * * *

The following is the list of the Intercollegiate Championships for the season of 1928-29: Rugby, senior, McGill; intermediate, Loyola; junior, Queen's. Soccer, McGill. Tennis, University of Toronto. Harrier, R.M.C. Track, senior, McGill; intermediate, University of Toronto. English rugby, McGill. Golf, University of Toronto. Hockey, senior, University of Toronto; intermediate, University of Toronto. Basketball, senior, University of Toronto. Boxing, wrestling and fencing, University of Toronto. Water-Polo, University of Toronto. Gymnasium, McGill.

* * * *

The above speak for themselves. However, we hope that several institutions of higher learning will not feel hurt if it is pointed out that Varsity won the Intercollegiate Senior Hockey Championship for the tenth consecutive year.

Breast Stroke—1 M. MacDonald, U.C., 19 3-5; 2 E. Hamby, U.C., 20 2-5; 3 N. Slater, St. H., 21 1-5.

Semi-Finals

BLUES PLAYED ON DEFENCE

On Wednesday evening the Varsity hockey team, champions of all Ontario, were defeated in Montreal by the Quebec champions, St. Francois Xavier 5-1 in the first of their home and home games of the Allan Cup semi-finals. Thus Varsity is facing a four goal deficit in the return game at Mutual St. to-night.

The score was 1-1 at the end of the second period and the Saints piled up their margin in the last stanza. Brunet scored from the side on a shot that was protested but allowed and soon after Pedneault netted the puck to make it 3-1. When Marshall and Ahearn were resting for bumping each other, Brunet scored again and the Saints got their last counter playing five men to four with Harley and Marshall off.

Varsity got their goal near the end of the second period when Hetherington, a junior, batted in Whitehead's rebound.

The Blue played a defensive game and it was only when they faded in the closing moments of the game that

Woods and Scandiffo Are Hart House Racquetuers

Two members of Hart House, J. F. Woods and N. F. Scandiffo, represented Hart House at the Canadian Squash Racquets Championships held at Montreal. Mr. Woods reached the second round and Mr. Scandiffo won the Consolation Match. The latter match is almost as interesting as the Championship since all who were knocked out in the first round take part. It is interesting to note that Hart House has been represented in the final of the Consolation Match for the past three years.

The number of members of Hart House playing squash racquets is increasing every year. This year, as usual, two tournaments have been held. Of these the individual tournament was won by J. F. Woods. The interfaculty tournament has not yet been finished but it will be decided by next Wednesday.

The Montreals showed up to any real advantage. Whitehead's and Paul's rushes were constant threats and Hetherington certainly justified his inclusion in the line-up.

O.A.C. AND MEDS TEAMS MEET TO-NIGHT SEMI-FINAL

Winners Meet St. Mike's In Baseball Final Contest

This afternoon at 4 o'clock O.A.C. and junior Meds meet in the semi-finals for the interfaculty basketball championship. The basketball executive had upheld Pharmacy's protest of the game with junior Meds. Pharmacy entered the second round and defeated O.A.C. in home-and-home games. Now the Athletic Directorate has reversed the decision of the executive and as a result junior Meds will get a crack at the Aggies.

While there was little to choose O.A.C. was swamped by the Drug-between Pharmacy and the Meds. From this dope it looks like another defeat for the Aggies at the hands of a U. of T. interfaculty quintette. But O.A.C. seem unbeatable on their own floor and should they be able to hold the Meds here this afternoon they might turn the trick. The winners of this series meets St. Michael's College in the final.

The Saints have a smooth working five who play a heady game of basketball. Possession of the ball is all important with them and it is their ability to hold the sphere and wait for an opening that makes them an especially dangerous team. They are an experienced aggregation and will provide stern opposition for any team. The final matches will be staged Monday and Tuesday of next week and they will be games worth seeing.

FORUMS A FEATURE

The Student Christian Association has now completed its programme for the present session and reports a successful year. The main features of its programme have been the weekly series of addresses for men in Hart House and for women in the Women's Union.
Also the Open Forum in Wymliwood for both men and women. These weekly addresses have been on subjects of importance and interest to all students, and they have been well attended throughout. In the Study Groups a wide variety of subjects has been discussed, and between three and four hundred men and women have been in the groups this year. Several famous people have been brought to the University by the S.C.A. during the winter, namely, Dr. W. R. Malby of England, Bishop Stringer of the Yukon, Professor Nathaniel Micklem
Dr. Stanley Jones of India, Dr. David Yui of China, Mr. C. F. Andrews of India and Dr. Gilkey of Chicago.

The Executives of the Association would like to make it widely known that the S.C.A. was founded by students themselves an exists for the promotion of fellowship amongst students and a common pursuit of truth.
It is open to any and every student who is interested in its aims and purposes.

The following motion was also pasthe Dentists incident following the lines set forth in the motion which was read to the deputation from Dentistry at the last meeting.

Montreal, Feb. 25—$1,200 for a twenty-dollar gold piece. This was the price obtained by L. Norris of Vancouver for a coin in his possession shipped by Canadian Pacific Express Company to F. B. Jacques, of Sounthorpe, Lancashire, England. The fact was discovered when the Canadian Customs had their curiosity aroused when Mr. Norris insured his gold piece for $1,000. He was asked why such an extraordinary spread in the face value of the coin and the amount of his insurance. His reply was as follows:

In 1862 when the Government had a gold rush in the Cariboo district of British Columbia on their hands, it was thought advisable to build a mint in that section where the gold could be immediately struck into coins. But the venture was found to be too expensive and only seven gold twenty-dollar pieces were issued. These coins are therefore exceedingly rare and
Mr. Norris possesses several of them.
Numismatists all over the world got after them, and he has already sold one for $1,200 and hopes to get that much and perhaps more for the one he is now shipping. Hence the heavy insurance.

The coin went to England by Canadian Pacific S.S. Montclare on its last sailing.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH

"The Canadian Student", a brave
"venturer in opinion" as its sub-title announces, is the one and only national magazine of the Canadian University Students. Although published at 76 Avenue Rd., under the auspices of the Students' Christian Movement, this periodical shows surprisingly little religious bias and carries articles covering the most diverse interests. In this attitude it best represents the spirit of attitude it best represents the spirit of dom of expression to every shade of opinion.

In 1917, when the S.C.M. was a department of the Y.M.C.A., this student monthly was founded, but its present form and organization dates from 1923 under the editorial guidance of Mr. Davidson Ketchum.
"One of the features of this year's edition, has been the black and white drawing in each issue," said the Rev.
F. J. Moore, padre of Hart House, in speaking of his administration since he assumed the chairmanship of the editorial board, last October.

Many articles are contributed by members of the "Varsity" staff. Miss Shelda M. Henderson, T. J. Keenan and Oscar Abramowitz all appear in the February issue. Nathaniel A.
Benson has contributed to several issues. Miss Lois E. Girvan wrote for the "Student" in a previous year. Del Beamish contributed an article but it has not yet been published.

Circulation is not easily built up by the "Student" as it reaches the climax of its popularity about this time of the year when not only is everyone too broke to pay the dollar for the subscription, but also there are only a few more issues in the session. The editorial board, which includes many undergraduates, hopes that this year's achievement will be reflected in next year's increased circulation.

Mr. J. Donald Adams, Student Sales Manager for MacLean's Magazine, interviewed Varsity men again on Friday, March 22nd. The Alumni Association have placed Room 3 of their building at 43 St. George Street at his disposal where he will be from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday to interview men interested in employment this summer.

MacLean's unusual growth in the past year provides an exceptional opportunity to Varsity men to make money in a work essentially Canadian.
So successful were the students with MacLean's last summer that a big student campaign is under way in the leading universities throughout the Dominion. Men interested should see Mr.
Adams either Friday at Varsity, 43
St. George St., or Saturday morning at The MacLean Publishing Co., Ltd., 153 University Avenue.

Apple Pie And Cheese

Editor of "The Varsity".
Dear Sir,—

On several occasions I noticed that Mr. Gillies would welcome constructive criticism. Therefore I dropped into his office with some such criticism regarding Hart House meals. The criticism was apparently well received but seeing that no action has been taken on it I think that this letter might be in order.

On occasion apple pie has been known to have been served. On still other occasions cheese has also been served. Yet not once in all the meals I've eaten at Hart House, have apple pie and cheese been served together. You know the old saying about apple pie without cheese is very similar to osculation minus the embrace.

Personally I think that if apple pie is to be served, and if cheese is also to be served, why not serve both at once? I'm sure it would not disrupt the routine work of those responsible for the menus for such a venture to be undertaken.

Admittedly this is a very minor criticism but I think that hundreds of Hart House meals would become more agreeable to the palate. In addition the suggestion if acted upon would not involve additional expense for the meals.

Yours etc. plus,
JeWell.

P.S.—I hate pineapple pie with cheese.—J.

Toronto Has Turned Gregg

Five years ago John R. Gregg, the author and publisher of Gregg Shorthand, chose Toronto in which to establish his model school.

It is a distinctive sign of superiority to state that Gregg College has already grown to be the largest school of its kind in Canada east of Winnipeg.

The school that is so widely accepted must have features not commonly found in like institutions. It merits your consideration. Telephone Kingsdale 5588 to learn about special facilities offered University students during summer months.

Student Conference at Elgin House

Muskoka in the early autumn (Sept. 11-19), congenial friends (students from McGill, Queen's and Western Universities), outstanding leaders, a holiday in the best sense of the word, all this and more you would find if you come to the Elgin House Conference.

Every year the Student Christian Movement of Canada organizes an Eastern, Western, and Central area Student Conference, this latter for Ontario and Quebec students. Elgin House since 1921 has been the scene of this central conference and hundreds of students have been there some time during their college course.

The object of the conference is to provide an opportunity for students to seek to discover the meaning of life and how best to live it. At the end they realize more deeply their place and purpose in the world to-day.

Special mention should be made of the many fraternal delegates who come from student movements in other countries. They make it possible for us to realize the wide scope of student fellowship.

This year the list of elders includes Dr. Herbert Gray, well-known preacher and author, and outstanding leader in the British student movement, Dr. Bruce Curry of New York, already known to many Toronto and Canadian students through his visits to us two years ago. His books "Facing Student Problems" and "Jesus and His Cause" are widely used in student groups in the States. It is also hoped that Rabbi Isserman, Dr. Rose of Poland, Dr. D. McLeod of Formosa, Dr. Ernest Thomas, and Dr. John Linc will be there.

For registration blanks and further information apply at the S.C.A. office either in Hart House or the Household Science Building.

SIR BERTRAM WINDLE HAD HIGHEST MOTIVES harbor envy or malice against anyone. "He had certain ideas, certain ideals, he was a student of human nature, but why say more."

The letter is as follows:
Dear Fr. Superior: Lest there should be any mistake as to the intentions of my will after my death, and I know that there are plenty of people ready to misrepresent one, I wish to state that when restricting my scholarships—for a time to English and French-Canadian candidates, I am in no kind of way reflecting on other nationalities.

What I want to do for the good of the church, and of the college is to attract to the latter those students whom I think likely to turn into men useful for the former if they receive a first-rate education, as they will do at St. Michael's.

I want this experiment tried out for ten years. If it works well, all right; if it does not, then change it and try out another experiment for another ten years. But the two classes mentioned above must never be excluded, i.e., you can add, but you cannot subtract.

What I want to do is to benefit the church and the college, both of which I love with all my heart. You can make any use you choose of this letter. Please remember in your prayers (Sgd.) Bertram C. A. Windle.

With the Theatres

UPTOWN

The programme at the Uptown this week is rather unusual and enjoyable. "Submarine" starring Jack Holt, is quite a new type of moving picture. Its chief interest lies in the scene where the men of S-44 are entombed alive on the sea floor. Magnificent photography makes the picture stand out as unique. The Hollywood touch, though, is evident in two or three instances. When the men finally receive air from a deep-sea diver, one feels an immense relief.

Jack Arthur's "Wedgewood" starring Virgine Maurer and Mara Tchońska is the best bit of Grecian aesthetic dancing seen here this season.

Raymond Griffith in a splendid "talkie" and a good newsreel complete the bill.

SHEA'S

Another example of the havoc an enthusiastic producer can wreak on the plot of a well written story is listed this week in "True Heaven" at Shea's. Enough incriminating evidence is found in the course of the picture to make it certain that the film is based on one of C. E. Montague's new stories in "Action", but the basic details, and the whole motif of the drama has been changed. Nevertheless it is an entertaining matter to watch the story for an hour, even though the final crisis might test the faith of even the most guileless movie fan. The hero of the piece, George O'Brien, discovered as a spy in Germany by his erstwhile girl-friend, Lois Moran, who, in reality a German spy, has been masquerading behind the French lines, is betrayed by the girl, and stood up in front of a brick wall and a firing squad. After a long-drawn out sequence of the squad going through the various motions of their painful duty, and of, Lois Moran who should never leave, "cutie" roles, emoting and repeating her rash betrayal, the guns are lifted, and—but the wires suddenly tap out the magic word "Armistice", and there is time for some one to rush out and stay the bullet's course, and further the cause of true love. Personally we felt reasonably certain that after toying with the trigger for fifteen minutes, the very sound of the word "Armistice" would cause the squad to pull them in sheer nervous excitement. But it's a good yarn, and George O'Brien contributes a realistic bit of acting as the betrayed soldier. The vaudeville, which is always the major attraction at this theatre, ran true to type. The programme which headlines Roscoe Ails, is good entertainment.

TWINS ARE USED NOW TO TEST ENVIRONMENT

University of Chicago Professor Tries Out Heredity
Also

The first phase of a unique psychological experiment has just been completed by Professor Horatio H. Newman of the University of Chicago, in an effort to prove that environment is the major factor in the moulding of a child's intelligence, and that heredity has an equally strong effect upon the emotions. Professor Newman uses as his subjects a pair of identical twins, and before pronouncing his results definitely, he proposes to experiment upon five such pairs.

The first pair of twins, the ones which were the subjects of the present investigation, are sisters of about 20 years of age. Born in London of English parents, they were separated at the age of 18 months and lived apart for 17 years.

One of the sisters, whose names are undivulged, was adopted in babyhood by relatives who moved to a small town in Ontario. The other, adopted by friends of the family, lived in the Chelsea district of London until a year ago, when she came to Ontario to join her sister.

The twins were given a wide variety of tests, which proved that the one reared in Ontario was much superior in intelligence, the difference in the mental ages of the girls being the unusually large figures of 23 months. This is nearly three times as great as the average for identical twins reared together. On the basis of other standards, the Ontario girl was also found to be superior to her English twin.

Next President

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Historical Club was celebrated at the club's annual dinner held this week, bringing to mind its founding in 1904 by Professor Wrong.

Dean P. E. Corbett, head of the Faculty of Law at McGill, was the speaker of the evening. Dean Corbett, who is the author of "Canada in World Politics", is at present giving a series of addresses on International Law at Osgoode. Speaking on the relations between Canada, Great Britain, and the United States, he outlined the latest developments in the arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States, and described the Department of External Affairs at Ottawa.

At a previous meeting of the club, Mr. L. M. Gelber, III U.C., was elected President for 1929-30.

When It Comes To Gloves---

We have insisted on the correct colors—and the most fashionable designs, at each price.

At 98c.

The finest woven Simplex fabrics—that retain their shape and lovely finish in spite of many washings. Specially cut to fit the hand in all sizes and reinforced at all points of wear. The Pull-On gauntlet or the dome style are both smart for all daytime occasions and may be had plain or stitched.

White, Grey, Buff, Mode, Cocoa and Almond.

At
$2.95

Fine French Kid Gloves or tailored washable suede by Perrin and Trefousse. The very mention of their names signifies perfection in the art of glove making the world over.

The tailored cuffs in Kid Gloves and the smart gauntlets in wash suede have been chosen because gloves now should not attract attention to themselves but should complete the harmony of the costume.

The new Sun-Tan shades catch the newest hosiery colors—grey for the navy and bright blues and smart color combinations of beige and brown—navy and white and black and white for Spring's chic ensembles.

IN THE EVANGELINE SHOPS THE CORRECT FASHIONS ARE AVAILABLE AT EACH PRICE.

VISITORS' DAY HART HOUSE

As the last Sunday of the month is Easter Day, Sunday 24th
March, will be Visitors' Day.
The last Visitors' Day for this term will be on Sunday, 28th April.

Regina, Sask., March 21—With a fanfare of trumpets by men of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the great Western Canadian Folk-song, Folk-dance and Handicrafts Show opened to-day. Under the patronage of His Honour the Lieut-Governor of Saskatchewan and the premier of the province, the exhibition of handicrafts of 18 racial groups now resident in Western Canada was thrown open for public inspection, and to-night in the splendid Drake Memorial Hall of the Regina College, folk songs and folk dances of the peoples of the British Isles, with Charles Marchand, the famous French-Canadian folk singer and Selma Johanson de Coster, the Swedish nightingale now resident in Boston were given.

The charming group of young girls danced the national dance of Wales, while English folk songs arranged by Vaughan Williams, were beautifully sung by a church choir of 50 voices.
The triumphs of the evening were shared by Miss de Coster, who in the dress of a belle of one of the northern Swedish provinces, sang two typical songs of the young girl at her work, and an arrangement of an old folk tune from the Vermland country in its praise. Miss de Coster is a warm voiced soprano with a great range and the quality of her lower tones is particularly satisfying.

Charles Marchand and Louis Bedard were their usual amusing and entertaining selves and the great audience called for encores which on account of the length of the program is not permitted. Local lasses danced the sword dances of Scotland, Welsh and English dances, and the Regina College folk dancers gave beautiful and rhythmic interpretations of the English folk dances as resurrected by Cecil Sharpe and his workers in the old country.

A pretty colleen of Regina gave a pretty performance of a pretty girl milking her cows and typical tales of the doings of the fairies, while two Irish girls from Milwaukee danced in lively style three of the most famous Irish dances.

To-night the songs and dances of the Roumanian, Czechs, Jugo-Slavs, will be done by residents of Regina, with a touch of Scotch, English and Scandinavian dance and music and an old time Red River jig.

Poul Bai will be the outstanding feature in a group of Viking songs in costume.

As Subtle Spider Slyly Snares So Cute But Cunning Gypsy Gyps

(By E. R. Toll)

Madame Mysta sat in her shop door and waited. It was a dingy little shop—in half the window a huge palmyrist chart—the other half a faded velvet curtain. But there was nothing dingy about Madame Mysta: red bandana head-piece, huge brass earrings which jangled at the least movement, ample yellow and scarlet waist and skirt covering all but the toes of her gaudy crimson and gold slippers. The fortune-telling business was not so brisk this sunny March afternoon. That was why Madame Mysta sat in her shop door.

And still the crowd surged by. Rich and poor, old and young, sad and gay. Some hurried—some loitered. Some passed briskly by—some paused to glance at the cryptic chart or the all-knowing gypsy in the doorway shadows. But none entered. And still Madame Mysta sat in her shop door and waited.

Suddenly she became all alert. Prospects. Two young men had stopped to gaze at the palmyrist chart, and were laughing in that superior way, peculiar to men from the nearby college. She moved slightly. The taller of the two looked up, met her subtle smile, then quickly dropped his eyes and moved on. His companion followed. But Madame Mysta still smiled. They would be back.

Leaning forward, she could see when they stopped three stores down. Now they were talking the matter over. She knew. Now they were coming back.
"Not College to-day afternoon?" was her opening remark as they entered.
Both started. The taller was the first to recover.

"But how—?" he began doubtfully.
"O I know college-man—yes. Magic. Fortunes told, eh?"
Both nodded—bewildered—shy—as most college men usually are. And each gallantly stepped aside for the other to enter the little curtained-off back room—first.

Madame Mysta nodded to the taller. "Come." Then turning to the other: "Wait here. You next."

Twenty minutes later, two much enlightened young men left the shop of Madame Mysta the fortune-teller. The taller spoke first:

"Cute woman eh Hap? But all her chatter just amounts to this: 'You sure are going to have good luck! But cute! smart! why—'"

"Tell me Mac, how much did she soak you?" cut in the shorter.

"Two bits. Told her that was all I had. I was just a little too smart for her. Now I suppose you paid . . ."

"Two dollars."

"What the—!"
"Told me she could turn a two into a fiver. I bet her she couldn't. I won but she kept my two-spot."

"Well, you are dumb!" roared the taller. "Just wait till I tell the bunch!" Say, by the way, I wonder—"

His hand shot suddenly to his watch pocket. His face went white.

LIBERAL CLUB DINNER

The last meeting of the U. of T. Liberal Club for the year will take the form of a dinner in Hart House, next Tuesday, March 26th, at 6.15 p.m. Elections for next year's executive will be held. Tickets should be procured immediately from the members of the executive.

LECTURE RECITAL

Dr. E. C. MacMillan, Principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music,

K.C.U.A. ELECTION RESULTS ANNOUNCED

At the annual elections held yesterday by the Knox college undergraduates' society, Louis H. Fowler was chosen president by acclamation. Others elected were: Hon. pres., Rev. Prof. E. Lloyd Morrow; vice-pres., J. F. Glen; sec., Allan Wilson; treas., W. A. D. Barclay; convenors, house committee, John Kelman; athletic Allan Stewart; program and worship, J. L. Veneta.

Arrangements have been made for a series of recitals on the Carillon of the Soldiers' Tower from 4 to 5 p.m. every Sunday afternoon after Easter with the exception of April 21st, by Mr. J. Skillicorn.

"Look here Hap, I've half a notion to go back. We could run that gypsy out by the neck."

And back in her shop door Madame Mysta sat and waited. They wouldn't be back. Not even when they discovered their fountain-pens were gone as well. All this Madame Mysta knew. So she smiled as she sat in the doorway and waited, smiled as she watched the surging crowds pass to and fro before her dingy shop.

work, and who turns the bitterness of his tired soul toward the neglected requirements of the college routine instead of toward the hectic pleasure-seeking of the preceding week-end.
"And there is that other man who, if he wants to, can sit all of a sunny afternoon smiling at the painted hill-sides and gazing with a mellow unconcern at all the busy side shows of College and of Life.

"This latter, this philosophic cynic, is a rare and fortunate person. But the former, the sophomoric cynic, is the common breed, whose callow bitterness draws merited reproval from the mellow minds of older generations. He is full of delusions of disillusionment.

"It is no new thing to complain of the hectic 'busy-ness' of the modern campus, with its manifold engrossing 'activities' which devour the hours of the collegiate day. Yet just this may quite conceivably be at the root of the present childish worship of the God of Disillusionment. The current wave of undergraduate cynicism has been blamed on the War, but it is far too remote to be rightly attributed to that. It is more likely because the blue-Monday cynic vaguely feels that he is not getting out of college just what he might."
